Nothing ever changes because of worrying because there is no real action associated with worrying that could impact the outcome of the issue at hand.

It is much like a rocking chair; it gives you something to do, but it won't get you anywhere.

Worry is a form of mental distress caused by concern for some possible or anticipated event.

It is often thought of as an emotion or even a personality trait, since we all know someone for whom worrying is their favorite sport.

Actually, worrying is not an emotion at all. Worry is a form of mental obsession that is unhealthy and unproductive.

Left unchecked, worry leads us to replay possible disastrous outcomes over and over again in our minds until we embrace a distorted reality.

Most worry is over far-fetched events that have little likelihood of actually occurring.

Worry is so pointless because it focuses all our energy and emotion on what might happen.

Worry is seldom for the real issues that beset us in the here and now; those real issues usually receive real action.

In fact, concern for a legitimate problem motivates us to take meaningful action, which is why we visit a doctor about a pain or see a mechanic about a noise under the hood.

Worry, though, rarely leads to constructive action.

In fact, real problems that need attention may get worse as the worrier sits immobilized and obsessing.

What are some warning signs worry might be out of balance in your life?

If you are not sleeping, or if you're not productive because your mind is preoccupied with a particular issue, things may have tipped out of balance.

If you simply aren't taking care of business because you are distracted with worry, or if you obsess on two or more issues for two or more days in a row, you may be out of balance.

All of this can contribute to an unhealthy level of stress that in turn can lead to anxiety issues and even panic disorders.

And stress, as you likely already know, can take a toll on your physical health.

Worry is a symptom of fear, and for the follower of Jesus fear is the opposite of faith.

When we operate in fear and worry over possible outcomes we can't control we act as though God's Word is not to be trusted and His promises are not to be believed.

Jesus in Matthew Six instructed the multitudes to forego worrying and trust God to provide.

That wisdom is no less valid in these troubled times.

Jesus is happy to relieve you of the burden of worry and replace it with the peace that comes from trusting God to work the situation out for the best in a way only He can orchestrate.

I encourage you to begin your day alone with God and take Him your list of worries.

Ask for guidance and direction for the legitimate problems in your life, and for peace without mental obsession over the issues that only might occur.

Pour your heart out to Him.

He wants that intimacy with you, and He wants you to be at peace, free of fear and trusting Him to care for you.

Meet author James L. Hopp at Round Lake Bookstore

Rogers City author James L. Hopp will be signing his new book "Mayday! Tragedy at Sea" from noon to 2 p.m. on Saturday, August 30 at Round Lake Bookstore.

On Nov. 18, 1958, the Carl D. Bradley, a 639-foot limestone carrier sank in Lake Michigan during a violent storm; 33 men perished. Only two survived.

Fewer than seven years later, the S/S Cedarville sank in the Straits of Mackinac after being struck by another ship.

Ten sailors lost their lives, most of them from Rogers City, Michigan.

"Mayday! Contains more than 80 photographs, illustrations and maps.

It discusses the loss of the Bradley, the rescue attempts by the U.S. Coast Guard in Charlevoix and the devastating impact the sinking had on Rogers City. It also details the collision of the S/S Cedarville with the Norwegian M/V Topdalsfjord in the Strait of Mackinac on May 7, 1965.

James L. Hopp is a retired teacher from Rogers City. His neighbor, Keith Schuler, was lost in the Bradley tragedy. His uncle, Leonard Gabrysiak, was the helmsman n the Cedarville when it was struck by another ship in the Straits of Mackinac. Books available at Round Lake Bookstore.

For further information, please call Dianne Clifford DuPont at (231) 547-2699 or email at RIbooks@charterinternet.com.

Meet the author: Richard Kellogg

English explorer Alexander Henry came to the Upper Peninsula in the 1770's to find gold and silver but he found only copper which he considered worthless.

He gave up and that's where the story really begins.

Berkley native, Richard Kellogg, 79, starts a yarn at that point, weaving in a fantastic voyage, buried treasure, hidden silver mines and a case of backstabbing in America's early days that he thinks changed the course of history.

The twists and turns may seem unbelievable: from saving his business with help from a geologist friend with a secret past to lowering himself into a sparkling cavern of pure silver dug deep into the Upper Peninsula.

But Kellogg swears it's all truth, not fiction.

He recounts his tales in the book "A Silver Wall."

Meet Richard Kellogg at a book signing between noon and 2 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 16 at Round Lake Bookstore, downtown Charlevoix.

Retired school personnel luncheon

The noon luncheon will be held on Aug. 20 at Greensky Hill Church's Susan Hall on old U.S. 31 north of Charlevoix.

Enjoy an $8 salad luncheon, greet old associates, meet new friends, and receive an up-date on legislative and health issues.

They were presented $5,000 checks by Joyce Herbert and Joan Robinson, co-chairs of the event.

• GRAND TRAVERSE

The Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians donated to the Charlevoix Public Schools Title VII Program an amount of $33,000 towards the Educational support services to Native American students within the school's academic Program.

• BANK SECURELY

The Federal Deposit Insurance Commission (FDIC) wants consumers to feel secure in the knowledge that deposits in their local bank are insured. Banks are required to purchase this insurance. While Michigan banks are facing the same economic struggles faced by the state's businesses and consumers, customers should understand that their deposits are safe.

This comes in response of a run on at least one out-of-state bank in recent weeks.

"Your money is safe in a Michigan bank," said Dennis Koons, president and CEO of the Michigan Bankers Association. "Our banks continue to provide financing for home mortgages and local businesses. They remain a safe and secure depository and provide a much needed source of credit for the community."

Deposits in commercial banks and thrift institutions are insured by the FDIC for up to $100,000 per depositor per insured bank and up to $250,000 per depositor per insured bank for retirement accounts.

Throughout the FDIC's 75-year existence, there have been no losses of insured deposits when a bank closed its doors. Bank customers do not need to purchase this insurance – it is paid for by the banks, is automatic and is backed by the full faith and credit of the United States of America.

Customers with deposits in banks should feel secure that their insured deposits are protected. If consumers have any questions they should ask their banker directly.

While a sustained economic decline can impact any business, banks are highly capitalized and prepared for economic fluctuations. Overall, banks are well-positioned to handle economic downturns, and if necessary, take steps to put losses behind them.

Banking is among the most heavily regulated businesses in the nation. State and federal bank regulators take extra efforts to ensure that banks are safe and sound and to protect depositors. Depositors should feel confident that their money is safe.

The Michigan Bankers Association (MBA) is the voice of the Michigan banking industry. Comprised of Michigan financial institutions with more than 2,400 branches located throughout the state, the MBA promotes strong communities and economic activity in Michigan by advancing a positive business environment.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Boating Accident

On July 31, a 12-year-old was involved in a boating accident on Lake Charlevoix. The family had finished tubing when the tube flew out into the water. The child stepped on the rope to stop the tube and the rope wrapped around his foot and amputated several toes.

All beverage bottles could soon come with deposit

Representatives of nearly 2,000 park and recreation professionals recently announced they are teaming up with Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC) to extend Michigan's Bottle Deposit Law to include non-carbonated beverage containers.

With this endorsement, the Michigan Recreation and Park Association (MRPA) joins MUCC, the driving force behind creation of the "Bottle Bill" 30 years ago.

"Michigan's law works, but it's incomplete and only applies to carbonated beverages," said Dennis Schornack, Executive Director of MRPA. "Sadly, Michigan parks are now littered with empty water, tea and sport drink containers. It's time to get the bubbles out of the Bottle Bill to keep Michigan parks beautiful."

In the 70s MUCC and the citizens of Michigan adopted a law that would fix the state's litter problem and it worked.

Since the 1970s, consumer preference for bottled beverages has dramatically shifted to non-carbonated drinks like tea, water, and sports drinks.

In 2010, non-carbonated drink sales are expected to soar above pop sales in Michigan. Each year, Michigan citizens recycle 97 percent of the 5.5 billion carbonated beverage containers, while 80 percent of non-carbonated beverage containers end up as litter and trash destined for landfills.

Local park officials stressed that keeping parks clean costs money and up to half of the trash removed by park employees is non-carbonated beverage containers.

Michigan residents are encouraged to contact their state representative and state senator to advocate support for the measure.

Athletic director promoted to assistant principal

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Following the retirement of assistant principal Roger Gowell, a couple of staff members within Charlevoix High School will be taking on a new role.

Doug Drenth will be the new assistant principal and Anne Gorney will take Drenth's place as the new athletic director.

"I'm hoping to pick right up where Doug (Drenth) left off," Gorney said of her predecessor, now the high school's assistant principal. "I took the job on the condition that Doug would be my mentor and he kindly agreed."

Gorney, previously a math teacher at the high school, said she hopes to run the office efficiently and that academics come first.

With that, however, she said she'd like to get the kids more involved in sports.

"There's been a declining involvement in girls sports especially, but really, all across the board," said Gorney. "With the season switch, there's been an encouragement for kids to only do one sport at a time. Some of the students have done very well in the past with handling more than one sport at a time, but it's really encouraged to do one and focus more time on studying."

Gorney said she looks forward to working with the kids in a different way this year. She also said she hopes to increase attendance at all of the sporting events as well.

"I've been working athletics since I started here," she said. "This is my fourteenth year here and I've done everything else. I might as well top it off."

Roger Gowell, who has been in education for 34 years, was the previous assistant principal. Though he served only one year as assistant principal, he worked part-time as an administrator and teaching classes.

"I knew he (Doug Drenth) was interested in the position, and I was happy to see he was interested," said Gowell. "I believe he'll do a good job."

"My wife had been retired for two years and my kids are all in the job market so this just gives us more flexibility to visit the kids," he said.

"Roger had the same kind of personality as Doug and I'm going to miss him from a professional and a personal standpoint," said Chet Janik, Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent. "We're going to miss him, but I'm glad he's moving on to new things in his life."

Janik said that Drenth is good for the position because he's proven as a successful teacher, coach and administrator. "He's respected by parents, colleagues and students and I'm happy he took the position. I think he and Suzanne will be a good team," he said.

Janik said that he has no major concerns for the upcoming school year academically. His only concerns lie with getting state financing.

"Anne and Doug work together very well, so it's going to be a very smooth transition," Janik said. "The big thing is getting the kids ready for the new school year."

MSU offering new land use program

Michigan State University Extension in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties recently received grants totaling $7,800 from the Charlevoix County and Petoskey-Harbor Springs community foundations to create innovative new training programs for local planning and zoning officials.

This project is sponsored by Michigan State University Extension in cooperation with the Northwest Michigan Council of Governments, Charlevoix and Emmet County Planning Departments and H.A.R.B.O.R., Inc.

The first part of the project includes a new set of audio CDs called "Planner's Moments." These CDs feature 15-minute commentaries recorded by area land use experts and are designed to be played at the beginning of local planning commission meetings. Supporting documentation and handouts will also be provided.

The first in the educational series will be available in September.

"While many planning officials recognize how important training is, many just don't have the time," says Dean Solomon, Charlevoix County Extension Director. "Planner's Moments" will let them learn important new information without having to attend yet another meeting."

The commentaries will focus on smart growth and best planning practices, as well as current trends and local issues in planning and zoning.

Planning officials and interested citizens will also be able to attend a spring 2009 workshop highlighting the Grand Traverse Bay "New Designs for Growth" program. This effort is one of the best in the state and is a key guiding force for commercial and residential development in that region.

The guidebook and approaches to helping local officials and developers could be very useful in this part of the region.

"We're very pleased that the foundations were able to support this project," says Solomon. "It will be a great chance to help leaders deal with land use challenges and better prepare our region for new economic development opportunities."

For more information about the "Planner's Moments" and "New Designs for Growth" program, contact the MSU Extension office in Charlevoix County (231) 582-6232 or Emmet County (231) 348-1770.

Starting with Louis Armstrong and working his way through Harry James, Ziggy Elman, Miles Davis, Dizzy Gillespie and more, Jacobs will feature the signature pieces of the great players. Dan's credits include Mel Torme, Woody Herman, Gene Krupa, Frank Sinatra and many more.

August 20 - We move forward in the Jazz decades with guest Phil Larrson, former LA studio musician and regular performer in Northern Michigan. Phil will highlight the fusion of Jazz with Blues, Funk and West Coast influences, drawing on artists such as George Benson, Lee Ritenour and Larry Carlton. Phil studied guitar with some of the great West Coast artists before moving to the Traverse City area.

Program aims to keep youth safe

Substance Abuse Free Environment (SAFE) in Northern Michigan is a partnership of area organizations that seeks to reduce substance abuse among young people.

Participants include probate and juvenile court representatives, law enforcement, Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Community Offering Alternatives to Substance Abuse (COATS), Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA), Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES), Harbor Hall, Northern Michigan Substance Abuse Services, the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, and substance abuse professionals.

To learn more about SAFE in Northern Michigan or to become involved in a local substance abuse prevention organization, contact Lorraine Manary at (231) 347-6701.

It is an over-arching body created to encourage collaboration among the participating groups that partner with families, communities and schools in prevention efforts against drug and alcohol use among youth.

SAFE is funded by the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and operates as a workgroup of the Charlevoix Emmet Human Services Coordinating Body.

"Currently we have participation from Petoskey, Pellston and Harbor Springs. We are continuing to seek participation from all Charlevoix and Emmet community groups to more broadly and effectively impact these issues in the coming year," said Tricia Graham, SAFE Co-chair.

SAFE in Northern Michigan is making progress towards its four main goals:

- Creating a Youth Student Advisory force
- Developing a sustainable media and community education plan
- Enhancing youth prevention and early intervention effectiveness
- Providing family education and support in prevention of tobacco, alcohol and drug use

SAFE continues to support and develop collaborative efforts with area professionals to provide alternative activities and educational opportunities that will build healthier youth. Work has begun on analyzing available data to help direct the groups' activities. A data-driven focus will help assure successful impact on an issue that continues to place area youth at risk.

LITTLE TRAVERSE BAY ENVIRONMENTAL PROJECT

WELL

- The well will go down more than 2,100 feet – that's almost 1/2 mile below the surface.
- The disposal zone contains a brine unsuitable for drinking or irrigation use.
- The disposal zone does not connect to any fresh water aquifers or surface water. The well application did not identify any surface water, environmental sensitive areas, floodplains, wetlands, natural rivers, or threatened or endangered species within a 1/4 mile radius of the proposed location.
- There are two impermeable layers of rock between the disposal zone and the local aquifer.
- The drinking water aquifer in the area ends at about 300 feet.

By now, you've likely heard about the Little Traverse Bay Environmental Project. The site now known as Bay Harbor and its neighboring public parks was once home to a limestone quarry and cement plant that operated for almost 80 years.

Beginning in 1993, the Bay Harbor Company, of which CMS Land Company was a principal owner, started work to redevelop the brownfield site and help protect the bay from the effects of the cement dust left behind.

Today, final efforts in the clean-up project continue. Earlier this year, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Michigan Department of Environmental Quality approved permits for CMS Land to install a deep injection well in Antrim County to dispose of the treated water from the project. Trucking the water to the well is not an ideal long-term solution and CMS Land intends to use the well for only as long as needed. CMS Land continues to work with the EPA and the MDEQ to identify a local disposal option for the water.

We know the well and the project overall have raised questions. Below are answers to the questions we hear most often.

Q: Will the well be safe?

A: Yes. After conducting an exhaustive review that lasted more than a year, both the EPA and DEQ concluded the proposed well can operate safely and that the well won't harm drinking water sources in the area or the Jordan River. In addition:

- The well will have numerous surface and below-ground safety features, and extensive monitoring and reporting requirements.
- The well will go down more than 2,100 feet below the surface. The area aquifer that supplies drinking and irrigation water ends at about 300 feet.
- The geologic zone that will receive the treated water is proven for such uses, and there are two impermeable layers of rock between that zone and the local aquifer.
- Additionally, the test drilling of the well must demonstrate that it can operate safely before the well can be put into operation.

Deep injection wells have been widely used in the United States for more than 50 years and have an excellent safety record. You can find out more about these wells by visiting www.epa.gov/safewater/uic/wells_class1.html

Q: Why was Antrim County selected as the site of this disposal well?

A. Antrim County was selected because of its proven geology. Scientific research and well records were used to identify a location where the geology has been proven to be suitable for such a well. More than 100 oil and gas wells and three other disposal wells already are operating within two miles of the CMS Land well site. That demonstrates the area's geology is suitable for such use. In fact, Antrim County is already home to nearly 50 active brine disposal wells and there also have been more than a dozen new injection well permits issued in Antrim County since early 2006. In contrast, there are no such wells in Emmet County.

Q: I've heard the water that will go into the well described as "toxic soup." How dangerous is the water?

A: The EPA classifies the water as nonhazardous waste because it does not have any characteristics of hazardous waste. The water collected at the project is treated on-site to reduce its pH level to about 10, which is similar to milk of magnesia. While the water does contain trace amounts of mercury, these amounts are more than 10 times less than what the government considers safe for drinking water (2,000 parts per trillion).

Q. If the treated water is nonhazardous, why can't it go into the Little Traverse Bay?

A. Although the treated water is nonhazardous, it doesn't meet the standards for discharge to the bay. That's primarily because trace amounts of mercury in the treated water average about 100 parts per trillion. The mercury standard for discharging water to the bay is 1.3 parts per trillion. By comparison, the standard for drinking water is 2,000 parts per trillion.

SPORTS reviewing the action

Favre, the other saga

...AND IN THIS CORNER

A J Hoffman

I'm not sure why I agreed to write about Brett Favre. I mean, Favre changes his mind so often, that by the time this column is published, something new may have occurred and everything I will have written about will be old news.

Newspaper writers, columnists and ESPN anchors seem so bored with Favre that they're referring to his story as "a saga." Or rather, "the saga." I guess that's exactly what it is though, isn't it?

Regardless, every time I hear or read someone referring to the Brett Favre saga, I immediately revert to Star Wars or the Bible. Should I really be thinking of it in that way? It's only sports, right? I don't know, I am intrigued by it though.

Let's set aside the things we might hate about sports. The egos, the multi-million dollar contracts, the soul-less stadiums named after banks or major corporations, etc. Overall, sports is something that inspires. Individual athletes, such as Brett Favre, are occasionally called legends - for a reason.

Favre is the only player in history to have won the AP MVP award three times, let alone consecutively. He won a Super Bowl. He's set records and put up numbers that no other quarterback in Green Bay may ever reach. He's played 17 seasons when the average career for a professional football player is around four or five years.

Favre even battled his own personal demons by fending off alcoholism and almost losing his family over it. The man has done it all with a smile on his face and the energy of a rookie scoring his very first touchdown.

As a Lions fan, upon watching the teary-eyed press conference of Favre's retirement, I felt the same way Knicks fans felt when Reggie Miller retired. Happy. I felt as if finally, the playing field is level, and now we might actually have a chance at making the playoffs this year.

The saga has nothing to do with money. He wasn't holding out. The Green Bay Packers actually offered Favre $20 million just to stay home. Of course, this offer came with stipulations, such as the team having the right to use him for promotional uses and advertising campaigns.

I think the real story which most of the media is missing is between Favre and the fans of Green Bay. The man misses the game so much that he's willing to turn down $20 million to come back and play. Really? Wow... I'm going to have to pay closer attention then, if he comes back to play.

Oh but wait, he is coming back to play! Just as I predicted, the story has changed once again. As I'm writing this column, the latest news is in: Brett Favre is back, but not with Green Bay. He's been traded to the New York Jets. I have no clue what this will look like. I can't even imagine what Brett Favre looks like in anything but a Packer jersey.

I've said a lot of good things about the man so far, and I hate to tear him down like everyone else has, but Favre probably would have been better off if he were traded to the Buccaneers.

You see, when a player goes to play for a New York team for the first time, especially a high-profile player such as Favre, he's placed under the biggest microscope in the world. Any little mistake he makes, any wrong quote, any less than eloquent interaction with a fan – it all gets caught on tape and examined. In a place like New York, all of these little things are a big deal.

Now, I don't see Favre doing something against the grain in New York, but God forbid, if he doesn't play like he's superhuman (or, battle like a Jedi, perhaps?) then his saga is over. THE saga is over.

Favre is known to be a pretty sensitive guy. He's also a very spur-of-the-moment type of guy (as we've seen over the course of the last four or five months). So, if things don't go his way, he'll walk. Again.

I watched three analysts on television make arguments as to how the Jet's season will end with this future hall-of-famer. One of them said they would go 12-4 another said 2-14, and the last one said they'd go 8-8.

My opinion is no better than any other analyst or sports commentator in the country, but my bet is if the Jets don't at least make the playoffs, Favre won't be back for a second season with the Jets

Members of the Charlevoix High School building trades class pose in front of the building they constructed and then donated to the Moms & Tots center in Ellsworth.

CHS building trades donates building

The Great Lakes Energy People Fund recently announced approval of a Grant of $3,000 for the Moms & Tots Center located in Ellsworth.

The purpose of the grant is to help with the cost of building a new and permanent facility for the Moms & Tots Center.

The Moms & Tots Center is a ministry of Good Samaritan Family Services which also operates the Good Sam Pantry and Resale Shop in Ellsworth.

The Moms & Tots Center exists to minister to the needs of young women who think they might be pregnant, who are pregnant, and young mothers (mostly single) and their babies.

The Moms & Tots Center has had almost meteoric growth in the numbers of clients since its inception seven years ago.

The growth has been about 50 percent each year to the level today of 360 active clients. Fortunately, our income has kept pace and operationally we are in the black.

Unfortunately, the little cottage on loan to us by a local church has not grown. Some days the cottage resembles the Toonerville Trolley, nearly bursting at the seams.

The Great Lakes Energy People Fund receives its funds from generous Great Lakes Energy customers who participate in the Round Up program.

Each month when they pay their bills the difference between their bill and the next dollar is given to the People Fund to improve the quality of life in our area.

So, if a bill is $78.55, the customer will pay $79.00 with the round up portion of $0.45 going to the People Fund.

The average annual contribution is about $6.00. It's painless, and much good is accomplished. Every penny given through the Round Up program goes to the People Fund.

To sign up is simple, call (888) 485-2537. The People Fund has its own Board of Directors of 14 members of our community who determine how the funds will be used. To find out more about the People Fund and the Round Up program go to www.gtlakes.com. For additional information on this press release, please contact Bill Broadwick at 231-533-8882, 231-590-9887, or wrb@mich.com.

Legal intern snags foul fisherman

On July 21 after a bench trial, Roger Moon was found guilty of Fish Snagging and Hook Violations. DNR Officer Andrea Albert and Auxiliary Officer Hudson Robinson both testified that they witnessed Moon snagging salmon and then keeping the foul hooked fish illegally. In Michigan, it is illegal to retain eny fish thet is not hooked in the mouth, to snag a fish, or fail to immediately return to the water a foul hooked fish. Each of these violations would result in e misdemeanor. In this case, Moon was sentenced to pay fines and costs of $800 and had his fishing license suspended for three years. This was a first trial for Charlevoix County legal intern Brian Kasiborski. Brian is starting his second year of law school at Michigan State University School of Law this fall after completing a summer internship with tha Prosecutor's Office. Prosecutor John Jarema stated that, "Brian Kasiborski has been an asset to this office. After supervising him in the courtroom this summar, I know he will be a remarkable attorney."

Council seeks courtesy from pilots

tion has been to implement a noise abatement between certain hours of the night and early morning.

Carlson, who lives near the airport, said his neighbors have also been complaining about the noise.

"It's hard not to notice it," he said.

"I'm a realist. When I bought my house, the traffic wasn't as bad at the time," Carlson said. "I understand the industry and appreciate the business it brings in, but at the same time, they should be courteous and know that this is a residential area."

One of the issues mentioned during the council meeting was how long planes idle before takeoff.

"One thing I'm concerned about is the excessive idling," said Carol Oehs, City Clerk. "My home is right near the airport and sometimes the idling goes on for 20 to 30 minutes at a time."

The idling is a part of testing for safety, said airport manager Matt Bailey.

"The planes are the loudest when the engines are at full power when the jets are taking off," he said.

He presented a brochure from Harbor Springs Municipal Airport citing some of the procedures that they utilize in order to cut down on the noise.

The brochure is given to all flyers using their airport and lays out a series of guidelines that the pilots should abide by when traveling in and out of the airport.

The brochure specifically says, "this brochure is intended to help pilots operate to and from our airport safely and in consideration of our neighbors. The quiet departure and arrival procedures illustrated in this brochure will reduce disturbances to our neighbors and create a 'fly friendly' atmosphere at the airport."

Bailey compared the Charlevoix Airport's operations to that of Harbor Springs' Airport and said it cost them nearly $15,000 just to survey and do research.

Both the City Council and Bailey agreed a similar brochure or handout should be printed and given to pilots coming in and out of the airport.

"A friendly little thing like this can be printed up and pilots will abide by it. Usually, everybody abides by it," Bailey said. "About 90 to 95% of them will follow the rules and there's only a small minority of bad apples that don't follow the rules."

Bailey said asking pilots to use the appropriate runways for landing and takeoff will also help cut down on the noise so traffic can run smoother.

"I think asking them not to operate between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. should help," Bailey said. "I think observing the proper air traffic altitude will fix a lot of these concerns as well."

"The community of Charlevoix has always had a good relationship with the airport," Bailey said. "This noise abatement doesn't restrict pilots from flying in even during those hours. The airport must stay open to the public, because it's FAA regulated. This is only a recommendation. It's not a rule."

Bailey said the brochure the Charlevoix Airport hands out will be focusing on noise abatement procedures and patterns the pilots should be flying.

"Specifically, no turbojet or turbofan aircrafts between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m." he said. "Also, we'll ask that all turbo aircrafts depart towards the West, and not into the residential area."

"It's not uncommon to set noise restrictions. It's something bigger airports do at certain times of the day for specific reasons," Carlson said. "The Ronald Reagan International Airport in Washington D.C. has set noise abatement restrictions as a courtesy to their area as well."

it," said PIG chair Shirley Roloff. "I supported it because we aren't going to get anything done unless we take it upon ourselves to do it. We're not going to get any help from the state or the federal (governments)."

The PIG committee sent the ballot language to civil counsel John Jarema for his perusal before the matter will come before the full board of county commissioners at 9:30 a.m. today, Aug. 13, the results of which were not available before press time.

"That's the only way we are ever going to get our roads done," Roloff said of the measure which is expected to fund repair of 30 percent of county roads.

The 1-mill levy is expected to raise nearly $2,059,124 in the first of its 15 year life cycle, from 2009 to 2023.

Carol Apol of Norwood takes a break from struggling through the over five-feet-tall, densely populated invasive grass phragmites off the coast of Norwood. Apol and township officials are working to eliminate or at least control the prolific plant life.

Invasion in Norwood

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Newly elected Norwood Township Supervisor Frank Hamilton hasn't even taken office and is already dealing with a new threat to Norwood.

According to Hamilton, phragmites, an invasive species of grass, is threatening area wildlife and killing the view of Lake Michigan.

"There are a bunch of dangers with these things," said Hamilton. "There are really two different kinds of phragmites. There's a native species which contributes to its ecosystem and then there's this invasive species which has been transplanted from somewhere else."

Hamilton

Various patches of phragmites, pronounced frag•my•tees, all along the lakefront in Norwood will continue to grow if unchecked.

"They just crowd out all the other species in the area," he said. "It's a very prolific plant and all it does is grow."

He added, "It will grow 20 to 30 feet in every direction and will do so every year."

Hamilton also said the phragmites don't just harm other plants, but animals too.

"Ducks have a hard time navigating around the area and finding food," he said. "These plants are so big because their root system goes down so far. It's about 25 feet down below."

Hamilton added, "It just grows so rapidly and gets so big that it eventually becomes the sole survivor in the area."

Hamilton was informed of the phragmites issue by fellow resident Carol Apol.

"These phragmites are the most invasive species to hit the Great Lakes," Apol said. "They've choked out over 150 miles of Huron shore property."

Apol said that the plumes reach about 10 to 20 feet high

Beware of 30-feet worms

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Mike Przybyliski, 55, found something he had never seen before when he went fishing.

He caught two fish last week, both contained worms longer than the fish.

"I think I see trouble down the road and this is only the start of it," said Przybyliski, who has never seen a tapeworm in a fish before.

Przybyliski took the fish to the local DNR office where the parasite was identified as a tapeworm.

Tapeworms are flat, parasitic worms which infect cold-blooded and warm-blooded animals from fish, all the way up the food chain to humans.

Tapeworms can grow to 30 feet and produce more than a million eggs a day. Symptoms of tapeworm infestation include stomach pain, diarrhea, flatulence, vomiting, nausea, weight loss and malnutrition

County-wide road millage once again on ballot

VOTERS TO DECIDE ROAD MILLAGE FATE

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
COURIER EDITOR

A $30 million road millage proposal is now on the November ballot.

Charlevoix County Commissioners unanimously agreed Wednesday, Aug. 13, to let Charlevoix taxpayers decide whether the county should implement the one-mill levy.

"I haven't weighed out all of my options yet, but to me the choice is this: if we support this and tax ourselves, we're essentially letting the state off the hook," said board chairman Chris Christensen (District 2). "Having said that, there is no plan; it's this or nothing else, but I'm afraid if we pay for our roads now, we'll be paying for our roads forever."

Commissioners have been urged to act in recent weeks by the Concerned Citizens of Charlevoix County, a grassroots effort aimed at improving Charlevoix's deteriorating road system, because of the nearing Aug. 26 deadline to have measures included on the November ballot.

Despite the unanimous vote, some commissioners were reluctant to support the move.

District 5 commissioner Bob Drebenstedt teetered on the verge of voting no after hearing the concerns of Eveline Township Supervisor John Vondran.

"This is monumental in the future of the county. Regardless of how any commissioner feels about the millage, we have a right to let the people choose," Christensen said. "What better way than the November presidential ballot? Hopefully there will be a resounding answer. If the answer is "no" then we will have to figure out another way because the millage isn't going to cover it. If the answer is "yes" we'll start road construction as soon as possible."

Vondran voiced concerns that some of the 61.34 miles of road slated to be repaired or reconstructed by the road commission was being paid for by township millages.

"You guys are advertising you're going to finish Ferry Road, but we're bidding out for Ferry Road, so we're paying for Ferry Road," Vondran said. "I don't think you can lie to our people. I think we need to tell people the true facts right up front."

He added, "Don't be playing games with them and then come to find out we don't have the money to finish these roads."

Vondran and his fellow Eveline Township leaders are planning a campaign which includes 2,200 brochures urging the taxpayers to vote "no" on this fall's millage proposal.

Charlevoix Road Commission manager Pat Harmon would rather see Eveline Township support the millage and use the money they would save to fix other roads under their purview.

While the list has yet to be prioritized, roads to be repaired or reconstructed include 1.76 miles of Norwood, nearly 14 miles of Boyne City-Charlevoix, 7.12 miles of Marion Center, and 4.04 miles of Kings Highway on Beaver Island.

"We have no priority list at this point, but we've talked about forming a committee to do that that includes members of the road commission, county board of commissioners, someone from the citizens group," he said.

The amount of asphalt which could be reconstructed/repaired each year will depend, Harmon said, on the rising cost of fuel, asphalt and other factors.

"It depends, but total reconstruction costs about $350,000 a mile," he said. "If it's wedge and overlay, just guessing, but it's probably about $150,000 to $175,000 (per mile)."

When asked about the rumor of this millage eventually becoming a bond, Harmon said people first need to focus on getting the measure passed.

"If we get into a situation where construction costs are skyrocketing, then at some point there might be a cost/benefit analysis," he said. "And, if it warrants doing the work up front and bonding it and paying over time to save the taxpayers money, then that needs to be looked at."

If passed by voters this November, the Charlevoix County Road Millage could raise at least $30 million over 15 years. Proceeds from this 1-mill levy would go to repair or reconstruct just over 61 miles of roads throughout the county.

Preparing for golden years

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

It's good to be home.

Yes, I'm certain that's what I heard him say as I pulled into the parking lot marked with the Handicap Only sign.

Seventeen months have flown buy since the day I moved dad into his assisted living apartment.

It seems like only yesterday when I received the call that got my attention quicker than a blue light special.

Dad was spry and stubborn at 91 and living pretty much on his own.

One chilly Sunday afternoon life changed for him and for me. His carefully polished church shoes slipped on the kitchen tile and dad took a swan dive into the kitchen counter.

He was returned back to his home after leaving the emergency room only to return two days later still complaining about his neck and now the additional difficulty with speaking.

Reviewing the x-rays a second time with fresher eyes to carefully peruse what lie in front of them, a doctor noted a small neck fracture and paralyzed vocal cords.

Add this to diabetes, macular degeneration and losing much of his balance; that just about wraps it up health wise.

I wasn't sure what I was going to do next, but I knew I needed to move him closer to me and still help him remain independent on his terms.

There is such a delicate balance making certain that your parent is cared for but still giving them the chance to feel they can do some things on their own.

Assisted living provides supervision or assistance with activities of daily living.

There usually is a coordinator of outside services for health care needs.

This type of complex and similar settings in supervised homes emerged in the 1990s as an alternative for people who cannot live independently but do not need 24-hour nursing care.

It promotes independence with dignity: No worry about fixing dinner, doing dishes or laundry.

What I didn't realize was something called "relocation stress syndrome." This may occur from making this type of move.

If you do move your parent into a new surrounding because of your concern for their welfare, please take note that leaving belongings, friends and familiar faces behind puts stress on your parent.

Depression and anxiety may follow on the heels of this move, so it's wise to have a physician available to discuss these issues if they should arise.

In thinking about my own future and what's in store for my children, I have tried to remain thoughtful and calm about the decisions they make as young adults.

I respect them and I'm hopeful they will follow my lead and make wise decisions regarding my care in the years to come.

Just in case I become a bitter old woman, I gave them permission to take me sky diving and maybe forget to pack the parachute.

In my time spent checking out various scenarios for elderly parents I have learned about "aging in place."

It doesn't require having a parent move but having them live comfortably in their own home.

Certified aging in place specialists discuss what changes need to be made to make this successful.

Remodeling parts of a home may be needed and this can become expensive.

It is helpful to remember to keep a bedroom available on the main floor, as stairs become an issue as we age.

If you are thinking about changing things up in the bathroom while looking at the newest issue of Pottery Barn, look at a health aid magazine as well and add decorative handicap railings.

While you're at it, make the bathroom door wider while you can still remember to do so.

Wheelchairs and walkers need room to maneuver.

We weren't thinking about these things when we did our last remodel and now we'll have to make changes for our future needs. As for dad, he's a happy camper living down the street at Sunnybank Assisted Living.

After a long stroll in his wheel chair or a drive down to his beloved beach spot, its nice to hear him say when we return "There's no place like home."

Divorce not the answer

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

There has been a steady stream of two groups of clients calling Christian Counseling Services this summer: The first group is made up of people beset by worry and wrestling with anxiety; The second group is made up of married couples ready to call it quits.

It is as though something is in the water in Charlevoix that has led to an outbreak of the misguided notion among head-butting husbands and wives that divorce is the only answer.

The impact of divorce on the husband and wife is significant in itself. But, when there are kids involved the damage is compounded. Last year, 30,953 Michigan kids woke up one morning to find their family fractured. Closer to home, in 2007, Charlevoix County recorded 215 marriages but 109 divorces, and most of those dissolutions involved children.

Those cold statistics don't begin to tell the full story of the effect of divorce on children. I worked the last two years at Charlevoix Elementary School mentoring and counseling children who were struggling in different ways, and my caseload was made up almost entirely of kids from broken homes.

These were kids whose homes were split in two by parents who gave up, not just on one another but on the family that had been the source of their children's stability and security.

Those kids came to school reflecting the underlying fear of every child of divorce: who's going to take care of me? And they came to school each day dragging the big bag of guilt known to every child of divorce: was the divorce, and the ruination of my family home, my fault?

There are some myths husbands and wives drag out when they are considering breaking up the family, myths about the impact of divorce on their children. I've had parents insist that children of divorce do just as well in school as children from stable homes, and that many of their kid's friends are from divorced families and those kids seemed to be adjusting just fine. Those views seem to help them rationalize the damage they are about to do, but they just aren't true.

Kids experiencing divorce come to school anxious and stressed, and they act out in class and on the playground. These kids are more likely to experiment with drugs and sex, and more likely to end up in the criminal justice system. Do they adjust? Sure, just not very quickly and not without a lot of pain. Divorce may look like the easy way out of a marriage under stress, but if you are married with children there are seven good reasons not to divorce.

1. God hates divorce. The Bible says it just like that in Malachi 2:16. When man and woman are joined in matrimony the new union that is created has standing with God, and His directive is that what God has joined together man shall not separate. (Mark 10:19)

2. Divorce permanently damages your kids. The emotional scars will shape their outlook, behaviors and choices for their entire lives. And if you're the one who moves out of the home, in the mind of your child you will always be the one who abandoned them, never to be fully trusted.

3. Divorce leaves you damaged in body, soul, and spirit. Your nerves and emotions will be stressed to their limit and that stress will overflow into your physical well-being. Your relationship with God will suffer as you insist on having what you want while ignoring what He wants.

4. Divorce damages your reputation. In a town that thrives on gossip, you will forever be defined by this event. Whether victim or villain, you will always be maligned, particularly if the divorce grew out of an affair.

5. If you are a Christian, you damage your credibility as a person of faith trying to live a godly life. Your witness for Christ will be forever suspect.

6. Divorce doesn't actually solve anything, it only complicates the logistics of your day. Because of the children, the person you divorce will still be very much in your life, just not in your bed.

7. For nearly everyone except the very wealthy, divorce is financially devastating. You will forfeit all the wealth and assets you've accumulated in the years you've been working together and you will be years rebuilding. Moreover, if you are among the millions of couples who require the pay checks of two working adults to barely operate one household, how will you stretch that income to operate two?

All things considered, divorce is not the easy way out. Don't be so quick to throw away your wealth, reputation, health and children just to get away from the spouse you once loved and could love again. I promise you'll spend a lot less on a counselor to save your marriage than you will on lawyer fees to end it; And your kids will thank you for it.

ROAD RAGE

Editor:

I don't understand the Charlevoix road department.

The busiest tourist month of the year, August, and they decide it's time to do road work that closes down traffic lanes.

Is it so dire that the work couldn't wait until September?

FAIR, THEE WELL

Editor:

Dear art fair committee members, congratulations on another fair of which to be proud.

I want to thank you for putting on such a great reception for the artists at the Weathervane this year as well as the books showing the history of the fairs since the first one.

The day turned out to be excellent in spite of the little rain shower that passed through.

It is my hope that the artists all had a successful day of sales as well as the local businesses.

My congratulations also includes the person who compiled the booklets.

I know that it was a monumental job. They have been added to my archives outlining quite a trip through the many fairs that have made our choosing Charlevoix back in 1965 as our place to live.

I am thankful for the response to my efforts to work in clay as a successful and rewarding career.

JUST PLANE DUMB

Editor:

So, are we once again going to allow a vocal minority to cause the city council to take an action that makes us look dumb and dumber.

I am addressing the proposed pamphlet to be handed out to pilots concerning noise abatement.

I was born, in 1945, and raised here and I cannot remember a time when there was not an airport at the present location.

Do some of these people expect us to believe that they bought or rented property without noticing that there was an active airport in their backyard?

Yes, I do have a pilot's license, but I haven't flown an aircraft in over 20 years.

Also, I did serve 10 years on the board of directors for the Traverse City airport.

I can tell you that our airport is a major asset to Charlevoix's economy.

How many other communities our size have such a high quality airport?

With our airport, Charlevoix is an easy destination for both business and pleasure.

As for the idle time of aircraft, it is necessary for all types of aircraft to go through the required preflight warm-up and testing; it's a matter of safety.

Do you want to fly on a plane with a pilot who doesn't follow these safety rules?

And, are they loud when they take off? Of course they are. Again, do you want to fly with a pilot who doesn't use full power for a take-off?

Also, the direction of landing and take-off is determined by the direction of the wind, for safety reasons, not by the pilot.

Remember, too, that we have two charter services for Beaver Island.

Naturally they have many more flights in the summer months when your windows are probably open and you can hear them.

Do we want people to remember a pamphlet which may cause them to think they are not welcome here?

Maybe they will simply choose to go to some other community; that would be just great for our economy.

Airports and aircraft result in some noise, that's all there is to it.

And, airports and aircraft are very important to the local economy.

So, relax and enjoy the summer, it's short enough as it is without complaining about the airport and chasing visitors away.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINE

Editor:

The development of vaccines to eradicate or drastically reduce many infectious diseases is truly a marvel of medical science. In the US, vaccinations are considered the 20th century's greatest health care achievement.

They are by far the country's most successful and cost-effective medical intervention to date.

Vaccination's success is the major reason some people now question them. Many of us are too young to remember the days when polio spread through communities with crippling effects.

We cannot recall the thousands who died from measles, pertussis (whooping cough) and diphtheria or the thousands who were permanently damaged from mumps or rubella.

While we have made great progress in significantly reducing the number of vaccine-preventable diseases,

County board eager for completed master plan

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Eager to see the 1973 Charlevoix County Land Use Plan updated, county commissioners admonished the county planner during their Aug. 13 meeting.

While Michigan law does not require a county create these long-term visions of industrial, agricultural, recreational, residential, transportation and open space growth and preservation which form a master plan, state guidelines direct planning commissions to review their respective plans every five years once implemented and maintain consistency among city, village and township zoning.

"This has been a mounting concern," Charlevoix County Commissioner (District 2) and board chair Chris Christensen told Sullivan.

"I don't know what to tell the people who are asking me where these things are. I'm at a loss here, sir."

A 27-year county employee, Sullivan has worked on the land use portion of the master plan for nearly eight years.

"Priorities of various boards change over time, and that can impact our activities. We have adopted a number of other plans; recreation plans; we have developed at least four or five waste management plans; a lake management plan for Lake Charlevoix," he said during an interview following the meeting. "It's not that no plans have been developed in past years, but the planning commission has, for a number of years, put high priority on helping townships develop their plans and zoning ordinances."

Sullivan

Michigan State University Extension Director for Charlevoix County Dean Solomon said, though there are no direct penalties for failing to produce a plan, nearly all Michigan counties have a master plan.

"It is required under state law for counties to review both changes to zoning ordinances that townships have and master plans townships develop," he said.

"You have to have some basis for making recommendations to the townships and cities and villages, and the master plan provides that basis."

Solomon added, "Increasingly, both state and federal agencies require updated master plans for counties to be eligible for some grant programs."

Christensen believes the grant approval process for the recently approved Whiting Park project would have been less time consuming and less expensive if the master plan was complete because grants are approved on a points system, and having an approved master plan generally earns a municipality more points than those without.

The county is also currently ineligible for various monies awarded to purchase development rights in open space preservation programs.

"I understand they have some frustration. They want it done now and we're working to do that," said Sullivan, who presented commissioners with a tentative schedule for the plan's adoption.

The public could see the draft plan by mid-October; A public hearing on the plan is scheduled for Feb. 5, 2009, and the county board could adopt the plan as early as Feb. 24, 2009.

When not advising township, city and village officials or working to bring the county's second non-motorized trail to fruition, Sullivan said he seeks state and federal grants.

"We provide a lot of technical assistance to townships in the county," he said. "It eats up some time."

Sullivan said the process has taken this long in part because the planning department has sought input from as many citizens as is possible.

"We've been making changes," he said. "We don't want to have 25,000 people come out of the woodwork and say, 'This thing is terrible.'"

Sullivan added, "We're trying to work out those issues before we get to that point."

do not assume that we don't need vaccines anymore

Unfortunately these illnesses are still with us, often resulting in a disease outbreak when immunization levels fall for that illness

Vaccines are safe. They undergo more rigorous testing before being licensed than any other pharmaceutical product.

Then their safety is continually monitored through the nationwide Vaccine Adverse Events Reporting Program Possible links between vaccines and illness are taken seriously. For example, the Institute of Medicine has studied in-depth possible links between autism and the measles mumps rubella vaccine and autism and thimerosol, a vaccine preservative no longer used.

An independent, non profit, non governmental group composed of leading physicians and scientists, the Institute of Medicine concluded after an exhaustive review that there is no causal relationship between measles mumps rubella vaccine and autism. In a separate study, the institute concluded that there is no causal relationship between autism and the thimerosol once found in vaccines.

Now some parents are concerned that the number of vaccines given to children at one time is too many. Newer vaccines contain only a small part of the virus needed for immunity, so children actually receive fewer viral particles even though may get more shots

I often hear concerns from parents after they read something on the Internet. Unfortunately no one monitors the Internet for accuracy

Many web sites are devoted to spreading fear about vaccines, but none of them are run by credible sources like the Immunization Action Coalition, www.vaccineinformation.org, U.S. Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, www.cdc.gov, or the American Academy of Pediatrics, www.aap.org.

Parents want and deserve only the best for their children, and so they will naturally have questions or concerns about vaccines or other medicines for them. I urge all parents to discuss their concerns openly with trustworthy individuals, such as their child's doctor or nurse or any of the staff at their local Health Department.

Out of this world

The 10th annual exhibit of the Michigan Quilt Artist Invitational features an array of imaginative and inventive quilts that interpret this year's theme, Out of this World. Local artists in the show are Peg Keeney from Harbor Springs, Desiree Vaughn from Suttons Bay and Kathie Briggs of Charlevoix. Out of this World will be on display at the Charlevoix Public Library, 220 west Clinton St. until Labor Day. Call the library for further information at 237-7340.

Cleaning our shore. Protecting our bay.

LITTLE TRAVERSE BAY ENVIRONMENTAL PROJECT

As we talk with the public about the Little Traverse Bay Environmental Project we have been asked many questions about the history of the property and what we are doing today to address the problems of the past.

Agreements reached earlier this year between the CMS Land Company, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and Resort Township have paved the way for a scheduled reopening of East Park in 2009. Here are answers to some of the questions we hear most often about our work in East Park.

Q: What environmental steps have been taken at East Park?

A: Environmental work at the park includes:
- The installation of more than 800 feet of collection lines along the shoreline to catch water coming from the dust pile,
- Relocating about 30,000 cubic yards of cement dust to remove contact with ground water,
- Shaping the pile to maximize water run-off,
- The installation of a watertight liner over the pile, followed by a sand and soil cover over the liner,
- The installation of 10 wells south of the park to divert water around the dust pile is currently on-going,
- At the suggestion of the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, CMS installed a "Downstream Defender" to filter storm water before it makes its way to the lake, and
- The entire site has been seeded and the grass is becoming well established.

Q: How environmentally effective have the remedies been?

A: Environmental results have been impressive. Since the collection lines have been installed, pH readings in the lake routinely have been less than the action level of 9. According to testing protocol developed by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, the amount of mercury making its way to the lake over a period of a year has been reduced about 65 percent. Continued improvement is expected when the diversion wells are installed and all remedies are working in concert.

Q: What amenities are planned for the park?

A: Only the eastern (original) side of the park had any structures on it and the township plans to begin that replacement work this fall. One of the side benefits of the environmental work at East Park is that the useful size of the west side of the park has about doubled. The township plans to add additional amenities to the west side of the park in the future, including restrooms and a pavilion, depending on budget and securing grant money. See park rendering at left.

Q: What agreements were reached with Resort Township?

A: The agreements between Resort Township and CMS Land included necessary access and equipment maintenance agreements and park infrastructure replacement costs. At the beginning of the project CMS Land committed to replace park structures removed during the environmental work at the park. CMS and the township agreed that the township could better realize its goals for the park if they conducted the replacement work and CMS reimbursed the township $390,000 to replace the removed infrastructure.

Substantial environmental progress has been achieved. CMS Land continues to work closely with officials to put a final cleanup plan in place that will protect the bay for future generations.

Storm water, bus garage, zoning, top city planning commissoin agenda to start construction on the project around Memorial Day of next year. The original plan was to start construction this year but with all of the work that went into getting the nonprofit started, they decided to delay the work.

PLANNING

Board action: None

Item: Discuss zoning revisions

In brief: Mike Spencer and the commission went into breif discussion about the kinds of signs that would be appropriate to display. This discussion pertained primarily to businesses. Hotel vacancy signs, sandwich board signs, fencing codes, and signs displayed behind windows were all discussed.

Board action: None.

Item: Discuss new bus garage plans

In brief: They discussed and concluded that the building for the new school bus garage is safe and appropriate and is located in a good location.

Board action: None.

Item: Discuss draft storm water control ordinance

In brief: In the past, the city has had to pay money out to boat owners in Round Lake because the drainage system was so bad. Spencer's solution was to educate people a little better about their grass clippings which they put out at the side of the road. Also, try to go after grant money in order to have a comprehensive study done to learn how to fix the problem in the long-run.

Board action: None.

Sidewalk sales

Crystal Riopelle (red hair) and Jenna Raber, workers at the Halfway to the Top on Bridge Street, do a little prep work for the sidewalk sales on Thursday morning. Halfway to the Top sells men's and women's clothes as well as soap, trinkets and other Charlevoix souvenirs. Shoppers from all over northern Michigan crowd the sidewalks during Thursday, Aug. 14 sidewalk sales.

Steve Braun, golf professional at the Belvedere in Charlevoix, takes a practice swing during his 100 holes in one day fundraiser on Monday,, Aug. 18. Braun has been completing the 100 holes yearly since 1997 as a fund-raiser for the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Association. Money raised helps support the program, which draws upwards of 150 kids annually, and provides golf camp scholarships for selected players to Ferris State University and the Boyne Golf Academy. Call junior golf association executive director Dean Davenport, 547-6433 or the Belvedere pro shop, 547-2611 to help support this cause. Braun played the equivalent of five-and-one-half rounds of golf in 12 hours.

Rotarian with a heart

Donald Arthur, heart transplant recipient and veteran marathon runner spoke to Charlevoix Rotarians earlier this summer on the need for more organ donations. Arthur is a Rotarian from the Bronx, New York and a founding member of Transplant Speakers International who received his heart transplant at age 52. Fifteen months later he ran/walked his first marathon and has competed in 28 more since.

Charlevoix Public's bus route cuts costs

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Janik

The Charlevoix School District is implementing a "one bus run" starting this fall.

Students of all ages will now ride the bus together, changing the start and end times for each school and altering the bus routes.

"We were trying to be more financially responsible and the one bus run does save us on expenses," said Chet Janik, Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent. "I think it's a plus for our students and parents."

He added that most school systems in the state only have a one-layer bus route.

Janik estimated the schools will save nearly $15,000 to $20,000 annually.

The old system of separate bus runs for older and younger students placed an unnecessary burden of increased fuel consumption, wear and tear on buses and increased pay for drivers, all factors which schools in Michigan's steadily declining economy cannot afford to maintain.

However, elementary students will still be separated from middle and high school students.

All buses are expected to arrive at the middle school by 7:40 a.m. After that, kindergarten through fourth-grade, high school and St. Mary students will be transported from the middle school to their appropriate buildings.

Afternoon bus routes are set to drop off high and middle school students, who live within city limits, to their respective stops on the way to the elementary school.

The new school bell times are as follows. For the elementary school, 8:08 a.m. to 3:20 p.m., for the middle school, 7:50 a.m. to 3 p.m.; and for the high school, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

School Transportation Supervisor Gordie Russell said that new routes are being mapped out but will be slightly revised once school starts after new families settle into the district.

"There are always several unknowns due to families moving into and out of the district," said Russell. "But we are also implementing a new bus schedule so we're asking students and parents to be patient with us as we work (it) out."

Middle and high school students who live outside the city limits will ride to the elementary school where K-4 students will be picked up, and then bused to their correct stops.

Students living outside the city limits should start watching for their bus at 6:50 a.m. Students living within the city limits should watch for their bus starting at approximately 7:10 a.m.

The drop-off areas, which will be mapped out early in the school year, will be posted in both the middle and high school.

Janik said that their goal is to purchase five new school buses within the next seven years. At the last school board meeting, the board already purchased two of them.

"The old buses we have are outdated. They need a lot of maintenance," said Janik. "The bond is what helped us get these buses."

There is also a new state-of-the-art bus garage being built on the same lot where the old garage used to stand at 1021 May St.

Janik said the new garage is expected to be completed by mid-fall.

Temporarily, the bus garage is located at 05968 U.S. 31 South.

SCHOOL BUS STOP

Charlevoix Public Schools officials have decided to alter the school's traditional two tier busing routes in favor of the cost saving one layer plan. School start and end times have been altered by several minutes each, in some cases, to allow time for bus drivers to pick up and drop off students at their prescribed locations.

Tapeworms a natural part of ecology

Przybyliski pulled the fish out of the Pine River Channel, then pulled the three-feet-long tapeworm out of a small-mouth bass. The second fish he caught also had a tapeworm in it. Przybyliski's fishing partner, John Perron, gutted one of the fish he caught and said he found thousands of baby tape worms inside of it.

"There's a bunch of different kinds of parasites," said Dave Clapp of the Michigan DNR and Charlevoix Fisheries Research Station. "And, some are routine in the Great Lakes."

He added, "Some of these things are just common in certain species; That's just a part of their ecology."

According the Michigan DNR Web site, as long as there are fish, there will be fish parasites like tapeworms.

"If you know you are going to keep your catch, gut it immediately and put the gutted fish on ice in your cooler," stated Dr. Patrick Muzzall of Michigan State University in a guide to parasites. "Don't throw the guts overboard as this is illegal. It will also allow the tapeworms to release their eggs back into the water."

He further stated, "Put the guts in a plastic bag in your cooler and dispose of them properly when you get home."

Przybyliski said he still plans to continue fishing in Charlevoix.

"It's in the hands of the DNR right now," he said. "I don't want to scare anyone away from fishing. We just thought it was something people should be aware of."

Clapp said taking a few simple precautions will keep you safe from tapeworms.

"The fish will be fine as long as you cook it or fillet it properly," Clapp said. "It's just like any other parasite or bacteria, if it's prepared correctly, it won't hurt you when you eat it."

and are located all along the sand at Fisherman's Island. "These runners are along the beach," she said. "You can't even access the area."

Pam Grassmick, the Phragmites Project Coordinator on Beaver Island, said the project must be done to improve the wildlife, habitat and quality of life of the Great Lakes.

"One of the reasons we were able to engage the townships is because they (phragmites) erode the tax value on people's property because it costs them so much to clean up," Grassmick said. "It becomes so dense that nothing can live in it. Even humans have a hard time pushing it aside."

Grassmick said Saginaw Township let the problem get so out of hand they have now had to spend millions of dollars in order to control the infestation.

"Shoreline property owners need to be educated about it and engage their township about the subject," she said.

Hamilton said autumn is the best time to fight phragmites.

"The best thing to do is spray herbicide to kill them," he said. "And, the best time to do it is in September because that's when they suck all of their nutrients in and store them for the whole year."

Unfortunately, Hamilton added, a permit is needed to spray herbicide on the plants and that permit process has expired as of Aug. 15.

However, Hamilton said his people are working to be ready for next fall.

"We're going to facilitate the governmental agents to take care of the problem," Hamilton said. "We want to take a pro-active stand with this with Banks Township and get a widespread solution."

O'Brien wins St. James tie-breaker

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Pam O'Brien won the proverbial coin toss to decide who is St. James Township Clerk, prompting her opponent Jean Palmer to ask about a recount.

The two were forced, by Michigan law, to cast lots on Aug. 14 after they tied 86 to 86 in the Aug. 5 primary election.

"We had a basket with two pieces of paper. One said elected and the other said not elected," said Cherie Browe, Chief Deputy Charlevoix County Clerk. "O'Brien was not present, so a member of the canvassing board drew on her behalf."

While Palmer has not officially filed for the recount, the 10-year veteran of St. James Township government did ask Deputy Chief County Clerk Cherie Browe how to get one before leaving the clerk's office last Thursday.

"She (Palmer) has the alternative of filing for a recount," said Browe. "Within six days, she must submit a request in writing. Then, it will cost her $10 for the recount and the canvassing board will come in and hand-count the ballots when they set a date and a time and both parties will be notified."

Browe said she thinks the process is as fair as it can be and that it should be left up to the legislators to decide how tie-breakers should be handled.

As of press time, Palmer had not officially filed for a recount yet, according to the county clerk's office.

O'Brien is now the legal candidate for the clerkship barring a recount in Palmer's favor.

Neither O'Brien or Palmer could be reached by press time.

Charlevoix Schools checking items off its strategic plan

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

When Chet Janik first took over as Charlevoix Public Schools new superintendent, he stressed how important it was for them to have a long-term strategic plan.

One year later, Janik has worked with school staff, administration and parents to bring his vision to fruition.

"We're using this as a blueprint for the next three to five years," said Janik, who has already been able to cross completed goals off the list.

Completed long-term goals include approval to purchase new buses, construction of both a new administration building and bus garage facility.

In conjunction with the replacement of a couple of old buses and the new bus garage, the public schools have also determined new starting and ending times for all of the buildings in the district.

Technology improvements set forth in the plan include implementation of a district-wide phone system, installation of interactive white boards and the schools are currently working to replace their outdated computers.

"We can come up with all sorts of feel good things, but we need a game plan to achieve our goals," Janik said in an interview during the early stages of the plan.

Recent improvements in standardized testing scores meets the long-term plan's criteria of improving student achievement.

The plan not only outlines teacher, community and parental involvement but it also lists specific goals Janik and the school system plan to achieve.

The plan lists several indicators of success: Student, community and parental involvement; Graduation/drop-out rates; Standard student test results; Academic/curriculum offerings; And student and school safety.

"I'm a parent and a resident and I'm just interested in seeing the school system grow and improve," said Glenn Wachler, a strategic plan committee member. "We love the teachers and academics is a big part of my family."

Wachler supports Janik's strategic plan and said he is proud of the community for passing the bond and getting the new buses.

"I think it's a good idea not to try to make leaps and bounds, but to take small steps each year," said Wachler. "There's no reason Charlevoix Public Schools can't be one of the premier systems in the state for academic standards."

Wachler said students deserve the things outlined in the strategic plan.

"I'd like to see us at the top of the state as far as school systems go," Wachler said. "The quickest way to raise enrollment is by becoming one of those top schools in the state."

Who stole St. Marys' 70 pound stone?

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating the theft of a 170-pound monument from St. Marys Cement in Charlevoix Township.

The 70-pound Petoskey stone and 100-pound maple tree trunk base are believed to have been stolen the night of Aug. 16 from the factory's main lobby off of 16000 Bells Bay Road.

"All we want is to have the object back," said St. Marys Cement Operations Manager Dirk Cox. "If

Local merit scores improving

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

The scores are finally in for the Michigan Merit Exam for Charlevoix area schools.

Not everyone is completely satisfied with the results though. Northwest Academy school leader John Bailey said he liked their social studies score but felt that his students could do a little better in the other areas.

"I would say we have to improve in all areas," said Bailey. "We passed our Adequate Yearly Progress test, though, so I'm happy about that."

Bailey

Out of the 14 students that were tested, Northwest got an 86 percent passing rate on social studies. To pass a section of the test, a student must receive either a level 1, advanced or level 2, proficient score.

In mathematics, Northwest tested 14 percent proficient or above; in science, 50 percent were proficient or above; and in writing, 21 percent were proficient or above.

Did stolen cash pay for embezzler's defense?

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Did 35-year-old Kevin Dale Lockman knowingly use at least $30,000 of wife Karla Sue's ill-gotten gains to pay her defense attorney in 2005?

Boyne City law enforcement officials believe so, but Antrim County Prosecuting Attorney Charles Koop must prove it.

"The allegation is that he knowingly or should have known the money he used was stolen or embezzled funds," said Koop, who was appointed to the case after a 2006 petition to appoint a special prosecutor was filed by Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema.

"I sent it over to Koop ... because, at the time, he (Kevin) was a DNR officer in my county," Jarema said. "I wanted to avoid any appearance of impropriety and I wanted him to get a fair shake."

Karla Lockman

Koop would not say why it has taken more than two years to charge Kevin Lockman with a crime.

"I can't address those issues at this point," he said. "Anything other than that (current charges) I'm barred by professional ethics to discuss, be-

Michigan Merit scores released

Northwest did not test in the reading and English/language arts portions of the test.

"We've taken steps towards improving," Bailey said. "Learnable Linguistics (see related story on page 16) is just one of the programs we're participating in to improve those scores."

The statewide scores were as follows:

In reading, 62 percent were proficient or above; in writing 41 percent were proficient or above; in English/language arts 52 percent were proficient or above; in mathematics 46 percent were proficient or above; in science 57 percent were proficient or above; and in social studies, 80 percent were proficient or above.

Janik

The scores for Charlevoix High School were significantly better, but they also had more students taking the exam.

Out of 102 students:

In math, 64 percent were proficient or above; in reading 75 percent were proficient or above; in science 78 percent were proficient or above; in social studies 90 percent were proficient or above; in writing 53 percent were proficient or above; and in English/language arts, 69 percent tested proficient or above.

"It's a good testament to our students and staff that our scores are at least 15 percent above the average all across the board," said Chet Janik, Charlevoix Public Schools superintendent.

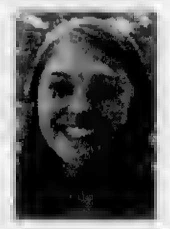
Recent graduate Anna Olson will be teaching pre-kindergarten at St. Mary School



Olson

She is 24 years-old and has a Bachelor of Science degree in education from Central Michigan University.

One of her goals for her first year of teaching is to have a fun hands-on learning environment.

"I love working with kids. I think it's going to be exciting to start the foundation of their learning," she said.

Adam Wood is 26 years old and said that he looks forward to building a relationship with the kids and helping them get to the level they want to be at when they enter the next grade.

Wood

"Ever since I was at a young age, I loved being around kids," he said "It's a year-round thing for me," Wood said of his time as a Mt. McSauba counselor.

Wood will be teaching the second grade. He got his degree in physical education and elementary education from Grand Valley State University.

Ear is garden fresh

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Our family has arrived at the season when much of our food comes from the vegetable garden and the lake.

Salmon, lake trout, the occasional bass, along with summer squash, tomatoes and potatoes, several kinds of peppers, Swiss chard, beets and enough garlic to keep vampires away make up much of our diet by August.

Overall, this has already been a fine and productive garden year.

The total potato crop was outstanding, with no potato beetles, scab or blight in evidence.

We have produced blue, red, yellow and brown potatoes enough to last all winter from four pounds of varied color seed potatoes.

It is not difficult to understand, both how the population of Europe grew dramatically after potatoes were introduced around 1600, and why all those starving Irish left when the potato crop failed.

I still have not discovered just how to make the Cardoon leaves more edible, but their fist-sized electric blue thistle-like flowers are attractive enough to justify the space they occupy.

We have more kinds of flowers this year than ever before, including some small blue asters, and something called eyeball plants, with clusters of any brown and yellow flowers that look disturbingly like jaundiced eyeballs.

A couple of packets of varied flowers (one packet for sunny places and one for shade) give us at least a dozen kinds of blooms we have not had before.

And, if some of them go to seed, the chances that there will be offspring in next year's garden space are improved. Sturdy volunteers, both from those tings I have planted and the common weeds are always welcome.

I have not planted dill and cilantro for at least five years, but each season the plants replace themselves vigorously.

An Amaranth, abundant Goosefoot and both a spring and fall crop of Winter Mustard are there every year without much help from me.

The Shoo-fly plants, also called Apple of Peru in honor of their original home, are another of the self-seeding kind, that I allow to grow because they seem to have some insect repellant character.

Anything to keep those troublesome insects away from the plants I really want to eat.

What is sometimes called Sweet Annie, but is really Wormwood, the flavoring of Absinthe, also keeps many insects at bay, and seeds itself.

Parsnips are new this year, and we have some hope that they will sweeten during the winter and be ready for harvest next March or April, before even the earliest spring growth.

My goal is to have a varied garden that seeds itself, weeds itself and repels insects It may be a few years before that is realized, but progress is being made.

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

A recent off-the-record conversation with a Charlevoix County Commissioner about the frightening rate at which the county is sued got me to thinking about all the things I could do with a few hundred thousand bucks after I sue my employers blind. Granted, we don't have any air quality issues, but the lack of cappuccino maker and pinball machine in the office is contributing to my severe mental distress.

And then there are the little old ladies who come in to tell me how much they hate me; I'm not kidding, they seem to be the only ones with the stones to tell me how they feel to my face.

The grown men always do it via phone, e-mail and even once a guy sent a letter to my home; a veiled threat? Perhaps.

The next step was to find an ambulance chaser with low enough self-esteem to handle my case. Contrary to popular belief, lawyers aren't as sleazy as I had earlier been led to believe.

Aw, who was I kidding? No judge would find in my favor And, have you been to jury duty lately? I'd sooner face Saddam's kangaroo court than the carnival of humanity not clever enough to get out of jury duty.

Civic obligation or no, the last time I went down there it looked like a casting call for Deliverance II; And that's not a crack at rednecks because I am from hillbilly stock and possess no fewer than five hick traits: tattoos, pickup, David Alan Coe albums, scars from a farming incident and an innate distrust for people with all their teeth.

What was I to do? I needed a fat settlement, and quick.

I considered writing my congressman, but he's running for reelection and if I had the money to bribe, er, contribute to his campaign, I wouldn't be in this situation.

Then, while watching the episode of the A-Team when Murdock decides he needs to be more like Face, it hit me: Perhaps I should run for office.

I know what you're thinking, "Gohs should work 'perhaps' into his vocabulary more often; it makes him sound scholarly.'"

Perhaps I will.

That's it, I'll run for office, and not just as a goof to spite my old boss; for some reason she used to get real peeved when I would tell people I was thinking of running for governor.

For the good of the nation you'd think there must be a dozen requirements which would preclude someone like me from running, but no. So long as that felony animal husbandry conviction from Tijuana remains buried, I may run for offices from township supervisor to state representative.

Frightening, huh?

We wouldn't dare put the position of taxi driver, surgeon, teacher, lawyer or soldier up for a vote, but we seem OK to do it with positions which wield infinitely more power

The man who can take this country to war on a whim, not saying that would ever happen, need not pass the basic skills test one would require of cigarette smoking monkey.

Now, that is not to say W. would have stuck the triangular block in the round hole, but I can certainly see a fist fight breaking out in the testing room when the man in the white coat insists that "Funkytown" is not a geographical location and "misunderestimate" is not a word.

How could this be? How could my grade school teachers have lied to me so? How could I look at my kids and honestly tell them 51 percent of the voters can tell the rest of the population what to do? And for no other reason than there were more of them.

Six of 10 people in a room could decide they should drink gasoline with dinner; that doesn't make it right.

More importantly, how could I focus on faking a slip-and-fall or stuffing dead rats into the heating ducts at work with the knowledge that our democracy is little more than a popularity contest for some of the most important job titles in existence?

By the time you read this, my bosses will likely have discovered my scheme and put the kibosh to operation "Settle out of Court."

Maybe it's all for the best. After all, I cannot have the dead skunk of frivolous litigation hanging 'round my neck when I run for governor next cycle.

Perhaps you'll consider giving me your vote.

LETTERS to the editor

DUBIOUS OF VACCINES

Editor:

Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency Medical Director, Dr. Joshua R. Meyerson, assured us about the safety and efficacy of vaccines in his piece, vaccinations are a health care achievement. (Letter to the editor "Take your medicine" Aug. 20 edition of Courier)

It should be pointed out, however, merely saying vaccines prevent disease, doesn't mean that they don't also have damaging side effects.

Meyerson dismissed any link between vaccines and autism, but since 1983, the number of vaccines children get has more than tripled.

At the same time, autism went from affecting one in 10,000 to the latest official rate of one in every 150 children.

This figure is outdated The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) announced it in February, 2007, but it was based on studies done back in 2000 and 2002.

It can hardly be considered a true picture of the autism disaster.

In Minnesota, the recognized rate is one in every 81 kids. Others put the United States average rate at one in every 67 children.

Almost 9,000 people came to Washington with Jenny McCarthy on June 4 to ask Congress to green our vaccines.

They cited the frightening exposure to toxins like mercury, aluminum, MSG, ether, formaldehyde and anti-freeze commonly found in vaccines.

Meyerson told us that official studies show no link between vaccines and autism, but a close look reveals that these are merely population studies done by looking at numbers of people.

They're notorious for being flawed and the results manipulated.

This kind of science was used extensively by the tobacco industry in the 1940s and '50s as proof that smoking didn't cause lung cancer.

Furthermore, there was never a study on the effects of so many vaccines on the developing immune system of a baby.

It's also important to note that the CDC has hundreds of individuals who have conflict of interest waivers because they have financial ties to the vaccine makers.

Meyerson cited the study by the Institute of Medicine in 2004 which concluded there was no link between vaccines and autism, but in truth, the institute did this report under the direction of the CDC.

Meyerson incorrectly claimed that the mercury-based preservative thimerosal is "no longer used in vaccines."

While mercury has been reduced to trace amounts in many children's vaccines, it's still in horrendous levels in others, as reported by Steve Wilson at ABC-7 WXYZ-TV Detroit.

Wilson told the public, "The truth is there's still as much as ever in 11 vaccines including most flu vaccines injected into pregnant women and kids, and some of them younger than 9 get two doses in a season. And also high levels of mercury from Thimerosal in tetanus shots and the boosters routinely injected into 11 year olds and also in some meningitis and diphtheria-tetanus formulas, too."

CONSIDER NEXT MEMORIAL DAY

Editor:

The true meaning of Memorial Day is all but forgotten.

Memorial Day is not Flag Day, July 4, Armed Forces Day or Veterans Day.

It's a day to remember the war dead and you don't do that with parades, picnics, pompous speeches, brass bands or hype for the current war.

Celebration and Memorial are not synonyms and the day was intended for visiting cemeteries, not beaches or amusement parks.

The degrading of the event began decades ago when the federal employee unions persuaded Congress to make federal holidays into three-day weekends and it was a stupid decision that has decreased the value of the concept of patriotism.

Not many Americans are really patriotic anymore and, for some, it's saluting whichever cheap politician happens to be in occupying the White House or rooting for whatever the current war happens to be.

It doesn't seem to matter if the war is just or unjust or if the politician is honest or a devious liar.

We are all going to die, but it has always seemed that worst death is the unnecessary death.

It should be the goal of American politicians to never send young men and women to an unnecessary war and that means you don't go to war against a country that is not a threat to the United States.

No American takes an oath to defend a foreign country or overthrow a foreign tyrant.

We take an oath to defend our Constitution and our country and nothing else

American patriotism has become so diluted that, when politicians publicly proclaim undying support for a foreign country, we don't even give it a second thought or remind them that they are Americans in America running for an American office to represent and serve the American people.

If they love a foreign country more than their own, then they are free to emigrate, but they should not be free to sacrifice the lives of young Americans on behalf of any foreign country.

Memorial Day should be a solemn and sad day as we remember all the young men and women who were denied the joys of a normal life span

War is vicious and cruel, but whether the war is just or unjust, necessary or unnecessary, those who die in it die honorably in service of their country. Never blame the soldier for the politician's war, and never allow anyone else to do so in your presence.

OLYMPIC-SIZED FAILURE

Editor:

The flame has been doused, and I'm not sure whether I'm angry with China or proud of United States' responses to the 29th Olympiad in Beijing.

We forgave the opening ceremony director for digitally enhancing the fireworks.

Hey, you guys, you invented fireworks centuries ago.

Why the need for the 21st century enhancements?

OK, we probably would have done it or something equally nationalistic to prove we were still ahead in that game.

We kinda understood your concentrating on Gold Medals or nothing, because we hadn't thought of it, always considering the total number of medals as the most important.

For our national ego, we still must cling to that concept for now and will probably change focus for London in 2012.

But your attitude, China, toward little kids is something I couldn't handle.

First, you had a cuter little girl lip sync the national anthem because the little girl singer wasn't adorable enough.

OK. We swallowed hard.

Then you tried lying about the ages of those little baby girls in gymnastics. That did it. How many more years will they be 16?

How long were those children the children of the state, not of their families?

Or were they children beyond the one child per family allowable number, so somehow they belonged to Beijing?

The Beijing driven regulations probably don't work exactly like that, but golly, you also had a totally controlled citizenry.

Not a single request for a protest in the established protest areas was governmentally found worthy.

Furthermore, citizens individually, willingly or not, gave up their roads and streets, their cars, and their jobs in polluting industry for two weeks.

Most of the United States thanks you, China, for the incredible technical spectacles of the opening and closing ceremonies and the brilliant presentations of the skills of international athletes.

Yeah, proud of you or not, angry or not, I thank you Doused or not, the Olympic flame burns on.

CHARLEVOIX SCHOOLS MERIT HIGH SCORES

Editor:

I was so impressed by the report of Charlevoix Public Schools student test scores that I heard at the monthly Board of Education meeting on Aug. 11, that I wanted to write a letter to help inform the community of this important point of pride.

As reported by superintendent, Chet Janik, and clarified by high school principal, Suzanne Klinger, 60 to 90 percent of Charlevoix Public School students scored 10 to 15 percent higher than the state average in all of the academic areas tested.

These are exceptional data.

Parents, the community, and the faculty and staff of all three Charlevoix Public Schools need to be praised for their hard work and commitment to academic excellence.

As in years past, the first goal of the Charlevoix Board of Education for the 2008 – 2009 school-year is to maintain academic excellence. The Strategic Plan, which was compiled by a group of community members this past winter, and adopted by the Board at Monday's meeting, also includes the goal of maintaining academic excellence.

As we struggle with the difficult challenges of the declining school budget, the community can be assured that the Board of Education will do all we can to maintain the staff necessary to keep programs in place that help students achieve academic excellence.

Avian botulism monitors, cleaners now sought

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

Courtesy photo

This loon on the beach near Cross Village is but one of many birds found dead from avian, or type E, botulism each year. Citizens are asked to watch their local beaches for signs of this disease so deadly to birds, cats and dogs.

Beach rangers needed to protect wild birds and even your pets from type E botulism.

Beach walkers and shoreline property owners are encouraged to educate themselves on how to help assess the extent of bird die-offs and learn proper disposal practices for dead birds.

"(Avian botulism) is not a risk to humans," said Andy Knott, of the Watershed Center Grand Traverse Bay. "This is type E botulism. The type humans would get is type A and we would get that from canned foods or other things."

Botulism is a neuromuscular illness caused by a toxin that is produced by the bacterium Clostridium botulinum.

Migratory birds such as common loons, endangered piping plovers, mergansers, long-tailed ducks, grebes, scaup, cormorants and gulls are the bird species most commonly affected by type E botulism.

"It's safe to swim, just don't let your dogs eat dead fish or birds on the beach," said Knott. "We've only had one case in the last five years or so of a dead dog from this botulism."

Citizens who spot a dead bird on the beach are asked to dispose of it.

Proper disposal includes wearing disposable gloves, taping the bird's sharp bill to prevent it from tearing the trash bag you place the bird in and then immediately placing the bag in a dumpster or outgoing garbage vessel. You may also bury the bird so long as it is at least two feet deep and far from shore.

Knott said that they're just now beginning to see some confirmed deaths in Ludington, as well as a non-confirmed one in Manistee. A case is likely to include several dead birds in a specific area. If there are a dozen or more dead birds, it tends to point towards a botulism outbreak.

Botulism spores (the resting stage of the bacteria) are naturally occurring in soils and aquatic sediments of many lakes and in the gills and digestive tracts of fish living in those lakes. The spores can remain in an ecosystem for a very long time, sometimes years, and are very resistant to temperature changes.

The spores themselves are harmless until the correct environmental factors prompt them to germinate and begin growing.

"It can be spread up the food chain, if the conditions are right," Knott said. "If there's a lot of oxygen in the dying algae, then it gets to the zebra mussels, then the Gobi's, then the birds eat the Gobi's and then they wash upon the shore and possibly get to your dog."

Knott said that another means of transferring botulism, which is alarming, is through flies and/or maggots feeding on a dead bird and then infecting another bird that's still alive. "This is very disconcerting, especially for the endangered or more scarce species of birds," he said.

The severity of type E botulism depends on the conditions, according to Knott. "It (the bacteria) can be inert in the soil for years. Eventually, it just builds up in the food web," Knott said. "It depends on the animals effected. A couple of maggots could kill a plover."

He added that it's scary to think that a couple of maggots could kill an endangered species such as the piping plover.

Knott said that there are two different life cycles of botulism every year. The first cycle is in August and the second is in late October and early November. "It has a lot to do with water temperature. The warmer the water, the easier it is for the bacteria to spread," he said. "There seems to be a temperature link because there are fewer deaths when the water has been cooler."

In response to concerns about outbreaks and to inform the public better, the Watershed Center Grand Traverse Bay is heading the Grand Traverse Bay Botulism Network. The purpose of the network is to monitor beaches in northern Michigan and respond to avian botulism outbreaks.

The botulism network includes the Watershed Center Grand Traverse Bay, Michigan Sea Grant, Inland Seas Education Association, Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore, Michigan Loon Preservation Association, Common Coast Research & Conservation, White Pine Associates and Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council.

"The Michigan Department of Natural Resources is actively supporting what we're doing we support what they do," he said. "The MDNR is a key player in all of this because they're the only ones that can do the lab work."

Knott said that the MDNR will test two birds of each species in a certain county and then they won't process anymore of that species.

If those two birds are determined to have died of botulism, then that area is infected.

For more information from the Watershed Center Grand Traverse Bay, visit: http://www.gtbay.org/ or e-mail: botulism@gtbay.org.

Call 347-1181 for your free botulism clean-up kit from the watershed council.

Grand Valley State University with a degree in social studies and a minor in psychology.

"I have a lot of goals being this is my first year," she said. "One of the things I'd like to do is try to build up the performing arts program."

Kemp

Courtney Kemp, 25, will be the special education teacher at the Elementary and Middle school.

Kemp majored in special education with a minor in history at Central Michigan University.

She and her husband Dan have a two-year-old daughter and are expecting another daughter in November.

"I'm looking forward to getting to know everybody and getting settled into the new house," she said.

Kemp said she's known that she's always wanted to be a teacher, ever since she was a little girl.

• Northwest Academy:

Matt Peters taught in Ellsworth for 12 years and then taught for six more years in McBain.

Peters will teach seventh through 12th-grade math.

"Math isn't always the easiest subject to learn, but I'm going to try to make it fun," said Peters.

Peters is also certified in computer education and has coached.

A life-long resident of Ellsworth, Alex Busman has been hired as a social studies and elementary physical education teacher.

Just out of college, he was first a long-term substitute teacher at Ellsworth.

He got his high school certification from Spring Harbor University.

"I just love being around kids and influencing lives," he said.

LITTLE TRAVERSE BAY ENVIRONMENTAL PROJECT

Thank You…

Dear Friends, Residents and Visitors:

Labor Day has always been the traditional occasion to mark the end of summer. It's also the signal for looking back to enjoy our most recent memories of time spent with family and friends in all that Northwest Michigan offers.

It's been another terrific summer for our region, and we thank you for your role in making that happen.

Without comparison, Northwest Michigan is THE destination for our state. Our local shops, restaurants, resorts and attractions offer uniqueness and excellence. Area residents and business owners aim daily to make our region a place where wonderful memories can be made. And, corporate citizens like CMS Land are working with local leaders to ensure our precious natural resources—Little Traverse Bay and its shoreline—are protected for residents and visitors to enjoy long into the future.

Our region's natural beauty is unrivaled, and so many people are working tirelessly to keep it that way. The summer season may be ending, but those efforts will continue. Next year, East Park is scheduled to reopen, marking what will be another great summer in Northwest Michigan.

Thank you again and best wishes,

Peter Fitzsimons, Petoskey Area Visitors Bureau
Andy Hayes, Northern Lakes Economic Alliance
Chris Etienne, Bay Harbor

Edger

Charlevoix's Edger chosen for Albion's track team

Albion College head cross country coach Hayden Smith has announced the list of 18 runners who will compete for the women's team this fall.

The Britons' roster includes Lindi Edger, the daughter of Todd Edger and Mary Edger of Charlevoix and a graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Edger is a sophomore at Albion.

Albion finished second in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association last fall, and the Britons are hoping to maintain their position in the league this fall. Albion begins the season Aug. 30 by running in the Vanderbilt Invitational in Holland.

The Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association jamboree, which counts for a third in determining the league standings, is slated for Sept. 26 in Notre Dame, Ind.

The intercollegiate championships are scheduled for Nov. 1 in Three Rivers.

For more information about the Albion College women's cross country team, please contact sports information director Bobby Lee at blee@albion.edu or (517) 629-0434.

Visit www.albion.edu/sports anytime for the latest Briton sports information.

Foster makes Albion soccer team

Former Rayder Emily Foster has been chosen to help Albion's 2008 soccer team go all the way. Emily is daughter of William Foster of Charlevoix and Hannelore Foster. Emily, a first-year student at Albion, is listed as a defender on the Briton's team.

NWA staff training to deal with dyslexia

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

A new teaching project is taking place at Northwest Academy to help students with dyslexia

The program, Learnable Linguistics, is being spearheaded by two specialized instructors of dyslexic individuals.

"Susan and I are going to spend a year with the staff and students of Northwest Academy to complete the teacher training and teaching practicum," said Jane Andrews, Founding Director of the Michigan Dyslexia Institute: Harhor Springs Center. "Every student in the school will benefit from this program, especially those students who struggle to learn as expected."

Andrews and her partner Susan Vanderlinde said that participants in the program will learn about the structure of the English language

They will learn and practice a structured, phonetic and multi-sensory approach to teaching reading, spelling and other language skills hased on the Orton-Gillingham approach and philosophy.

The objectives in the project are to first train the teaching faculty at Northwest Academy the Learnahle Linguistics program.

Secondly, they will screen students at the heginning of the year for the purpose of setting a baseline against which to measure improvement.

They will then re-screen students at the end of the year and compare each score to evaluate the gain/loss of skills during the year.

The two final steps include using the Learnable Linguistics materials consistently and having the teachers keep a journal throughout the year of what they teach and how the skills they learned from Andrews and Vanderlinde helped or hindered their classroom activities.

Andrews said that every teacher she has trained for the project over the past 20 years asked her the same question: "Why didn't I learn this in college?"

"Susan and I began writing the Learnahle Linguistics seven years ago," said Andrews. "Over the years, we have heen unable to find appropriate educational materials to supplement our teaching. Seven years ago, a parent of one of our students strongly urged us to write appropriate curriculum that is needed for those who learn differently."

"We hegan to write in January 2001 and the curriculum is now complete," Andrews said. "We have organized the curriculum into 10 units which is over 5,000 pages of original stories, riddles, word lists, sentences, activities and work sheets for every language concept taught."

The most unique thing ahout Learnable Linguistics, the duo said, is the educational materials which are enhanced by visual art. These materials are supplied to every teacher in the program.

"No other school staff in northern Michigan will have the curriculum to use over the next year that NWA will have," said Vanderlinde. "It is a win-win situation for teachers, students and parents. This kind of training will affect hundreds of students who will enter NWA for years to come."

Jana Andrews and Susan Vanderlinde (left) will be training teachers at Northwest Academy in a specialized program for dyslexic students and those with other reading difficulties through Learnable Linguistics.

Cement company: return monument somebody had a change of heart and wanted to drop if off at the doorstep, we'll donate the reward to a local charity."

He added, "It's not the money, we just want it back because a former employee put a heck of an effort into it."

St. Marys is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the return of the item which was built and donated by former 40-year employee Alan Towsley and has been in St. Marys Cement's main lobby for years.

"It's probably not worth a heck of a lot to anybody else, but to us it's worth a lot because a very respected retiree put the effort into it," Cox said. "It took him a year to polish it and prepare it."

So far, police have no leads.

"We haven't heard anything unfortunately," Cox said. "It wasn't one of our employees, not at all. Our guys are way better than that."

Cox said this is the first case of vandalism at the plant of which he is aware.

"Somebody was aware of it being here and took it," he said. "Our reception area is open to the public and the rest of the office is locked down. It was out there on display, but it's going to be secured from now on."

Cox added, "We're going to put in an internal security system with video cameras."

Some workers on the nightshift do remember seeing a suspicious vehicle leaving the plant, but could not identify any specifics about the vehicle or driver.

"We've got a crew on at night, but they're busy," Cox said. "We get deliveries around the clock, 24/7, in this type of business. We're just going to have to tighten up security."

Anyone with information on the whereabouts of the monument is asked to contact the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at 547-4461.

Kevin Lockman could face jail time cause it might affect his ability for a fair trial."

Koop added that the issue "has been discussed" but refused to elaborate.

Kevin turned himself in to authorities, Thursday, Aug. 21, long enough to be booked on charges of receiving and concealing stolen property of $20,000 or more, and was then released on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

"Based upon information received from banks when we were serving search warrants on the Lockman accounts, we found checks that were written to Fred Gibson after Kevin had been informed the money she possessed had been stolen," said Assistant Chief of Boyne City Police Jeff Gettel. "The bond is only meant to ensure a persons show up for court, bond is not meant to punish."

According to Gettel's complaint filed, Aug. 18, Kevin is thought to have used embezzled funds from June through November, 2005 to pay Gibson, then his wife's attorney.

Karla Sue was arraigned on June 23, 2005 and found guilty in August, 2006 of two counts of embezzling more than $20,000 for stealing at least $859,278.25 from Northern Preferred Title Company for a duration of January to May, 2005.

Kevin is scheduled to be arraigned at 10:30 a.m., Sept. 2 in Charlevoix's 90th District Court. While Koop is from an outside county, he said the trial will likely occur in a Charlevoix courtroom.

If convicted, Kevin Lockman could face up to 10 years in prison and be forced to pay nearly $90,000 in restitution.

Karla Sue continues to serve a five to 10-year prison sentence at the Huron Valley Complex in Washtenaw County.

Kevin could not be reached for comment at home or work by press time.

Smarter from the Ground Up

Waiver means education for homebound

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Northwest Academy is one of only three schools in the state that will be getting the Seat Time Waiver.

The Seat Time Waiver allows a school to offer an online curriculum to their students and still get funding for him or her.

"It will allow us to provide resources to these kids by putting together an online curriculum for them," said John Bailey, Northwest Academy School Leader. "It's written into the program to send a mentor out (to the student's home) for up to two hours a week."

Bailey said they can also provide a computer to these kids if needed

According to Bailey, the state doesn't need a reason for why a child isn't in school, they just want them to be serviced.

"There's a number of reasons why a child may not be attending school," said Bailey.

"Maybe they or someone in their family has fallen ill, or the family is poor and the child needs to go to work, or he or she is incarcerated or pregnant. It could be anything."

Bailey said that it used to be that a child had to be present in the classroom on count day for the school to get funding for that student, but said the Seat Time Waiver allows schools more flexibility for their students.

He also explained that there may be students that they can't do this for.

For example, a child that lives in a home without electricity obviously couldn't benefit from the program.

Bailey explained that this Seat Time Waiver can also extend to incarcerated students.

"If a student is in jail, they can still be educated through us through this online curriculum and we'll send out a mentor for two hours a week to work with the inmate and we'll get funding for that as well," he said.

Bailey explained that the idea of a student in jail benefiting from the Seat Time Waiver is still only being talked about, but it is in the works.

The Seat Time Waiver program is currently only for high school students.

"I think it's an exciting time for the school," said Phoebe Gohs, the Curriculum Committee Chair and early elementary teacher at Northwest Academy.

"It will be interesting to see how it works. Being a literacy person, I think that critical literacy is going to have to be a big part of the curriculum."

Bailey said this program is a new offering in Michigan.

"The issue is that there are a lot of children who are homebound and sometimes these kids get lost in the shuffle," said Gary Stutzman, Northwest's Chief Administrative Officer. "This is a way for the school to be involved without seeing the kids everyday. I think the state is fulfilling a need through this."

Bailey said that he and his administrators were able to compile a list of nearly 30 names of students who are not attending school anywhere and that this program would be perfect for them as well.

Bailey explained that it could give second thoughts to families who home school their children.

"The home school families around here are great, but some of them might learn about this program and find that it's something they can benefit from," he said

Stutzman said Seat Time Waivered students will be closely monitored.

"I want it to be clear (that) we're not just giving them a computer and a book and then letting them go," he said.

"That's where the two hours of mentorship comes into place. That's an important part of the proposal."

To learn more about Seat Time Waiver eligibility, call Northwest Academy at 547-9000.

SEPT. 4

Charity golf

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual "Porker" golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 4 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Participants will have the added benefit of knowing that proceeds from this year's event will help provide clean drinking water to families lacking access to this basic need. The Rotary Club of Charlevoix is a partner in the "Villa Tabacalera Children's Safe Water Project" which aims to purchase and install up to 240 biosand filters in individual households within rural villages located near Santiago, Dominican Republic.

The water in these communities is of very poor quality, which causes numerous health problems. Through education and filter use the health of 350 families or 1,400 people will improve considerably. Entry fee is $40 per person. This is a four-person scramble. The entry fee includes golf, a dinner buffet at Giuseppe's, and the traditional tournament trademark: prizes galore. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, and to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle. Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop.

SEPT. 7

End of summer stroll

Dozens of folks turned out for the annual Charlevoix Bridge Walk to celebrate the close of yet another summer. The 90-degree temperatures did not stop a capacity crowd from making the southbound trek. Proceeds from this year's bridge walk fundraiser go to veterans memorial fund.

Blood supply at critical level

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

"The need for blood always seems to exceed the supply, especially during the summer months," said Seth VanHoven of the American Red Cross out of Lansing.

VanHoven said the need for blood during the summer months tends to go up because people tend to go on vacation or would rather be enjoying the nice weather instead of donating blood.

"People are more active and so the supply is just not there when people need it," he said. "There's more accidents because people are traveling and, therefore, more patients."

VanHoven explained that the blood types O- negative and O-positive have dropped to even lower levels, which is bad because type O blood is universal. He explained that O-positive can go to anyone with a positive blood type.

"A one day supply of blood is around 40 units (or 40 pints), and we consider a three day supply adequate. A five day supply is above and that's really what we aim for," said VanHoven. "An auto accident, for example, might need 40 units of blood. That's a whole day's worth of collecting."

According to VanHoven, the average person has about 10 to 12 pints of blood in their body and when they make a donation, they're only giving one pint. The average person can give blood every 56 days, that turns out to be about six times a year.

"By donating, you can save about three lives," said Van Hoven. "It only takes about 10 minutes and you get juice and cookies afterwards."

VanHoven explained that for A-, their blood bank currently has 198 units of blood, which is an optimal amount and a mini-

CC price increase

Beginning this week, the Charlevoix Courier single copy price has been raised to 75 cents. Home delivery prices remain unchanged. This price increase is a direct result of the skyrocketing price of newsprint, which will have nearly doubled by the end of 2008, and gasoline prices. Charlevoix Courier's last increase was from 35 cents to 50 cents in November, 1987.

Charlevoix's own amazing race

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Ten people, organized into five teams, will compete in an "Amazing Race" for prizes through Charlevoix County on Oct. 4.

The participants in the race were winners of an auction which was a part of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation's 2007 Holly Daze Gala.

"The tasks they will be asked to complete will not be dangerous but will tied to the stop," said Lyn Jenks, Executive Director of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation.

"For example, if the site was Charlevoix's Lighthouse, which it will not be, they might have to climb some ladder rungs to find a reward and the next clue before moving on."

According to Jenks, upon learning what the task is, each team will decide which member has the skill to complete the task or whether they must merge their talents together.

"Each team will accumulate triumph points throughout the race," said Jenks.

"When combined with overall completion time and extra points, a winner will be determined."

Participants will drive to designated sites throughout the county, find clues as they go and complete tasks at each stop. Each clue will reveal the next stop.

"Each stop will be a special place in the County where the racers will experience more about the area, meet challenges, have fun and receive prizes and mementos of their journey," Jenks said.

She added that, since the race occurs all over the County, it will be impossible for people to watch. For anyone who has ever watched the television show, they would know that each stop is in a secret location.

"We would also have to let them know where the stops are and we don't want to do that, obviously," she said.

She also said that staying out of the way should be no problem for the general public as most stops are "out of the way."

Jenks also said all racers must obey the speed limits and other laws as they figure out the clues and complete their challenges.

"I came up with the idea when our committee was thinking up fun experiences that people could bid on," Jenks said.

"We know that many people have all the stuff they want, so bidding on fun experiences at the event auction is a great way to involve people and raise money for the hospital."

She added, "I had seen the television show and thought this might be fun on a much smaller scale."

The event kicks off at noon at the Hospital and it should take racers between five and six hours to complete the entire course.

Following the competition, they will all meet at the home of Jim and Patti Aikin for a dinner and celebration in honor of the winner.

The gala auction was held at Castle Farms last year on Nov. 29, the proceeds of which support the purchase and installation of digital mammography at the Hospital.

Ninja turtles worth big bucks

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

When Nathan Bartlett, 25, and his mother, Sue, went to the Antiques Roadshow they had no idea what his old Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles were going to be worth.

Though Nathan still had some old Turtles from when he was a kid, he had bought six brand new ones on eBay about two years ago that were still in their packages.

"I bought each of them online for about $5," said Nathan. "The appraiser told me they were each worth somewhere in the neighborhood of about $100 to $150. I was really excited about it."

Nathan said he's not an avid toy collector, but his roommate at the time was.

When the two of them saw the Turtles mint in their packaging, Nathan's roommate persuaded him that they were a good buy.

"(Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles) was the show that just always stuck with me," Nathan said. "Those are the same toys I still have from when I was a kid."

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles was a cartoon program which began in the late 1980s. It featured four turtles who had been given humanoid attributes such as speach, the ability to walk on two legs and a love of pizza after they were exposed to toxic waste.

Nathan said he applied to attend the Roadshow and received an e-mail in January or February for tickets to a taping being held in Grand Rapids at Van Andel Arena.

The show was one of six tapings that took place for the upcoming season.

Antiques Roadshow is aired on PBS and features people with unique or old items to be appraised by experts in that particular field.

"I'd say there were about 5,000 people there waiting to see how much their things were worth," said Sue. "There were about 60 or 70 appraisers there, each one specialized in something different, like toys, or glassware or paintings. There were a lot of people there with paintings. It made us really glad that we didn't have a painting, because it just would have been a longer wait."

Sue explained that the tickets denote a specific time for each person to show up, like 9 a.m. or 10 a.m. and that you are not to show up more than a half-hour earlier than the designated time.

"Once you get there, you're led into a big line leading into the arena and then that line branches off into specific categories, depending on what kind of item you've got," she

Teach them well

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

We are off and running with or without our Keds to keep up with a new school year.

Now more than ever it's important to be there for our children providing them with the support they seek and confidence they yearn for.

Families are moving in and out, relocating for career changes, family situations and economic layoffs.

Some children are affected more than others as they leave the comforts of home for a regimen that may be fun for some and difficult for others.

As I listen to teachers prepare their lessons, set up their classrooms and organize their own families, I am amazed what the State of Michigan continues to have them accomplish in a brief school year beginning with Kindergarten.

What happened to play, sharing, listening and exploring in the earlier grades?

Young children need time to develop and all are at various learning levels, so the playing field cannot be the same.

Continuous testing may not prove everything we want to know about a child.

Young children are like little sponges and identifying items, colors, letters and numbers are where it all begins.

Stories from big books of the past are replaced with semicolons, capitals, commas and correctly identifying adjectives and adverbs.

So with this in mind as a parent I would ask questions of the school my child is entering if there is opportunity to exercise, run, jump, climb, move to music, study the color wheel and continue the rule of sharing.

I feel comfortable in saying most schools cover this well but a part of me says there is a lot of testing taking place that is forced our way due to financial reasons based on what a legislator thinks we should be doing.

Our jobs as teachers and parents are to instill confidence, independence, motivation and curiosity.

This needs to be part of the young child's curriculum which is socially and psychologically more important.

NCLB was designed with the idea that schools would be equipped equally to help a child succeed.

But we need to remind folks that the quality of a school cannot be based solely on test scores.

Not all of us learn through the same style of learning nor at the same rate.

Children need time to discover and soak in what is taught.

Stopwatches and paperwork will not improve a good thing that was already taking place.

It's the "aha moment" when a child figures something out on their own that is a wondrous thing, not filling in bubbles on a test score at breakneck speed.

With all of this in mind its important to remember the basics to help our children succeed.

In our busy mornings, when both parents leave for their job or second job, it's important to remember to hug your little one before and after school, and provide quiet time in your day to revive and visit.

Children who feel loved are more likely to feel confident.

Listen to your child especially at bedtime. When you encourage them to speak they feel validated just as you do when someone listens to you at work. Remember children learn by your example.

If you badmouth teachers, students or a principal, they will repeat what they hear and will have the same negative attitude.

As a parent, be realistic about your child's abilities and encourage them to try new things.

Pushing them too hard in areas where they struggle will cause frustration for you and your child.

Take time to talk to the teacher about anything your child struggles with.

Go to the library, tell family stories and read together.

Provide a quiet place and time to study without a TV blaring in the background.

Limit television watching to things you have decided on as a parent and tape it if necessary to show at a better time.

Homework is a good thing as long as it encourages self discipline and time management.

Research has shown us that a child who completes homework will do better in school.

Over scheduling a child with activities just so you can talk about it at your social gatherings may not be the healthiest for your child. We cannot live vicariously through them.

Our job is to guide them and facilitate what activities will meet their needs.

Though it seems legislation rules our educational plans, remember it is you, as parents, grandparents and guardians, who have the final say on what is best for your child.

Our teachers are equipped to answer your questions and look forward to working with you as a new school year begins.

It sometimes seems daunting but we are all in this together and together we need to think and act upon what is best for your child's future because they in turn will be the ones caring for us.

Trust me on this one.

McCain 'n' Palin: the hero ticket?

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

American war hero John McCain had barely chosen Alaska governor Sarah Palin to be his running mate and already talk of her heroism had spread to the 24-hour infotainment network.

Apparently, she is a hero for choosing not to terminate her youngest child Trig, who suffers* (*the politically correct term is "blessed") from Downs Syndrome. This got me foaming at the mouth and pounding my fist into the defenseless arm of the sofa.

First they called McCain a hero for getting shot down and captured. Apparently the folks who gave him the awards believed McCain's alleged resistance to torture convinced the North Vietnamese to end the practice. I find that hard to believe.

The fact that his father was a high-ranking member of the military and that the United States needed a good poster child for their failing war seems a much more likely explanation for his dozen or so commendations.

Nonetheless, whether these two deserve the title is unimportant. The fact is they are both being heralded as champions over adversity.

I know, I know, the definition of hero has changed over the years. When I was a kid, a hero was someone who ran into a burning building to save another person; a hero was someone who thwarted an armed assailant; a hero was someone who risked their own safety to defend another.

Nowadays it seems one cannot fall into the gutter without coming up smelling like a hero.

In our modern era, you're a hero just for having something bad happen to you.

Got cancer? You're a hero; stuck in a wheelchair? You're a hero; single mother? Hero; born with 12 toes? Hero; give your kid up for adoption? Hero, Don't give your kid up for adoption? Hero, and the list continues.

Hey, I get it. Life really sucks sometimes.

Bad things happen to good people, and some people endure much more physical pain and mental anguish than others, but simply suffering does not a hero make.

I heard a clever line in a movie once. This guy said that Superman isn't really a hero because the man of steel cannot get hurt. He saves people because he can, and since he cannot be harmed (unless you've got a pocket full of Kryptonite) there is no sacrifice.

Of course, by today's standards, Superman really is a hero.

His home planet blew up, he was abandoned by his parents and he's constantly being chased by Gene Hackman and Ned Beatty.

Do you really think Clark Kent would settle for skunk faced Lois Lane if he wasn't riddled with low self esteem and abandonment issues? C'mon, the woman is homely even by Krypton standards.

Don't get me wrong, the preceding does not mean beauty and the beast won't make for a stellar presidential team, but can we please keep the hero worship to those who deserve it, like Aqua Man and Super Mario.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I've got to go save a plate of helpless nachos from burning in a microwave.

Didn't know I was the heroic type, did you?

GUILD'S GRATITUDE

Editor:

On behalf of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild, I wish to thank everyone that helped to make our second annual silent auction a huge success, especially the donors, purchasers, committees and media. The donations were very interesting and it really was a fun day. We couldn't have asked for a more beautiful setting to display our wares than the hospital's new solarium. Be sure to watch for our date next year.

WAIVER IS WONDERFUL

Editor:

Again NWA has proven to me that their focus for children is above and beyond with their applying for and receiving this Seat Time Waiver from the state. They see this waiver as an opportunity to serve the young people and kids in our community that otherwise would not have a chance for continued education. Education is so important for the future of our children and for the growth and development of our community. NWA has taken this step to advance any child who has a desire to be successful in their education however can not adhere to the day to day schedule of a classroom setting. To give them the opportunity to learn, advance in education and have pride in themselves with respect and compassion is what Northwest Academy strives for at their school.

The opportunity Northwest Academy is giving to young people and children is incredible and with the support system they will have to assist any student accepting this opportunity to continue their education will certainly bring successful education achievement to each one!

I am thankful that NWA is not just looking at the children in their classrooms but looking at our community and all the children they can help. Every child and/or young person deserves the opportunity to further their education and NWA has found a way to help!

ALL NOT WELL THAT ENDS WITH A WELL

Editor:

Recent environmental looking public relations advertisements in various northwest Michigan newspapers and CMS Lands' Web site are being used to promote a proposed injection well in Star Township "as a safe, cost-effective solution to the disposal of contaminated wastewater originating from Bay Harbor."

The origin of the contaminated wastewater problem begins in 1994 when the developers, which include two subsidiaries of CMS Energy, sought a "cost effective" way to develop Bay Harbor and received a covenant not to sue from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality in exchange for undertaking certain closure activities. In 2004, for "technical reasons" CMS stopped treating the contaminated wastewater being collected leading to a visible release of highly caustic pH leachate and metal, mercury and arsenic, into Lake Michigan.

Presently the contaminated wastewater is first treated on site; then part is transported by truck to the Grand Traverse Wastewater Treatment Plant for further treatment before being discharged. CMS, as part of its "cost effective" plan, wants to bypass this additional treatment using the rationale that, "Trucking the treated water off-site is not an ideal, cost-effective, long-term solution because it increases truck traffic on Northwest Michigan roads." However, CMS does not explain exactly how using the injection well will reduce truck traffic as the contaminated wastewater will still be trucked to the well. CMS avoids explaining why fully treated water discharged from a treatment plant is not environmentally safer than injecting partially treated contaminated wastewater into the ground.

CMS claims the well will be safe. Keep in mind it was CMS Energy or its subsidiaries that developed and implemented the prior 'safe' plan of burying the CKD piles and collection of contaminated wastewater which have now failed. Based upon past experience at this site, who can insure the proposed injection well will work as planned, will be safe as promised or will not also fail due to "technical reasons."

In the 1880's the Antrim Iron Company began disposing of industrial waste in a matter which was believed to be safe by the standards of the day. A hundred years and 18 million plus dollars later, the Citizens of Antrim are all too familiar with "cost effective" and "safe" disposal standards of the day – the Tar Lake clean up. Compare the clean up costs for that project to the 40 thousand dollar line of credit Beeland is required to have only for the for closure of the well but nothing for clean-up.

In a hundred years will our descendants be looking back, shaking their heads in disbelief saying, "what were they thinking?"

CMS promotes Bay Harbor as providing 700 jobs, contributing more than $110 million in taxes and more than $40 million in wages and services since its inception.

All may be true, but Antrim Iron in its day also contributed jobs, taxes and wages. The questions CMS leaves unanswered: How many jobs will be created in Antrim County?

How many millions of taxes will be generated in Antrim County?

How many million of dollars in wages will be generated in Antrim County?

Who will pay for the clean up if this plan also fails for technical reasons?

The contaminated wastewater is generated from water migrating through several large buried CKD piles, some of which are under a member's only 27-hole golf course. EPA reports leachate is being intercepted each day in ranges between 90,000 and 200,000 gallons.

During the golf season millions and millions of gallons of water are applied to the golf course. It is common sense that this would increase the water migration through the CKD piles only to then become pH and metal laden contaminated wastewater.

If true, would not it be logical, at least as a partial solution, to reduce or eliminate this water usage?

But then, I am not an environmental scientist so I cannot speak to the science, but only as to what appears to be common sense.

In an attempt to improve CMS' image of being a environmental steward in it's clean up efforts at the Little Traverse Bay CKD Release it's recent public relations campaign uses terms like "Little Traverse Bay Environmental Project" or "Cleaning Our Shores – Protecting Our Bay" with a "cost effective" plan. "Cost-effective" remedy is but a corporate euphemism for cheaper. Perhaps being monetarily "cost-effective" in the past as opposed to "environmentally effective" is in part what has led to today's problem.

Instead of public relations ads and Web sites ballyhooing images of environmental stewardship and responsibility, would not we all be better served by genuine stewardship as opposed to "cost effective" stewardship?

Agria speaks on community gardening

Novelist Mary Agria, author of the 2006 best-selling TIME in a Garden, will be the featured speaker on her writing and the challenges of "Gardening in Community" at the Charlevoix Area Garden Club at 1:30 p.m., Sept. 9 at the library.

The program is free, but donations are appreciated

The 30-plus-year resident of Bay View Agria has a long-time interest in the unique challenges faced by gardeners in northern Michigan.

"The climate and soil conditions here can be unforgiving and frustrating to any gardener, even experienced ones," she said.

"The beautiful thing about community gardening is that during group work sessions, folks learn from each other what will work out there and what doesn't. It's a never-ending adventure."

Since her novel deals with older adults and is based on her own experience, she is particularly sensitive to how difficult it can be to pursue gardening in one's senior years on one's own.

"Our backs may not take heavy digging any longer," she said. "Or, maybe a trick knee keeps us from bending a lot. The neat thing about community gardening is that we can gravitate to the jobs that we enjoy or do well and still keep gardening; whatever our physical limitations."

She added, "The generations can also learn a great deal if they garden together. We are all children of the earth, whatever our age. As recent concern about global warming shows, responsible attitudes toward green things growing is a legacy we older folk simply must pass on to future generations. Gardening is already the largest leisure-time activity in the US and UK, but we have a long, long way to go to make communities and people realize what happens to the ground, our plants and bushes has an enormous impact on our own lives as well."

Agria's novel, TIME in a Garden, starts with the idea that, "We all do battle with stony ground and unseasonable dry spells over the years. To survive, we learn to root out our share of quack grass, turn over spadefuls of spent or decimated ground and plant again. Though we may not call ourselves gardeners, it is the human experience."

She added, "Plants need us, but we need them as much if not more. They teach us how to live together, to reach out and create beauty of which we are all a part."

Agria writes a monthly column on gardening and spirituality in a regional northern Michigan newspaper.

She has been a frequent guest speaker at Michigan State University Extension Master Gardener programs including an upcoming awards program. You can learn more about Agria and her works at www.mary-agria.com.

City's energy audit may save thousands

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

U.S. Energy Engineers recently completed an energy audit of four city buildings in Charlevoix.

The report concentrated on the lighting and heating ventilation and air conditioning (or HVAC as the report refers to it) needs of the buildings and how to save energy for each of them. Based upon the review of utility costs for all city buildings, the staff felt they should focus their time on the four buildings which consume the most energy.

"We looked at all aspects that would save the city money," said Dr. Felix Goto, President of U.S. Energy Engineers. "We're engineers, we're not here to sell anything."

The four buildings that underwent the audit were City Hall/Fire Department; Water Treatment Plant; Wastewater Treatment Plant, and the Mt. McSauba Ski Lodge.

"Though we've done audits for mostly companies in the Grand Rapids area, we're trying to do more audits for places up north because we believe we can help with their energy and help them better manage their resources," said Goto. "I used to work up north and there wasn't such a push for energy efficiency. We should target them because they usually spend more than they should."

Goto said that he's seen other companies try to do energy audits and fail because some of them may be trying to sell a unit, where his company is getting paid soley to come in, take measurements, do the math and give solutions.

"Charlevoix faired pretty well," Goto said. "I've seen some better and I've seen some worse. Charlevoix has a lot of older systems in their buildings, but they're well-maintained so they're holding up pretty well."

U.S. Energy Engineers put together a 30 page report of their findings. The report was developed to research ways for the city to save on escalating energy costs.

A few of the solutions Goto's engineers suggested were to do a thermo-stress analysis on the pipe system at the water plant.

Another suggestion included putting lighting sensors up in the ski-lodge. "This is a $25 piece of equipment that could save the city a few hundred dollars a year," Goto said. "Also, you don't need 1,000 watt bulbs in there. That's just too much."

The report makes suggestions for many areas to have occupancy and daylight sensors in many rooms, because otherwise, the lights in those rooms are left on all day long with nobody even in them.

The U.S. Energy Engineers also gave a variety of options for conserving energy in the general boiler and hot water systems at the water filtration plant.

"The city certainly benefited from the audit. It raised our awareness of energy saving strategies and techniques," said Rob Straebel, Charlevoix City Manager.

"The things we get out of this audit are things that will help inform us on making the right investments. The report will let us know how much money we have to spend to make money."

Straebel got the idea for an energy audit from a conference he attended from the Michigan Municipal League about ways to cut energy costs. "I just called around to other municipalities and they informed me that they (U.S. Energy Engineers) had the best price for the service," he said.

Straebel

Straebel and other staff members felt that it was important for city council to discuss the information in the audit because many of the recommendations could be part of the proposed expenditures for the 2009-10 yearly budget.

"Looking at the report and the money we need to spend, it should take us about two years to break even and re-cooperate the costs on most of the things, like lighting," said Straebel.

According to Straebel, it cost the city around $3,000 for the audit. The audit brought six to eight engineers in from Grand Rapids for about a day and a half to analyze the four major buildings in the city.

"It's a great service and I would recommend it to any group or business to go ahead and do this," Straebel said. "It's not just a smart thing to go through with from an economic standpoint, but it's a good thing for a city to go through with to become more conscious of their own carbon footprint."

CCE training

On Sept. 9, 10 and 11, the Straits of Mackinac will be the site of a major emergency response training exercise named Operation Dire Straits. Local, state and federal agencies along with private industry will be testing their emergency preparedness plans to respond to a maritime emergency.

Jack Messer, Director of Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Office of Emergency Management, said "In a real disaster, we must come to the aid of each other. Training of this nature is invaluable in helping us learn to coordinate and cooperate in an emergency response situation."

While Operation Dire Straits will have land, water, and air components, this training exercise is not expected to interfere with routine shipping traffic, ferry routes, or Mackinac Bridge traffic. September is National Preparedness Month.

Families should also put together an emergency plan along with having an emergency kit available. For more information go to www.ready.gov or contact your local health department or emergency management coordinator for more information on preparedness.

Nazarene turns 100

The Church of the Nazarane was founded in October, 1908 at Pilot Point, Texas. To recognize this century in existence, the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene will host a commemorativa picnic at 4 p.m. on Sept. 7. Public is welcome to attend the potluck and campfire service. Bring a dish to pass. This will be one of several events throughout the month to celebrate the milestone. On Sunday, Oct. 5, 18,000 congregations of the Church of the Nazarana will celebrate the anniversary worldwide.

Day of Caring volunteers needed

United Way Day of Caring needs volunteers. Last year, 600 volunteers completed nearly 50 projects and this year the need is even greater.

"We are still looking for volunteers," states Julie Voci, administrative/program assistant at Char-Em United Way. "There are some projects that may not be completed if more people don't get involved."

She added, "If your civic group or business would like to help with a project, please contact us. We would love to match you up with a fun and meaningful project."

Call (231) 487-1006 or e-mail charemuw@sbcglobal.net for more information.

Business resource center open

Charlevoix Public Library, teaming up with the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, hosted its first "How To Start a Small Business" Workshop recently.

Prospective business owners attending received advice and guidance during the 90 minute orientation.

In addition to learning the basics about how to develop a business plan, they received workbooks and other important resources to help them think through and research the various aspects of starting a business.

"This workshop is part of the new Business Resource Center that recently opened in the library. This is really a one stop location for starting a small business. Those entrepreneurs who are starting a business, or considering it, can access valuable resources to help them with market and industry research," said Valerie Meyerson, Director of the Charlevoix Public Library.

The Business Resource Centers have a wide variety of "How To" guides and reference materials covering many relevant business topics, as well as suggested federal state and local Web sites to assist with business formation and business planning.

In addition to resource material, there will also be free and confidential business counseling with Wendy Wieland, a certified business counselor with the Small Business and Technology Development Center.

Those that take advantage of the business counseling will have access to valuable market data and powerful research tools to help with industry focus, business planning, and marketing strategy.

Call Northern Lakes Economic Alliance at (231) 582-6482 for more information on the workshops or to schedule a business counseling appointment.

"Our community is committed to helping entrepreneurs at every stage. We want to help new and existing businesses grow and succeed and believe that this is one of the many ways we can bring resources to the business community," said Erin Bemis, Executive Director of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

The new Business Resource Centers in East Jordan and Charlevoix were generously supported by a financial gift from Charlevoix State Bank.

Mike Hinkle, President, said "We are very pleased to be able to support efforts aimed at helping our communities focus on fostering the entrepreneurial spirit. Small business is very important to us, so bringing additional services to the business community that will leverage the talents, skills and passion of entrepreneurs is the right thing to do."

Business Resource Centers are also offered at the Jordan Valley District Library, the Boyne District Library and the Northwest Michigan Works Office in Petoskey and are part of a larger focus for the Entrepreneurial Division of Northern Lakes Economic Alliance.

A business incubator program, a support system that accelerates the successful development of existing and start-up businesses by providing entrepreneurs with access to targeted resources and services is being rolled out this fall.

The "Creating Entrepreneurial Communities" Initiative, a program built around the premise that communities can build an entrepreneurial culture where diversity and innovative thinking are welcomed is another key program in several communities, including East Jordan, Charlevoix and Boyne City.

The Northern Lakes Economic Alliance (NLEA), founded in 1984, serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet Counties in the northwest lower peninsula of Michigan.

The mission of the NLEA is to enhance the economy of Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties by acting as a resource to retain and create quality jobs.

For more information about NLEA, please visit the Web site at www.northernlakes.net or call Lori Meeder at 582-6482.

This effort netted $1,001 for United Way, safe shoes for the employees, and a big thanks to Michigan Scientific.

• Capsized Vessel on Beaver Island

On Aug. 12 at 7:48 p.m., the Sheriff's Office responded to a report of an overturned vessel on Lake Michigan, about one mile off the east coast of Beaver Island.

The Sheriff's Office and Beaver Island EMS located the overturned vessel and found three people sitting on top of it.

The captain of the vessel was Larkin Pence, 52, of Plymouth, MI. The other two passengers were juvenile females from Mecosta.

All three passengers were wearing personal floatation devices.

The captain of the vessel stated that they had been overturned for approximately one hour before help arrived.

Mr. Pence was wearing a wetsuit.

The two female passengers were transported by water rescue back to St. James Harbor where they were treated by Beaver Island EMS for minor hypothermia and later released.

Sheriff Lasater would like to commend Deputy Jake Wasylewski, Gerald Lafreniere, Ken Bruland and Garret Cole with Beaver Island EMS and fire for rescuing the stranded boaters as well as Paramedic Steve Rose for treating the two young women for their injuries.

• Watercraft Accident

The Charlevoix county Sheriff's Marine Division investigated a watercraft accident with injuries on Lake Charlevoix near Holy Island. The accident occurred south of Holy Island at approximately 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday, August 26.

Caryn Barnet, 27, of Saline, was operating her boyfriend's 15-foot watercraft when the wake of another vessel struck her boat. This wave action caused the victim, Julie Swaggerty, 53, of Washington, DC to injure her back by being jarred in her seat.

Swggerty was treated by Charlevoix EMS and transported to the Charlevoix Area hospital. The accident remains under investigation by Lt. David Beyer.

Varsity gridiron buzz: optimism

BY STEVE FOLEY
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Although the Charlevoix Rayders didn't experience much success on the gridiron last season, veteran coach Don Jess believes that trend could turn in 2008.

"I'm optimistic about this group," said Jess, whose team finished 3-6 last year and fifth in the Lake Michigan Conference. "They didn't experience a ton of success when they were freshmen or sophomores and juniors even, but I think they've done an excellent job in preparing themselves to getting better each year.

"The kids are all putting in time in the weight room and they're staying in shape. We could have quite a bit of success, but I'm just optimistic."

The Rayders, whose last playoff berth came in 2006 when they went 8-2, return seven starters on either side of the ball.

"I know we'll be strong on the offensive and defensive line," Jess said. "It's just a matter of injuries and how we hold up. That really will depend on how successful we are."

With a 20-man roster, Jess and the Rayders know any injury will be a costly one.

"This year, we have 20 guys and we have 20 guys that are all capable football players," Jess said. "We don't have any slouches by any means. That's very encouraging."

Jess is also very encouraged by his new starting quarterback, junior Clayton Mitchell.

Mitchell fills in for the graduated Cliff Jones, an All-News-Review first-team selection who threw for 1,223 yards and 18 touchdowns on 94-of-164 passing in '07. He also rushed for about 350 yards.

"He's (Mitchell) not big, but he's tough and he did an excellent job on JV last year," Jess said. "He put in a lot of time in the offseason, went to the gym, lifted and threw a lot. He's been selected a team captain and he has his teammates' respect. He's very coachable and we expect good things out of him."

One of Mitchell's key targets will be junior receiver Jon Putman, a varsity returnee and an All-Area selection last season with 35 receptions for 475 yards and three TDs.

Junior tackle Bill Ivan, another All-Area pick, senior center Drew Largent, senior guard Jake Rankl, senior tackle Corey Loucks and junior guard Ian Gauthier also return.

That unit will look to open holes for returning backs J.T. Lawrence, a junior, and Michael Heckendorn, who lettered as a sophomore but sat out last year.

"We plan on running the ball a lot more this year because of (the ability of our) line and the size of our line," Jess said. "The kids up front can really play."

The Rayders are experienced in the secondary, where starters Brock Yenglin, Lawrence and Putman return. Heckendorn and Rankle anchor the linebacking corps, while Largent and Ivan return to their defensive end spots.

The Rayders open the season at home Friday, Aug. 29, against St. Ignace in a non-conference contest. Charlevoix's first Lake Michigan Conference contest is against Grayling on Sept. 12 at Kipke Field.

"It's a tough league," Jess said. "It will be interesting to see how in all pans out. I'm excited because it's nice not to know sometimes week-to-week who'll win. There's a lot of tough teams in the league, whereas in the past it's been pretty predictable.

"I'm excited and I can't wait to get going."

The Rayders are coming off a stellar season during which they won their fourth Lake Michigan Conference title in five years and finished 42-8-8.

Still, what's in the past is in the past, coach Liz Grunch said.

"I think success will take care of itself," she said.

"We're not going to dwell on past records. We're pretty inexperienced as far as competing at this level is concerned."

Grunch added, "We only have basically two returning players who've played in games at the varsity level."

Those two players would be All-Lake Michigan Conference honorable mention selection Tammy Potter, a senior middle hitter, and Shanna Spencely, a senior outside hitter.

Other key players include seniors Lauren Mielke, Tanya Wynkoop, Alyssa McCormack and Sarah Potter, and junior Taylor Storm.

Freshman Jenna Way, a setter, has also been moved up.

"We're very athletic and if we work extremely hard, the wins will take care of itself," Grunch said.

"We just have to stay on the right path."

Girls', boys' cross country numbers up

With combined boys' and girls' teams of nearly 30 total, the Rayder cross country team is knee deep in new runners and seasoned talent ready to take over leadership roles.

According to girls' coach Mary Plude, the middle school running program is helping to keep her and fellow coach and husband Ken stocked with athletes.

"We have a really good freshmen group that came up," Plude said. "Ken has six new freshmen and I have five new freshmen girls, and I gained three other girls, two sophomores and a senior, so little things like that are helping our teams."

The boys' team finished in fifth at regional last year, the girls' team finished sixth.

"We were a little bit down from past years," Plude said. "It's been three years since I've gone to the state meet, but it's typical that we are at least in the top five, and Ken's team has been about the same, but he has a tradition of going to the state meets."

The boys' team is headlined by brothers Alex and Eric Buday, a senior and sophomore respectively, who were each all-state last year.

"He's got a nice leadership and a good group of juniors, so he's got some nice potential," Mary said of her husband's team.

While already several meets into the year, the Pludes are still focusing on fundamentals with their younger runners and focusing on reworking longer-term athletes into leadership roles.

"The big thing for them is building their mileage up to be able to handle the meets week in and week out," she said. "And, we focus on how to handle competition and how to run as a team."

Major competition is expected from rivals Benzie Central, Pine River, Kingsley and Harrison.

The annual Mud Run begins at 10 a.m. Sept. from the grounds at Charlevoix High School.

Rayder soccer: age poor, talent rich

BY STEVE BELL

By age, the Rayders are more like a JV team, with 12 sophomores. But it's varsity talent, for sure, including center midfielder Ben Myers, who was the team MVP as a freshman when he had 11 goals and 18 assists in a 10-8-2 campaign. Another key sophomore is sweeper John Shea.

Charlevoix has two seniors, goalie Collin McDonough and Weston Bryan, who had 10 goals and 12 assists last year. Myers, Bryan and McDonough each earned a spot on the All-Lake Michigan Conference team in 2007.

"We're not sure yet if we're going to play Weston up front or on defense, because we lost three defenders," coach Josh Block said "Either way, he's one of the most skilled players we've had come through here. Collin has experience and is definitely peaking now.

"We don't have as much team speed as we've had in the past, but this group plays well as a team."

Rayder tennis working to improve

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

While the 2007 move of several sports in the Michigan High School Athletic Association's past calendars has caused some sports to dwindle, coaches are making due.

Erik Lundteigen, longtime Rayder tennis coach, said lower numbers do not help, but he will not let that get him down.

"We have a good mix this year," he said. "I want to stay positive about it and I'm looking forward."

Lundteigen's leaders include Alex McKenzie playing number one singles, Scott Silberhorn and Mike Pelon playing number one doubles.

"We've got some seniors and some young kids too," he said. "We have Alex Meyers, he is also a senior who is playing number three singles for us."

Lundteigen added, "I hope to see a lot of improvement through the year."

Rayder tennis has dropped from 40 to 50 athletes per year to 15 this season.

"The change of seasons for us, we used to play in spring and then they moved us to fall in 2007, really had an effect on us," he said. "But, we've got to make it work. It's a life-long game and all we can do is work on improving through the year."

Lundteigen said the biggest challenge early in the year is avoiding unforced errors.

"Trying to do too much, not being patient, as the year goes on we'll improve and it'll be a lot easier to make better quality shots," he said. "As the year goes on we'll get more practice on big things, working on serves, ground strokes and volleys at the net."

He added, "These are all things we need to keep working on."

Lundteigen said he looks forward to this season with assistant coach Neil Turner, and said there is still time for interested students to sign up for the tennis team. Call the high school at 547-3222 for more information.

NWA now equipped with a portable library

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

The new portable library at Northwest Academy is now open for students of all ages.

According to Phoebe Gohs, a teacher who has been working on the project all summer long, the library consists of four metal carts with more than 900 books.

"We got a grant and ordered 545 new books from Scholastic," said Gohs. "First, we did an inventory of all of the books we did have and got rid of the outdated stuff."

Two of the carts will carry books for middle and high-schoolers and the other two will carry books for elementary students.

Gohs said she has spent quite a bit of her summer cataloging the books with some help from Northwest office manager Leslie Herriman.

"We started cataloging the books back in March," she said.

"And, at the time, we had gotten some help from parental volunteers and some students on a Saturday."

Gohs wrote the grant to pay for the library last winter through the literacy intervention program from Dollar General corporation.

From the grant, Northwest Academy received $3,000 for the purchase of books.

In addition to the new books, Gohs said they also had a lot of people make donations to the school.

The portable library will be operated by a senior who will act as the library aid.

Whenever a teacher needs books, the student will push the appropriate cart(s) to the right room.

"I'm hoping the students will make good use of it," Gohs said.

"My hope with the bigger selection is that it will increase reading for fun and pleasure."

School leader John Bailey said Gohs has been putting a lot of time and hard work into the project.

"Since we don't have a room for a library, this is what we need to do," he said. "She's been working real hard all summer long to get this ready for us in the Fall."

LETTERS to the editor

Antrim County

SOMETIMES DIVORCE IS THE ANSWER

Editor

(This letter is in response to Steve Guthrie's Aug. 13 column on divorce)

Just because parents are divorced does not mean children are not cared for.

My boys don't go to school anxious wondering who will care for them. They are also well mannered and respectful especially at school.

Because I am a divorced woman does not make me a bad mother. I talk to my children, about sex, drugs and the law, mine, God's and the State of Michigan's.

Anxiety, fear, pain and guilt is what we left behind. The God of my belief wants us to be happy, joyous and free, so that we can make good choices for ourselves and those we love. My God does not condemn.

A bad marriage can do a whole lot more damage, body, soul and spirit, than a divorce.

About my reputation? I am admired for standing up and having the strength and courage to change, most definitely from my children. What does staying and suffering teach them?

Money, assets and material things that you speak of, will not make you happy. Self love and self respect which brings peace within always will.

I am not saying everyone with problems should get divorced. But you are so wrong to generalize.

Susan Valente, single mother

They are everywhere and anywhere they can be of service and benefit the community. Their motto is "We Serve" and they did that literally on Saturday, August 16th as they catered Harbor Industries' annual summer employee and family picnic. We know that catering a company picnic is just one small example of the causes, campaigns and crusades the Lions are involved with every day. But on behalf of Harbor, we just want to say 'THANK YOU' for a job well done!

said. "We had an awesome time. Everyone was really friendly and very helpful. It was neat to see how they film the show after watching it for so many years."

Sue said they spent about two to three hours waiting in line. She had a couple of valuable items herself to be appraised, but she said that both she and her son were surprised at how much they could command for the Turtles.

"They say to be really careful with old toys, especially if you have them in the original packaging, because that's what makes them more valuable," said Sue. "So, it was kind of funny, because everyone around us had their items in really fancy cases or something and Nathan just had the Turtles in an old Oleson's grocery bag."

Nathan was raised in Charlevoix and Sue has lived here since 1980. Since Nathan currently lives in Grand Rapids, Sue met him down there on the day of the taping, which was Saturday August 9.

"While you're standing there waiting, they have these big screens set up playing old clips of the show," she said. "It's pretty exciting, looking around everybody else's stuff, wondering if their thing is going to be worth, like, $50,000 or something."

Nathan now keeps his Turtles in a display case down in his basement to keep them safe from dust or being handled too much.

He said he would consider selling them, but only for the right price and probably not in the near future.

"It would be nice to pass them on to my children, cause it's a nice little bit of childhood nostalgia," Nathan said. "I thought it was the most collectable item that I had, that's why I brought them to the Roadshow. You don't usually see those on the show."

Dire need for blood donors

BLOOD

mum supply is about 66 units for any type. He also said that for each type of blood, a different amount is needed.

"Since type O is universal, we need as much of it as we can get," said VanHoven. "Everyday we need to collect about 700 units to service across the state."

VanHoven's service area spans all the way from Charlevoix to the Michigan and Indiana border.

"We welcome all donors to give the gift of life. Both O-positive and O-negative are down to critical levels," he said. "For some patients, we don't have enough time to get their blood type, so we have to use one of the O types."

VanHoven said that patients with cancer or leukemia are also in need of blood products on a daily basis. "There are people who have routine surgeries everyday that need blood as well," he said.

Being a donor is not as bad as people assume it is, VanHoven said.

"In terms of a needle poke, it's just a slight pinch for a second or two. You're giving ten minutes of your time to give someone else another chance," he said.

Hunters, beware of diseased deer

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

It was confirmed on Aug. 25 that a captive white-tailed deer tested positive for Chronic Wasting Disease.

Chronic Wasting Disease is a neurological disease which affects deer, elk and moose. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) along with the Michigan Department of Agriculture both confirmed the findings of the deer which tested positive at a privately owned breeding facility in Kent County.

"The disease is a hazardous threat that hunters must take seriously," said Michigan United Conservation Club President Bill Krepps. "Instead of reacting negatively, now is the time to work together to insulate our deer herd from further spread of this horrible disease."

According to the DNR, the disease is fatal and infected animals display abnormal behaviors, progressive weight loss and physical debilitation. Humans cannot contract the disease.

Experts believe that the disease is transmitted through infectious, self-multiplying proteins (prions) contained in saliva and other fluids of infected animals.

Potential victims can acquire the disease by direct exposure to infected fluids or from a contaminated environment. Once contaminated, research suggests that soil can remain a source of infection for long periods of time, making chronic wasting a particularly difficult disease to eradicate.

The DNR's response included immediate activation of its Chronic Wasting Disease contingency plan. The plan included a ban on baiting and feeding of deer and elk in Michigan's Lower Peninsula, a ban on transportation of deer and a quarantine of captive cervid facilities. Also, hunters who harvest deer in the department's surveillance "hot zone" in the Kent County townships will be required to participate in a deer check. The ban also applies to feeding for recreational viewing as well as hunting.

"In order to protect our current and future hunting heritage, Michigan hunters must stop baiting and feeding deer to prevent Chronic Wasting Disease and other diseases from not only infecting other animals, but to ensure a proper long-term scientific management of our herd," Krepps explained.

Deer hunters this fall who take deer from Tyrone, Soldon, Nelson, Sparta, Algoma, Courtland, Alpine, Plainfield, and Cannon townships will be required to bring their deer to a DNR check station. Deer taken in these townships are subject to mandatory deer check.

The disease cannot be detected with live animal tests. As a result, the department will kill and test 300 deer within the "hot zone." According to the DNR, this response plan is designed to prevent potential spread of the disease.

According to a FAQs sheet released by the DNR, "any regional threat to a healthy deer population is a statewide con-

Charlevoix's East Park will be the scene of family fun German style when the town celebrates its first ever Oktoberfest.

Husband and wife team Mick and Lori Randall hope the Oct. 4 event becomes a Charlevoix tradition.

"There will be face painting, pumpkin decorating and lots of kids games," Lori said. "Crazy Richard the juggler will be down entertaining the kids and we're starting the whole day off with a pancake breakfast."

Mick

In addition to a wiener dog race that will finally settle the question of who has the fastest dachshund, there will be a biergarten with traditional German ales, and foods from bratwurst to oxtail sandwiches.

There will also be a dachshund parade and costume contest. Cost of entry in the dachshund race is a donation of any monetary amount which will benefit the Charlevoix Area Humane Society.

"I grew up in an Irish Catholic family, but half of my grandmother's side was German. During World War II, they emphasized that they were Irish because of all the negative surrounding Germans and it almost broke my heart," Mick said. "This (festival) is something for the average middle class working guy and family to basically come and enjoy themselves."

Fundraiser to help buy new groomer

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Ike Boss, Recreation Director, came before the Charlevoix City Council to update them on his fundraising efforts for a new ski hill groomer for Mt. McSauba.

Ike said that he has received $31,500 through grants and fundraising for the new groomer so far. Boss told City Council that on Aug. 26, he had also sent out 350 letters to community members asking for donations for the groomer.

"Our grants are still alive," said Ike. "We're hoping to average at least $100 for each letter we sent out."

Grants have been submitted to the Community Foundation, Dow Foundation, Frey Foundation, and the Bay Harbor Foundation with no formal decisions on grant funding for several weeks.

Ike also mentioned plans to hold a fundraiser concert starting at 6 p.m. Sept. 20 featuring the band Charlie's Root Fusion.

In updating city council on his fundraising efforts, he also introduced them to Greg Toomire, a Pisten Bully Sales Representative. Both Boss and City Manager, Rob Straebel, made it clear that Toomire was in town on his own accord, and was paying for his own food and hotel during his stay in Charlevoix.

Boss

"Greg is not here as a salesperson today," said Straebel. "He is here as an expert on ski hill groomers to inform the public."

"I've been in the Midwest area my whole career and I've seen places come and go," said Toomire. "We understand that you're looking at fundraising and that the city is involved. It's very easy for us to work with a city, so we're willing to bend a little and work with you."

Bo Boss explained that Mt. McSauba puts 400 hours a season on their groomer, which is less than half of the time being put on a groomer at Nub's Knob.

"There's an option for a used groomer for $140,000," said Bo. "But it only has about 25 percent of it's life expectancy left. I think that's too much money to spend to be right back here in five or six years."

The Bosses originally asked City Council for $215,000 for the purchase of a new groomer, and stated that it would last for the next 20 years.

Bo, who spent most of last winter attempting to fix the old groomer, said that the main problem with the old groomer is parts and availability. "That's the problem with our machine. I can fix anything, but the parts for our machine just aren't available," said Bo.

The idea of leasing a new groomer for a year was brought up, but quickly dismissed due to cost.

"A one year lease may be $60,000 to $70,000 for just one year," said Toomire. "The price is so high for just a one year lease because we don't have that long-term commitment."

"As for the groomer you currently have, there aren't anymore of it's kind being made," Toomire said of the possibility of trying to use the groomer for another year. "The machine you've got has served you well. There are some component parts that are sellable. The tracks, the engine, maybe the transmission... no one will buy that machine as is though."

"At least 25 things broke on that machine and were fixed. We worked around the clock getting it fixed, so luckily the hill never went out of commission," Bo said. "Nub's Knob saved us during the last six weeks of the season by renting us one of their old groomers."

Ike explained how important Mt. McSauba is to not only local residents, but surrounding communities as well. He also said that he feels that Mt. McSauba could become a real tourist draw during the winter time if they continue to take care of it and build it up.

"I was the biggest skeptic about the skate park and now that we have it, we've got kids coming up going 'I didn't know there was a ski hill here, too," Ike said. "They're going to come here during the winter time and bring their parents at a time when Charlevoix is otherwise a dead town."

Bo re-iterated the point that Mt. McSauba is not looking for a handout, but simply borrowing from the city against money which is already leased to them.

An extension until October 1 was executed between the city and Pisten Bully for a slightly used groomer with 200 hours. The agreement did not commit the city to the purchase of the groomer, but simply holds the groomer until substantial funds were attained.

Straebel did not recommend that the city contribute any more funds to a groomer purchase other than the $100,000 the city had already committed to.

Nature not on man's timetable

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Phragmites (frag-might-ease) is invading! Garlic Mustard is invading! Purple Loosestrife is invading! They are choking out other plants! They are taking over natural habitats! They are suppressing wildlife! We have to do something NOW!

Our usual response to such imminent threats is to rally the public and do everything we can to eradicate the invaders. We might even consider spraying large areas with herbicides that will kill all the plants sprayed, not just the one we see as the most dominant or the most offensive.

There are some general botanical rules we might consider before beginning public eradication efforts, and there are some specific facts regarding particular kinds of plants.

The natural world with its many thousands of different plants and creatures is not like the internet, where if we get the right software we can speed things up. The community of plants and animals that occupies any particular part of the world responds to changes in climate, to changes in kinds of organisms, plant and animal, and it does so at its own pace, not the pace we might choose.

Think about how plants get from one place to another. They are spread by spores and seeds, which are carried by wind, water and other organisms, including humans. Every one of those plants and animals used to live somewhere else, and at some time in the past invaded new territory. In every case, the plants and animals already there adapted to the new invaders. They did it at the pace of the natural world, where change is generally slow by our hurry-up standards. It is also worth pointing out that up to now there is not a single case of any invasive plant eliminating any plant that was already there when it arrived. Any invading plant is likely to temporarily alter the numbers of other kinds of plants. It may temporarily reduce the numbers of some plant we particularly like. How long is temporary? It depends on the plant. Sugar Maples, for example will change very slowly in response to some new organism. A tree might have to live for 10 or 15 years or more before it begins to produce seeds, and may live for hundreds of years. We will most likely not see any overall change in Sugar Maples in several human lifetimes. Other plants grow with great speed, live for less than a year and produce a new generation of seeds in a few weeks or months. Quickweed, so called, one of the common weeds in our street-side petunia beds, would adapt very quickly to changes. It might even become resistant to herbicides in just a few years if it were sprayed consistently, with only the already resistant plants living to produce seed for the next generation. Most plants fall somewhere between those extremes and are capable of noticeable change in a few years to a few decades.

Now, how about Phragmites growing along our coastlines? First of all it is not an invader in the usual sense. Phragmites grows all over the temperate world. One of its common names is ditch reed, and it is often seen along highways, where it occupies damp, recently bare ditches. Strains of the plant differ from place to lace and time to time, but they all have the capacity to cover large areas of wet land in a few years. They spread mostly by fast-growing runners beneath the soil surface, but also by seeds that can blow around or be carried with the mud on birds feet. Phragmites is just now catching up with the drop in Lake Michigan water levels That drop provided a lot of new, damp territory with few competing plants. Phragmites moved in and used its normal competitive ability to grow as widely and as rapidly as possible. Almost all kinds of plants must have great competitive ability or they would not have survived the centuries.

I can provide a personal example of this competitive ability. The same story could be told of thousands of different kinds of plants. When we lived in Iowa I had a continuing interest in the plants of the native prairie. There were only a few pieces of undisturbed native prairie left in our part of Eastern Iowa. Iowa native prairie had about three hundred different kinds of plants. It was possible to identify two hundred of them from a few acres of ground. They lived in a highly competitive environment, as do most of the plants on earth. One of the plants was a wild rose. In the prairie it was a small plant, maybe a foot or so tall with three or four blooms in a good year. In a drought year, it might not bloom at all. I transplanted on of those small wild roses to my back yard, where it had no competition from its two hundred neighbors above or below ground. Within two years the rose plant was four feet high and had literally hundreds of blooms. Had I ceased mowing the lawn it could easily have taken over the yard.

In my yard the wild rose was behaving like an invader. What it really was, of course, was the only native plant in the lawn. The usual lawn plants, in Iowa as in Michigan, were non-native plants that people had imported to provide us with the lawn we wanted. As a native plant the rose was quite capable of out-competing the real invaders.

Phragmites is merely doing what it does well; informed by centuries of competition with other plants, it is occupying mostly vacant space, growing and reproducing as fast as it can. That we don't like the view is not by itself sufficient reason to marshal the public in a war on it. Private control of Phragmites or almost any other plant is for the owner of the property to decide as long as that control harms no one else's property. The use of any public money should be approached with great care. Phragmites is a private problem, not a public one.

If we want to eliminate Phragmites from some parts of our coastline, we can certainly do that, but let us not pretend that we are battling some invader in order to whip up uhlic interest. If we have some patience, Phragmites will revert to its usual role of occupying recently bared wet ground. Were we to successfully remove Phragmites from Beaver Island, for example, it would merely reinvade from the mainland, and the Phragmites that arrived might be even more competitive than the current resident.

We mess with Mother Nature all the time, sometimes to our sorrow. We should at least know what Mother Nature is about before we try to thwart her.

EDITORIAL

"Buy local" more than a slogan

"Buy local."

A neat slogan, but how many of us actually do, or even know how?

Don't get us wrong, we're not preaching "do as I say, not as I do." We're guilty of violating the rules of self-sustainability, we need to stop.

We must spend our money on local businesses first whenever possible.

Unfortunately, it isn't always our fault; for instance, how many local blue jean manufacturers are there?

Can I buy a car that's 100 percent made in Charlevoix, or even America, these days?

And, we dare you to find a DVD, TV or CD player that's not stamped "Made in Japan" or "Product of China."

It gets to the point where some may simply throw their hands up and forget the whole idea of buying locally produced goods. After all, if your local craftsmen cannot create the product you need, you will still need to buy it from somewhere.

It's easy enough to blame the state, whoever that is. The economic gurus say Michigan, and the rest of the country, seems to be moving further and further from a manufacturing base, as if that were caused by some type of voodoo magic and not the conscious decisions of suppliers and customers.

We can blame high prices on unions, but the truth is foreign products are cheap because their workers provide labor for pennies on the dollar.

For too long now we have chosen the easy savings over the responsible use of capitalism, and to our detriment.

Sure, you save money on a bag of hash browns by shopping at a retail chain store, and you can buy a gallon of out of state pancake syrup for the cost of a quart of locally made, but by sending the labor and production of goods to other states or, worse yet, other countries, we are in effect slitting our own fiscal throats.

A study by the Institute for Local Self-Reliance showed 14 percent of each dollar you spend at a retail chain makes its way back into the local economy; whereas at least 45 percent of that same dollar will recirculate when spent at a local, small business.

An article in Hour Detroit Magazine stated that, "If we all spent $10 a week on Michigan products, we could put $36 million every week back into the state's economy."

Each time we shop at the fast food chains instead of buying at the mom 'n' pop restaurant, each time we go to the nationwide pharmacy—Charlevoix now has three chains and one family-owned drug store—each time we use syrup, apples, candles, honey, pies, labor and services from out of the area, we weaken our local economy.

We understand the concerns of lower income workers who say they need the large chain stores to survive, but the death of the middle class is a direct result of this type of thinking: we'll save $20 a month on our grocery bill so we can earn a quarter of what we should be making.

This isn't about kicking retail chains out of town via oppressive legislation or angry mob, either. If said business wants to come in, then have at. Simply kicking Walmart out of town and sighing with pride means nothing when you go ahead and shop at the dozen or so other chains in town which are just as quick to ship their profits to HQ.

If we want to strengthen our economy we are going to have to make the tough decisions to pay a little more up front.

Perhaps the idea that we could join together to heal our economy is merely socialist utopian hogwash; but the shortsighted end of capitalism is unbridled greed. And if left unchecked, that greed, like cancer, continue to spread and sicken.

LETTERS to the editor

GOHS DON'T KNOW DIDDLY

Editor:

I found Benjamin Gohs' commentary September 3 on heroism outrageous.

Saying Sarah Palin should not be called a hero for choosing not to terminate her pregnancy was fair.

Admirable, or true to her convictions would be better descriptions.

However, questioning the legitimacy of John McCain's hero status was way off base.

Gohs argued that a hero was "someone who risked their own safety to defend another."

That alone makes McCain a hero unless you believe flying combat missions over North Vietnam was either safe or didn't defend anyone, like South Vietnamese civilians or U.S. soldiers.

Following the horrific fire on the USS Forrestal, McCain could have taken some rest and relaxation while repairs were made, but transferred to an active combat ship instead.

The real heroism, however, lies in the fact that, as a P.O.W. offered an early release by his captors, McCain put the code of honor before his own personal welfare and did not take the offer.

Gohs whined that in the modern era, you're a hero just because something had happens to you.

In many instances that seems to be the case, but then he said, "Got cancer? You're a hero; stuck in a wheelchair? You're a hero." I have visited children stricken with leukemia and was awed by their bravery.

Tell their parents it's not right to regard them as heroes.

Try getting around in a wheelchair for a few days before you discount the courage of an active quadriplegic.

Then Gohs went on to talk about a clever line he heard in a movie regarding Superman.

To trivialize the plight of a beaten P.O.W. by comparing it to a line about Superman is despicable.

Perhaps The Courier and its readers would be better served with Gohs doing movie reviews instead of commentary.

Gohs was correct when he said just because something had happens to you doesn't make you a hero; let me add: just because you write for a newspaper doesn't make you a journalist.

George Baier

HEROES IS AS HEROES DOES

Editor:

Do any of you editors actually read material written by contributors to your editorial page before it is published?

The piece in Wednesday's (9/3/08) News Review by Benjamin Gohs is not only biased, that is the least of it.

It is clearly inaccurate, amateurish and unprofessional.

Sarah Palin has not been widely, if at all, characterized as a hero as Gohs implies.

Nonetheless he sets up this "straw man" so he can proceed to tear it down.

This is quite likely because he cannot successfully attack her on her legitimate accomplishments.

She has a record as a reformer who stood up to corrupt and entrenched politicians in her own party and as an extremely accomplished governor who bested the powerful oil industry on behalf of her constituents.

Gohs' disparaging of John McCain's status as a hero is so astounding that I can't believe he is actually serious.

Friends and loved ones gathered to take their beloved Jerry LaFreniere, per his last requests, into what was once his local pub so they could all share one last drink. The casket (above) was taken in and placed on the floor while he was toasted at the Beachcomber on Beaver Island. Below, LaFreniere is unloaded from the ferry and carried up to the Beachcomber. LaFreniere died at his home on Beaver Island earlier this August.

Is he completely ignorant of McCain's record as a POW in North Korea (McCain was actually in Vietnam) where he endured five years of torture rather than succumb to his captors demands for military intelligence?

Doesn't he know about McCain's refusal to accept early release from the Hanoi Hilton, even though his severe injuries would have more than justified it, until his men were also released?

Or is he simply so biased that he refuses to acknowledge these true characteristics of a hero?

How would Gohs define a hero?

Who would be his example if not John McCain?

Would it be someone who graduated from law school and immedia v joined the political machine in Chicago?

Someone who toed the party line every day of his life, winked at orruption and maintained relationships with an unrepentant terrorist, a convicted felon and a radical, America bashi zealot?

Clearly, if Gohs fails to see heroism in what John McCain has done, it is unlikely he would honor our brave men and women who are serving our country in the various branches of the military and National Guard.

I'm betting their families would disagree.

LET'S CELEBRATE CHARLEVOIX

Editor:

I recently was in Traverse City on a Friday evening and would like to describe a great, inexpensive, weekly city gathering. It is a promotion for the city that is relatively simple and helpful to the tourism commerce for the city.

Traverse City calls it "Friday Night Live," and each summer Friday night, four blocks of Front Street, their downtown, is blocked from traffic or parking from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Each Friday has a theme (e.g.) 50s, kids, jazz, etc. (which are) loosely enforced, and the large gathering of smiling tourists, townspeople and kids wander up and down the pavement of Front Street.

There are some tented stalls along the curbs with face painting, portrait artists, sales from a few stores, the other stores are open, weekly entrepreneurs showing innovations like robots, pop corn, hot dogs, restaurants, the other restaurants are open, church groups, etcetera.

There are bands, singing groups, individual musicians and radio station broadcasting (which are) well spaced on the four blocks for sound not to interfere. There are street entertainers, gathering large happy crowds, such as unicyclists, school cheerleaders performing, karate school classes demonstrating, yo-yo champion, jugglers and even a powerful telescope is set up on the street to look at the stars.

An old Traverse City Fire truck takes delighted kids on a short ride, with whistles and bells blaring.

It was 50s Friday, so there were many old classic cars parked on the side streets.

Fun for all and a regular weekly gathering.

Different from our Venetian festivities because it is simpler, and more regular.

Different from the sidewalk sales and more enjoyable, because it's entertainment, not selling.

How about "Live from Charlevoix, It's Saturday Night"

Sometimes the wheel doesn't need to be re-invented; just painted a different color.

Larry Freedman

Rayder football: one loss, one win

CHARLEVOIX 54, MAPLE CITY GLEN LAKE 14

Senior wide receiver Jon Putman scored three touchdowns: one rushing, one receiving and one on a 30-yard fumble return, as the Rayders rolled to a non-league win Friday.

Both teams are 1-1 after the Rayders lost to St. Ignace in their season opener 22-43.

"The kids came in focused and took care of business," Charlevoix coach Don Jess said

"We've never played down here before and didn't know what to expect, but it was a great performance. The kids earned it."

Michael Heckendorn had a team-high 114 yards rushing and scored two TDs for Charlevoix, while Mike Kras and Josh Woletz each added rushing TDs.

Alex Foster had a touchdown reception from quarterback Clayton Mitchell, who finished with two TD passes.

"Our offensive line and defensive line did an outstanding job," Jess said in reference to Bill Ivan, Bill Foley, Jake Rankl, Drew Largent, Cody Loucks and Ian Gauthier.

Play Grayling at 7 p.m. at home on Friday, Sept. 12.

Charlevoix volleyball loss to T.C. Central Traverse City Central defeated Charlevoix, 25-18, 25-11 Saturday in the championship match of the Leland Invitational.

"We keep improving every game," Charlevoix coach Liz Grunch said.

"Definitely playing against T.C. Central kind of showed our weakness, which is defense, but offensively we stuck right with them and competed with them. But they're a better passing team.

"The girls have been working hard, getting better every day. It was exciting for me to see."

The Rayders, 10-4-7, went undefeated in pool play, then topped Maple City Glen Lake, 25-18, 25-9, in a quarterfinal match; and Suttons Bay, 25-12, 22-25, 15-13, in a semifinal.

In pool play, Charlevoix downed Cheboygan, 21-12, 21-7; Northport, 21-19, 21-19; and Suttons Bay, 21-15, 15-21, 15-12.

Tammy Potter had 49 kills, 22 digs and nine blocks to lead the Rayders, while Shauna Spencley finished with 29 kills, 29 digs and 17 aces.

Also for the Rayders, Lauren Mielke had 10 kills, 26 digs; setter Jenna Way had 76 assists, eight kills, seven aces and 40 digs; Katie Mays added five kills; Bobby Molter had six aces; and Taylor Storm finished with 44 digs.

Harbor wins Charlevoix Mud Run title

A beautiful day for running produced one record, another near-record, and a big, big win for the Harbor Springs High School boys' cross country team.

Tecumseh Adams finished in 16 minutes, 28 seconds — just two seconds off the course record — to win the boys' 11-12 grade race Saturday in leading the Harbor Springs boys to a first-place finish in the 16th annual Charlevoix Classic Mud Run.

Cadillac finished second, followed by Petoskey and Charlevoix. Wolverine placed seventh, Ellsworth came in 12th, Inland Lakes was 21st, and East Jordan finished 23rd.

Dearborn Divine Child won the girls' event, followed by Cadillac, Petoskey, Gaylord and Harbor Springs. Charlevoix finished eighth, Ellsworth was 11th, East Jordan placed 18th, Inland Lakes was 19th, and Wolverine placed 22nd.

Twenty-six girls' teams and 24 boys' teams participated in the meet, records for both numbers of teams and runners.

Charlevoix's Eric Buday won the boys' 9-10 grade race in 18:44, while Michael Drake of Petoskey was second in 18:59. Michelle Kerr of Dearborn Divine Child won the girls' 9-10 race in 20:57.

Kaitlyn Patterson of Cadillac won the girls' 11-12 race in 19:22, eclipsing the mark set in 2007 by Gaylord's Sloan Secord, 20:09. Adams' time in the boys' 11-12 race was just two seconds behind the record set by Petoskey's Patrick Liederbach in 2006.

The top 10 runners in each of the four races earned a medal.

Ellsworth's Ashton Fisher placed second in the boys' 11-12 race, while Charlevoix's Alex Buday was third. Wolverine's Jeremy Egas and Luke Operhall placed fifth and seventh, respectively, while Harbor's Allen McCarty placed 10th.

Petoskey's Molly Touran finished second to Cadillac's Patterson in the girls' 11-12 race, while teammate Margaret Liederbach was seventh. Harbor Springs' Alivia Murphy placed eighth, and Petoskey's Tia Penfold was 10th.

"You see everyone in practice, but you don't know how it's going to play out in a meet," first-year Petoskey coach Katie Kolb said. "We had some surprises; we had some kids faster than I thought they were going to. That was good."

In the boys' 9-10 race, Charlevoix's Andrew Plude placed sixth, Ben Kloss of Harbor Springs was seventh, and Ellsworth's Jordan Muma was ninth.

Harbor Springs' Maddie Buntin placed eighth and was the lone area medalist in the girls' 9-10 race.

"It was a good day. Harbor looks tough," Charlevoix boys' coach and meet organizer Ken Plude said. "Getting the fourth place with a young group like (we have), ... we beat a couple of Class A schools which always makes it fun. Great day; just enjoyed the watching the kids."

Plude said the event's uniqueness was nearly lost because of what was a dry course as the sun rose on Saturday morning. But the Charlevoix and Marion Township fire departments came to the rescue, providing water to give the Mud Run what it absolutely needs — mud.

"They had four guys there at 6 o'clock in the morning and for 2 1/2 hours they were hauling water onto the course," he said. "That was a big thing. They came in and pretty much saved it. Without that, the kids wouldn't have gotten dirty."

Top five finishes per team in the 16th annual Charlevoix Classic Mud Run.

Note: * — denotes the runner's finish in the 9th-10th grade race. All other runners are listed with their placing in the 11th-12th grade race.

Cherry Capital Connection: more options

basically by the end of the month if we didn't step in," he said. "There were some serious issues with their business model, and we were a little more stable company. By bringing Charlevoix Wireless under Cherry Capital Connection, we were able to salvage at least one job, and within three months we hope to be able to hire another body."

Cherry Capital Connection has been in business for seven years and services more than 5,000 customers throughout the region with on-demand mobile Wi-Fi, Internet phone service and fixed point high speed Internet access.

Cherry Capital's coverage area includes 13 counties of Atwood, Cedar, Central Lake, Bellaire, East Jordan, Elk Rapids, Ellsworth, Grayling, Kalkaska, Leland, Lake Leelanau Suttons Bay, Northport, Mackinac Island, Mackinaw City, Roscommon, Petoskey, Saint Ignace, Sault Ste Marie and Traverse City.

With Cherry Capital's Wi-Fi on-demand, customers can buy a pass for one day, three days, seven days and up to 14 days with a valid credit card in as little as 60 to 90 seconds.

Cherry Capital's system works by placing a Wi-Fi transmitter at participating locations around a city or township. The more transmitters or "hot spots" there are the wider the coverage area will be.

"When we get done, we're hoping to have six access points in the downtown region," Maylone said.

"By the spring of next year, anywhere in the downtown region, people should be able to pick up the signal."

Aside from the on-demand internet, Cherry Capital Connection offers home service.

"A typical installation charge runs right around $400, but the service is about $38 per month for a typical residential installation," Maylone said. "Our disadvantage is the installation price, but over two years it tends to even out because of the low monthly charge."

The internet phone service costs approximately $30 per month.

The costs are higher, Maylone said, because Cherry Capital does not receive the type of government assistance as some larger communications companies do.

"We have to pay for everything ourselves," he said. "We just plug away with private funding and continue building a network for consumers based on demand."

Cherry Capital Connection is currently seeking installers. Anyone interested in applying for a position should call Roger Salais at (231) 264-9970.

To find out how to get connected with Cherry Capital Connection, visit www.cccwifi.com or call (866) 870-9970.

Bier Art Gallery - For more than 30 years, Ray and Tami Bier have made their living as professional clay artists and gallery owners. Since 1982, they have displayed their work in a charming red and white historic schoolhouse, 6 miles south of Charlevoix. Pottery has become a family tradition, Ray and Tami along with son Tyler and fellow artist Anna Farrell display their decorative and functional stoneware pottery and sculpture. Over 60 regional and national artists contribute work to the gallery, many exclusively, making the selection diverse and unique.

Oktoberfest comes to Charlevoix kite), which means unity through celebration.

FEST'

The idea for the festival stems from similar celebrations in Germany.

According to Mick, the original Oktoberfest began 175 years ago in what is now called Munich

"As in Charlevoix, Munich had their local traditions and celebrities, one of which was the Crown Prince Ludwig of Bavaria. On the occasion of Ludwig's marriage to Therese of Saxe-Hildburghausen, the locals organized a horse race on the grounds of Theresienwiese," he stated in a press release.

"It wasn't (long) after this the founding fathers of Munich realized that this was a good excuse to host a city-wide party and d'Wiesn, shortened version of Theresienwiese, was born."

The event eventually became known as Oktoberfest.

Aside from family activities and a variety of refreshments, there will be various not-for-profit civic groups raising funds for everything from the Charlevoix High School athletic department to local food pantries

The festival will run from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. with a wide variety of live music with at least a half-dozen bands performing everything from blues and jazz to traditional sounds of Oktoberfest.

The Randall's said the event could still use some sponsors and volunteers Anyone who would like to help should call Keffi Kwapisz, Oktoberfest administrator at (231) 675-5005.

The deadline to enter your dachshund in the race is Sept. 19, but they will accept last-minute entries the day of the event.

Only dachshunds racing that day will be allowed in the park

The Beaver Island Boat Company will be offering two-hour color tours down the south arm of the lake for $25 in advance and $35 the day of the event

Cost for the Oktoberfest kids' day events is a nonperishable food item.

Healthy herd critical to Mich. economy cern." The release also stated that dear hunting annually generates more than $500 million and that a healthy deer herd is critical to the state's economy.

"The proximity of Chronic Wasting Disease to Charlevoix County is to be determined," said Tim Rice, Wildlife Supervisor of the Gaylord DNR office.

"That facility (in Kent County) has sold product to other facilities. Once we find out where they've sold to, then we can determine how this affects those areas."

According to Rice, the disease cannot hurt a human upon consumption of one of these deer. "As far as we know, there isn't any evidence that it can be transferred to other species," Rice said "We've done some testing to determine that it hasn't spilled over into the free-ranging deer population," said Rice "If it has, then it's a pretty serious issue."

Teresa Loper got quite a scare when she was paged at 4:30 p.m. last Saturday in the grocery store.

She was told nothing else except that her 8-year-old son Wesley was in the hospital. With her two older sons, Tyler and Quinten, at her side, she rushed to the hospital wondering what was wrong with her son.

"I didn't know anything until we got to the hospital," said Teresa. "He was hooked up to an oxygen machine, because his oxygen was low. He kept going in and out of consciousness, but they said that was normal."

Wesley and his 7-year-old sister Emily were swimming at the pool at Charlevoix Estates when Wes nearly drowned. Emily was swimming laps in the deep end, and since Wes wasn't a very strong swimmer, he decided

Tall ship project officially underway

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

The Challenge project is officially underway.

Seaports Great Lakes, the nonprofit sponsor of the Charlevoix Challenge tall ship project, formed its board membership and announced that they received an anonymous $30,000 donation to begin fundraising.

"I think its really a wonderful opportunity for the community," said Dave Smith, a consultant on the project. "We're going to get a lot of folks involved with the history of the area and it should produce an upturn of tourism."

Smith said the project should produce the largest wooden sailing vessel in the United States. The overall length is going to be between 140 and 145 feet long. The main mast will be somewhere between 90 and 100 feet.

Gary Stutzman, another consultant on the Tall Ship Project, said that two temporary buildings will be constructed on the site, which is adjacent to the DNR building in the grassy area.

"The purpose of the two buildings is to allow people to come and watch in the construction of the Challenge, and possibly participate (in the construction) if they want to," said Stutzman. "We also want to make sure there are ramps that are handicap accessible for the buildings as well."

"People will actually be able to build a trunnel if they want and become members of the Challenge," said to meet up with her by walking along the edges in the pool.

Seen here is the fenced in pool where 8-year-old Wesley Loper recently drowned and was revived by a local man.

"My feet started slipping and I started going under," Wes said. "I was trying to get back to the top, but my feet kept slipping."

Dana Haney was supervising five children that day, including Emily and Wes. She said she was in the pool but was turned away from the children for a matter of moments.

"I just want people to know that this can happen in a second," Teresa said.

Haney turned back from a conversation with friends to ask the other kids where Wesley was.

"It's his turn with the goggles," the children had told Haney.

Haney said she looked down and Wesley appeared to be swimming along the bottom.

"I reached for him and he wasn't responding, so I pulled him up to the surface and got him to the edge of the pool," she said. "I called for Larry to help me get him out of the pool and he rushed over and pulled him out."

Signs posted at the pool warn that no lifeguard is on duty.

Larry Gardner Jr. immediately laid the boy down and performed CPR on him. By the time Haney got out of the pool, she said Gardner had revived the boy.

"Wes threw up two or three times as we put him on his side," Haney said. "It was all a blur. He was revived almost immediately."

Gardner, a father of three children of similar ages, was just passing through the estates when he stopped to visit with some friends at the pool that day

"I was just at the right place at the right time," he said. "When we pulled him out, his goggles were filled with water and his lips were blue."

Gardner added, "The first thing I did was check for a heartbeat, and I couldn't find one, but I may not have even been checking in the right place. I don't know, I was kind of in panic mode."

Gardner learned CPR in high school and he took a refresher course when his kids were born.

"It's something you never think you'll need," Gardner said.

Wesley's father Barry said he was scared to death when he got the call.

"I was sleeping at the time and my fiancee woke me up and just said, 'come on, we've got to go,' and she just filled me in on the car ride to the hospital," he said. "I really didn't know what to think."

Barry met Gardner in the waiting room of the hospital and he just shook his hand and gave him a big hug.

"I just said, 'thank you for saving my son's life,'" Barry said.

Teresa said she does not fault anyone for the incident.

"If she wasn't there, Wes probably would have drowned," Teresa said.

"I don't blame Dana for anything.

U.S. baby formula 'OK'

In response to reports of contaminated milk-based infant formula manufactured in China, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) today is issuing a Health Information Advisory to assure the American public that there is no known threat of contamination in infant formula manufactured by companies that have met the requirements to sell infant formula in the United States.

Although no Chinese manufacturers of infant formula have fulfilled the requirements to sell infant formula in the United States, FDA officials are investigating whether or not infant formula manufactured in China is being sold in specialty markets which serve the Asian community.

The FDA is advising caregivers not to feed infant formula manufactured in China to infants. This should be replaced with an appropriate infant formula manufactured in the United States as mentioned below. Individuals should contact their health care professional if they have questions regarding their infant's health or if they note changes in their infant's health status.

The following manufacturers have met the necessary FDA requirements for marketing milk-based infant formulas in the United States: Abbott Nutritionals, Mead Johnson Nutritionals, Nestle USA, PBM Nutritionals, and Solus Products LLC.

Also, one manufacturer, SHS/Nutricia, Liverpool, England, markets an amino acid based exempt infant formula that does not contain any milk-derived ingredients. We are asking state officials to work with the Agency to assist with the removal of any Chinese infant formula found on store shelves, and to warn members of the Asian community to avoid using Chinese manufactured infant formula.

It has been reported that a number of infants in China who have consumed Chinese manufactured infant formula are suffering from kidney stones, a condition which is rare in infants.

The Chinese manufactured infant formula may be contaminated with melamine. Melamine artificially increases the protein profile of milk and can cause kidney diseases such as those seen in these Chinese infants.

FDA requires that all infant formula manufacturers register with the agency and adhere to specific labeling and nutritional requirements.

All properly registered infant formula manufacturers marketing infant formula in the United States undergo an annual inspection of their production facilities.

For more information, visit the FDA Web site at www.fda.gov or call (888) INFO-FDA.

Plain as the nose on your face

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

"It's as plain as the nose on your face."

That's what mom always said when I was looking for something and it was innocently sitting in front of me all along.

Since reaching my prime years, I've lost many more things, forgotten words, have incomplete thoughts, lost or forgotten grocery lists and now I'm wondering where this paragraph is going.

When we are looking for something we usually ask for help or in my case it's a prayer to St. Anthony. When someone steps in to help, saint or otherwise, the item is quickly found and we feel relief and embarrassment as the item was surely where we left it but we simply forgot.

Trying to become more observant helps us to be less forgetful; Slowing down a bit, paying attention to our surroundings and repeating aloud where we are placing something will help us recall where we left it.

If we could take a moment and look around us once in awhile, we may notice a few details and remember items we've forgotten, be able to recall street directions, locate the correct grocery store aisle, and find where we parked our car.

Losing things and forgetting information can make one a bit nervous as we age. Fears of dementia set in, while in reality we have more on our minds, more distractions and our body chemistry changes a bit so forgetting is a natural process.

As we mature its not just losing things but it may include losing sight of who we are as a person or losing our faith or the loss of leaving behind a chapter in our lives. Any of these incidences can leave us feeling both lost and forgetful.

This past week, I took it upon myself to follow my own advice and focus on trying to be more observant so I could remember more. The people and events that took place this week turned into a gift of lessons.

I learned that the few things I have lost or can't remember are really not that important.

During this learning period I held the hand of a man dying from cancer.

I observed how warm his grasp was and his sense of calmness about his own demise.

I visited a friend in the hospital and witnessed a daughter who seemed to know what her mom needed simply by observing.

During this week an older woman was involved in a car accident near our home.

Once things settled down, I listened to her describe the accident; But, through it all, I observed what scared her the most weren't her injuries but not having her children living nearby to care for her.

I'll always remember the feeling I came away with in each of these scenarios and the lesson that helped me to slow down so I could remember what's important; not to fret about the little things I forget.

In times when we aren't remembering words or names and we lose track of a few items our self confidence may take a dip.

We may start wondering if we are in the right job, with the right spouse, living in the right part of the country and the list goes on.

The answer is: "It's as plain as the nose on your face."

We are where we are because of a plan that was designed long before we were more than a mere thought.

We are all here for a reason and lest you forget, items and words may be missing but you are not lost, you are worth remembering to someone and the rest you can forget.

Celebrate Constitution Day by exercising your rights

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Before I get into this week'sCrying Towel, I must do the obligatories. The legal department says, don't listen to Gohs; The legal department says, this is satire, not intended as instructions on how to run your life; the legal department says (and for once I agree) don't come crying to use because your husband calls you from jail.

Happy Constitution Day!

What's that, you say? You didn't know it was Constitution Day?

Well, I don't blame you; So much of the U.S. Constitution is ignored by our leaders that it seems like a joke when I hear people tout the almighty-ness* of the document. *I just made it up.

But there must be some way to observe this special day which began back in 1787.

Granted, the Fourth Amendment ain't what it used to be: between being forced to remove your shoes at the airport, to being stopped and ticketed for refusing to wear your seat belt, we are not free from unreasonable searches and seizures; we are not secure in our persons, houses, papers and effects; we are free to move about so long as the governmental machinations do not catch us in their scope, but we are by no means free.

And then there is the First Amendment: we get fined by the FCC if we group certain letters and syllables together to form certain words; that's not freedom, that's thought control of the Orwellian kind.

Sixth Amendment guarantees of right to a speedy trial is not being kept from some whom the government declares terrorists; which would be fine, if the government hadn't let some of these so-called terrorists go free after holding them for many years without trial. If you think a human being is not privy to basic human rights simply because (s)he is not a U.S. Citizen, then you're off my Christmas card list.

Ah, but wait, there are some freedoms we have that other citizens of other countries do not: We may make fun of the president without fear of torture and beheading; we may practice most religions without fear of government reprisal.

This country has no caste system. I know, you socialists may argue that it is more difficult for a poor person to become comfortably well off, than a wealthy person of similar attributes, but I would argue there are few countries which have so many rags to riches stories as this one.

And, let us not forget, I am allowed to express my ideas, within reason, in this here column; for now.

So, maybe there is something to celebrate. I mean, c'mon, the founding fathers were some liberal-thinking, extremist, renegades. When they found themselves trapped under tyrannical trouncing, they rebelled.

Now, I'm not calling for riots in the streets, but a proper Constitution Day celebration would be remiss without what my main man H. D. Thoreau called "civil disobedience."

An unjust law is no law at all. You dig?

People break unjust laws everyday, it's our nature to seek out freedom no matter the consequences.

Maybe you won't wear a seat belt today; maybe you'll smoke something other than tobacco; perhaps you'll pay cash for those; just maybe you'll refuse to take off your shoes; and god forbid you give the bird to an authority figure; and you really shouldn't call into a live radio station and drop an F bomb.

And, while you're on the ground being clubbed and Tasered, with a 140-pound German Shepherd gnawing on your foot, just remember It's Constitution Day, baby.

When it's all done and you've had your fun on Constitution Day, remember that there are 364 other days of the year where your freedom, your right to the American Ideal of real liberty, is shackled by those in power. I suggest we come together as a nation and devise a way to elicit that freedom.

LETTERS to the editor

WHAT A CONCEPT: FOCUS ON ISSUES

Editor:

It is time to end the silly season and focus on this election's issues, not gender, not race, not age.

Here are but a few of the differences:

- Taxes - Obama's plan lowers taxes for 95 percent of all taxpayers, eliminates income tax for 10 million working Americans and for seniors with incomes lower than $50,000, and ends the Bush administration's tax cuts for the super wealthy, which will be returned to middle and low-income taxpayers in the form of tax credits to pay for health insurance.

McCain proposes further cuts in the corporate tax rate 10 percent and to extend Bush's tax cuts for the rich.

- Education - Obama supports pre-school for all children, expanding head start, proper funding for No Child Left Behind, funds for teacher education and support, and making college affordable for all students.

McCain supports school vouchers, has no college-level programs and has not supported extending Pell Grants.

In the U.S. Senate, Obama led the fight to increase Pell Grants to $5,100 and legislation to support summer learning and teacher residency programs.

- Ethics - Obama has a track record on ethics legislation including bills to end no-bid contracts, restricting corporate jet travel by legislators and disclosure of contributions by lobbyists. Obama has refused campaign contributions from lobbyists and political action committees.

McCain has intensified his fundraising with lobbyists.

- Health care - Obama's public health care plan follows that of federal employees combined with monitoring private insurers through a national health insurance exchange to ensure fairness and accessibility.

Obama would reimburse employer health plans for catastrophic illness costs, lower prescription drug costs through overseas purchases and negotiating with drug companies.

McCain's plan calls for federal assistance for states to create high-risk pools to contract with insurers and provide $2,500 individual tax credits.

McCain has no plan that requires coverage for children.

Obama has co-sponsored bills for the Healthy Kids Act and SCHIP (State Children's Health Insurance Program) reauthorization as well as legislation on women's health issues in both Illinois and the US Senate.

- Military - Obama calls for an orderly transition in Iraq from the United States military to the Iraqi government. He calls new focus on Afghanistan where Al Qaeda and the Taliban thrive.

McCain, while acknowledging the resurgence of Al Qaeda and the Taliban still argues for more troops in Iraq.

Obama's record on Veteran's Affairs is strong; He has passed legislation to cut red tape at VA hospitals, to help homeless vets, to improve outreach to National Guard and reserves.

McCain skipped the most recent vote on the hill to provide better education benefits to vets, and has consistently voted against bills for veteran's health care.

As voters, it is our responsibility to be informed, to read, to learn, to cut through the nonsense.

One final note: some brilliant community organizers included John Adams, John Hancock, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin who founded our nation. Community organizing is the basis of a true democracy.

SEPERATE CREAM FROM CRUD

Editor:

What an election.

Crackpot bloggers make outrageous claims.

Talk radio personalities and ordinary people repeat them without shame like middle school gossips.

Repeated often enough, the lies will be accepted by enough people to affect the outcome of the election.

In four years we'll be wondering what happened and how we came to be so misled.

Meanwhile we can always attack the media for spoiling our fun by asking hard questions like: "But, is that really true?"

There is a non-partisan Web site that examines attacks on various candidates.

They are given a rating on a truth dial that goes from "pants-on-fire" meaning absolutely false to "true."

If you care about the outcome of the election, if you think a person who deliberately misleads the electorate is unfit for office, check it out: www.politifact.com.

Anyone who would like to donate their winter clothing can drop items off at Skilled Manufacturing Inc., 3680 Cass Road in Traverse City or any of the Master Dry Cleaners locations.

Gently used winter clothing such as winter hats, coats, mittens, gloves, scarves, boots etc. in all children and adult sizes are all gladly accepted. Monetary donations can be sent to Skilled Manufacturing Inc. and will be used to purchase winter items.

The businesses will hold a Community Coat Drive from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday Nov. 8 at Skilled Manufacturing Inc. in Traverse City.

All donations will be available for families in need of warm winter wear free of charge during the community coat drive on Nov. 8.

For more information, please contact Marnie Warren of Skilled Manufacturing Inc. at (231) 935-9819.

Survey will target need for assistance

With increased unemployment and increased costs of fuel and food, local families are finding it hard to make ends meet. With increased demand for services and declining public funds, local human service agencies are finding it hard to meet the need for assistance.

Targeting the best use of Federal, State and Local funds to help area citizens succeed is the focus of a community needs assessment being planned by the Charlevoix Emmet Human Services Collaborative Body.

The current poverty rate for 2008 is $21,200 for a family of four. In this two county area, the median income for a family of this size is $43,000.

Two surveys will be conducted; one directed toward current human service clients and the other to key informants, identified as leaders from all sectors of the community. If you are interested in learning more about the survey or would like to assist in this endeavor please contact Lorraine Manary at info@char-em-hscb.org or 347-6701.

Surveys will be conducted during the two week period September 15 - 26.

Spiritual music a matter of taste

Some Christians finding solice in contemporary gospels

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

In an Associated Press snippet tucked away under "Odd News" on Yahoo I ran across one more piece of evidence that the way people from the Christian traditions express their spirituality continues to change.

In Australia, long associated with the Anglican Communion, the traditional hymns of the faith are no longer the standard choice for funerals.

Increasingly, families are integrating popular songs that make a statement into services for their loved ones.

The most popular choice is Frank Sinatra's "My Way", followed by Louis Armstrong's version of "Wonderful World." But gaining ground is Led Zeppelin's "Stairway to Heaven" and AC/DC's "Highway to Hell," the latter presumably to the dismay of the presiding clergy.

The old traditional hymns in a funeral were intended to set a worshipful tone that honored God and the departed and offered comfort to the family, but not any more.

Funeral directors report people choosing songs that reflect the character of the deceased, or make a statement about their beliefs or lifestyle, or that interject some levity into a traditionally solemn occasion.

Move over, Amazing Grace, and make room for "Hit The Road Jack," "Another One Bites The Dust," and "Ding-Dong, The Wicked Witch Is Dead."

All of this is just one more indication that there is no end to the number of different ways to come before God, and that no particular approach is "right."

Within the Christian tradition there is ongoing disagreement over just how to express ourselves in worship.

These differences are largely matters of style and not substance, and often our style preferences are derived from what we experienced and grew comfortable with in the past.

Thus, the worshipper raised in the old Lutheran tradition of singing "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" accompanied by an organ at a tempo close to a funeral dirge is at first repelled by the upbeat guitars and drums pounding out the latest praise song at an evangelical service.

The person raised in a Protestant denomination and accustomed to short sermons that get you done and out the door in 60 minutes flat is put off by the Pentecostal preacher that stays inspired in the pulpit right through Sunday lunch

There are Catholics who feel like they've never truly worshipped since the era of the Latin mass, and Baptists who only feel truly uplifted when their worship features southern gospel harmonies.

And so, as if genuine theological differences were not enough to split the larger Church into hundreds of denominations and independent congregations, we divide ourselves further into subsets based on what feels comfortable and what leaves us feeling "fed".

Meanwhile, the outside world wonders what all the fuss is about.

Here's a key point about our relationship with God that often goes overlooked when we focus our attention and emotional energy on making sure our worship suits our taste: worship is not about us.

Worship is not something we receive, it is something we give.

The Bible refers to it as a personal sacrifice.

We are not the audience for worship; we are the worshipping body and God Almighty, the presumed object of our adoration, is the audience.

We do not, or at least should not, come to a worship service with expectations that it will be an entertainment event. We

Northern Mich. Review lays off 11

Michigan's soft economy and growing business pressures struck another local employer Friday. The announcement came early from Northern Michigan Review president and publisher Doug Caldwell that 11 jobs would be eliminated, affecting the company's newspapers in Petoskey, Gaylord and Charlevoix, and The PhoneGuide.

"Economic factors, including steep increases in fuel and newsprint costs combined with slower local and national advertising revenues negatively affected our medial operations," Caldwell said. "Business conditions in the Gaylord-Petoskey communities shaped these plans. Our future forecast remain optimistic as the local community news leader in Northern Michigan."

While the contractions represent a short-term setback, the local newspapers continue to look for efficient and meaningful ways to expand their digital outreach while protecting their core print product. Employees in Petoskey and Gaylord will conduct more outreach into their communities in the near future, asking readers and non-readers, non-advertisers and advertisers abut the issues they face and the solutions they seek.

"Northern Michigan Review remains committed to provide the best in local information through this period of transition," Caldwell said.

should not assign a score to a worship leader's choice of music, the vocal skills of someone presenting a special number, or the oratory style of the preacher.

In our mind we must not grade those who produce the service as though we were Olympic judges holding up score cards with numbers for technical merit, level of difficulty, and style.

If we shift our focus off ourselves and onto pleasing God in our worship, it begs the question what does God want or expect from us? If God alone is our audience what pleases Him?

The Bible reports that He does not desire sacrifice as in Old Testament times, and that legions of angels already sing of His glory.

It is doubtful He needs to hear His Word read back to Him, listen to a restatement of our doctrinal creeds, or hear the details of our latest program.

What can we offer to the God who already seemingly has it all?

Simply our hearts. Our broken, sinful, fearful hearts. Our grateful, contrite, loving hearts, acknowledging Him for who He is and what He does in our lives.

Whatever we do in worship, and however we do it, it needs to be the natural outpouring from the heart of the love we feel.

Whatever it looks like or sounds like for each one of us, only when it is the gift of our hearts will it be right.

Commissioners want your input on MI's new ORV law

Do you want 4-wheelers on your road?

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The state may have passed a law back in July which allows off road vehicles (ORV) on highways and byways, but local counties and townships have a right under that law to exempt some of those roads from ORV traffic.

And, in the vein of good democracy, say county commissioners, your local governors want your opinion.

"Everybody gets a shot," said Chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners Christ Christensen (R-District 2). "We're looking to send this to the townships and their citizens; If you have concerns about ORVs or you have an opinion, voice it by contacting local supervisors and local boards."

Christensen's comments followed the commission's regular meeting on Sept. 10, wherein the board voted unanimously to give Charlevoix County citizens several months to opine before a public hearing on the matter is held in January or February, 2009.

ORV may now ride on road shoulders at speeds of up to 25 mph so long as they are wearing a helmet and have a valid driver's license and vehicle registration or, for children as young as 12, a certificate provided by the state.

"The state gave us the ability to list (exempt) up to 30 percent of the roads in the county, and we chose a lot less than 30 percent," he said.

"We're trying to get everybody involved."

He added, "Not everybody is going to be happy, but at least this way everybody has a chance to speak."

Program highlights food, fuel, climate

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Once cheap gas has been cited as a contributor to global warming, so you start buying fuel made of corn; then biofuel consumption causes the cost of food to skyrocket.

So, is there a way to win this global shell game?

"I really believe in Thomas Jefferson's (assertion) that an informed citizenry is the best way to protect democracy," said Annemarie Conway, the moderator and co-organizer of an upcoming series of talks on food, fuel and climate. "Our whole goal is to inform people on the issues from a nonpartisan place."

Professor of economics and public policy Alan Deardorff Ph.D. will give an overview of how food is bought, sold and transported throughout the world during the first in a series of programs at 6 p.m., Sept. 25 at the Charlevoix Public Library, Conway said.

"This series of three programs (includes) the globalization of food, the food-fuel connection and farming for our future," she said. "Corn, is it a boondoggle or is ethanol the wave of the future? These are the types of issues we need to understand, because (food, fuel and climate) are all interconnected."

Conway added, "We must explore them because they are really important topics that impact our politics of today. We should be researching this and getting a handle on where to proceed from here."

"The Food-Fuel Connection" program is scheduled for 6 p.m., Oct. 9 at Charlevoix Public Library, and noon, Oct. 10 at North Central Michigan College.

"Farming for our future" is scheduled for 6 p.m., Oct. 9 at the Charlevoix library, and noon, Nov. 7 at North Central Michigan College's library

DNR small game forecast

Most fall hunting seasons are right around the corner and Department of Natural Resources biologists say hunters will find plenty of opportunity.

Rabbits - Cottontail rabbits and varying or snowshoe hare can be hunted from Sept. 15 - March 31, statewide. Hunters may take a limit of five per day and 10 in combined possession

Outlook: Cottontail populations are good throughout their range and they remain among the most popular small game animals in Michigan. Last year hunters harvested about 366,000 cottontails

Squirrels Sept 15 through March 1 Hunters can bag up to five per day and have 10 in combined possession

Outlook Both fox and gray squirrels are at moderate to high levels throughout their range Look for good populations in areas that had a good mast crop last year or in wood lots adjoining corn fields. Last year hunters took 514,000 squirrels.

Ruffed Grouse - Season: Sept. 15 through Nov. 14. After the firearm deer season ends, the grouse season reopens from Dec. 1 until Jan. 1. The bag limit for grouse is five per day/10 in possession in Zones 1 and 2. and three per day/six in possession in Zone 3.

Outlook: The outlook for the upcoming season is good; last year hunters took 312,000 ruffed grouse and, as populations usually cycle over a 10-year period, populations are on an upswing. Grouse are most numerous in young forests, in young to moderate-aged aspen stands, and around tag alder thickets.

Areas with good fall berry crops often produce well. Grouse are most abundant in the Upper Peninsula and the northern Lower Peninsula. Grouse and woodcock hunters are asked to assist the DNR in monitoring grouse and woodcock populations by providing information about their hunts. The cooperator form can be found on the DNR Web site at www.michigan/dnr.

Woodcock - Sept. 20 through Nov. 3. The bag limit will be three woodcock per day/six in possession.

Outlook: Woodcock hunters may expect a season similar to last year, when hunters harvested about 118,000 woodcock. Although good numbers of grouse and woodcock can be found in all parts of Michigan, the highest densities are located in the northern two-thirds of the state. The west end of the Upper Peninsula should have good numbers of birds

Expect good rabbit, squirrel hunting

during the early season. The best spots may be in thicker, younger cover along streams and the edges of swampland. Hunters are reminded to have the Harvest Information Program (HIP) endorsement printed on their small game license.

Pheasants - Season: Oct. 10 until 31 in the Upper Peninsula. The Lower Peninsula runs from Oct. 20 to Nov. 14. The late pheasant season in most of the southern Lower Peninsula will be open from Dec. 1 to Jan. 1 with a bag limit of two male pheasants/four in possession.

Outlook: Pheasants populations were down last year: hunters took nearly 65,000 birds, and there's no reason to expect to be up significantly, but there is cause for optimism. The best counties include Shiawassee, Livingston, Lenawee, Hillsdale, Huron, Ionia and Montcalm. Look for fields of warm-season grasses, especially farm fields that have been idled for a few years. Late season hunters should concentrate their efforts in cattail and shrub wetlands near picked agricultural fields.

Quail - Season: Oct. 20 until Nov. 14. Quail can be hunted only in Branch, Calhoun, Clinton, Eaton, Genesee, Gratiot, Hillsdale, Huron, Ingham, Ionia, Jackson, Kent, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Montcalm, Oakland, Saginaw, St. Clair, St. Joseph, Sanilac, Shiawassee, Tuscola, Washtenaw and Wayne counties. The bag limit is five per day/10 in possession.

Outlook: Although patchy in distribution and abundance, quail can be found throughout southern Michigan. Hunters killed an estimated 1,700 quail last year.

Wild Turkey - Oct. 6 until Nov. 14 in 12 management units including most of southern Michigan, five counties in the northern Lower Peninsula and the entire turkey management area of the Upper Peninsula The bag limit is one bird (either sex). A total of 59,050 licenses were available through a lottery, but leftover licenses will be available over the counter beginning Sept. 18 at 10 a.m. for individuals who did not apply for a fall turkey license.

Outlook: Turkey numbers should be excellent in all areas open for fall hunting.

Ducks - The season for ducks and mergansers, excluding scaup, is Oct. 4 through Dec. 2 in the North Zone (Upper Peninsula); Oct. 4 - Nov. 30 and Dec.

6-7 in the Middle Zone (northern Lower Peninsula] Zone; and Oct.11 through Dec. 7 and Jan. 3 to 4 in the South Zone (southern Lower Peninsula). New this season is a variable limit on scaup (bluebills); hunters may take one per day for 40 days of the 60-day season and two per day for the remaining 20 days. The bag limit is six ducks per day; no more than four mallards (one hen), three wood ducks, two redheads, one pintail and one black duck. There is no open season on canvasbacks this year. In addition, hunters may take up to five mergansers, no more than two of which may be hooded mergansers, daily. The possession limit is twice the daily bag limit. The youth waterfowl hunting weekend will be Sept. 20-21 statewide for licensed youths 10 to 15 only, who must be accompanied by an adult, who may not hunt.

Outlook: Duck populations and prairie pond numbers were high enough to allow for the maximum 60-day season under the federal adaptive waterfowl harvest strategy. However, Michigan mallard numbers were the lowest in recent history, so they may be in short supply during the early days of the season, but should improve as the migrants arrive. An increase in the daily bag limit for wood ducks, from two to three birds this fall, should provide additional opportunities for early season hunters, especially in isolated bayous and beaver ponds. The St. Marys River system in the eastern Upper Peninsula, Saginaw Bay, Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie are great areas to hunt diving ducks, which usually begin arriving around mid October. Last year hunters harvested 375,000 ducks in Michigan.

Geese - Season: The early season is Sept. 1-15 in the Lower Peninsula statewide, except for Saginaw, Tuscola and Huron counties (Sept. 1-10). In the Upper Peninsula, this early season will be Sept. 1-10. The limit is five per day

The regular goose season in the North Zone is Sept. 22 - Nov. 5. In Middle Zone, the regular season is Oct. 4 - Nov. 10 and Nov. 27 - Dec.

3. In the South Zone, the season is Oct. 11 - Nov. 13 and Nov. 27 - Dec. 7 except in some Goose Management Units. The season is the same as the South Zone for the Saginaw and Tuscola /Huron GMUs. The season at Allegan County GMU is Nov. 8-10 and Dec. 20 - Jan. 30. The season at Muskegon County Waste Water GMU is Oct. 14 - Nov. 13 and Dec. 2-15. The limit is two per day.

Check the 2008 Michigan Waterfowl Hunting Guide for GMU boundaries.

The late Canada goose season is slated for Jan. 3 - Feb. 1 in all of the South Zone except the Allegan and Muskegon WW GMUS. The daily bag limit is five except in GMUs, where it's two.

Outlook: Michigan's local population of giant Canada goose continues to supply more than 70% of the state's total Canada goose harvest. The early September hunts and the 30-day late season help control these local flocks through recreational hunting. Resident Canada goose populations are stable to slightly increased this year. The South James Bay Population of migratory Canada geese, which passes through the southeastern portion of the state, is very similar to last year and the five-year average. The Mississippi Valley Population, which generally migrates through the western portion of the state, however, is significantly below the five-year average. Last year, hunters killed 181,000 Canada goose in Michigan.

Local musician cuts second CD

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

Local musician Dwain Martin has recently released his second album.

Martin has been writing songs for over 20 years, and on his latest disc, "Road To Wonderland," he has enlisted the help of nearly 10 local musicians.

"It feels like an awards ceremony," said Martin. "(We) spent a lot of winter nights in that studio. They inspired me to bring it together."

Martin explained that, when he recorded his first disc, he did it mostly for himself.

"I had written about 50 or 70 songs, and with 'Water So Blue,' I was just getting them recorded for myself so that I could remember the melodies," he said.

The Wonderland disc, which concludes with two live versions of songs from "Water So Blue," is a compilation of 11 of his latest songs.

"Reason to Believe," and "Soma" are the two live recordings which Martin said were crowd favorites at local outings.

A few of the Torch Lake singer/songwriter's hotspots have included Short's Brewery in Bellaire, Boyne Street Music, Horizon Books and the Norwood Festival and Auction held last month.

Dwain Martin strums away during a studio session.

Martin's demeanor seems gentle and humble for a guy who has written just under 100 songs.

There is no rock star bravado and this reflects beautifully in the title of one of Martin's songs, "Namaste."

"Namaste is a Buddhist saying where they put their hands together and it means, 'the god-like in you meets the god-like in me.'"

Martin explained that the term "wonderland" in the title of his CD is what people used to refer to Michigan as when he was younger.

"Sometimes we forget that's what Michigan is," he said. "Sometimes you find yourself on a road back to home."

Martin said his music has matured since "Water So Blue," noting the two live tracks on the CD were written sometime around the mid-90s.

"This time around, I wasn't so much archiving as I was just recording and thinking, 'if I were to listen to this, what would I want to hear?'" he said. "This is a labor of love, and I wanted to do it right."

Martin said he wishes he could sum up the overall feeling of gratitude.

"Road To Wonderland" was recorded at Runyan Media in Central Lake and can be purchased at Revolution Bike and Gallery 704 in Charlevoix.

Martin said he would be happy to shelve his new disc in any shop willing to carry.

His next scheduled date is the Harvest Festival in Boyne City starting at 4 p.m. on Saturday Oct. 4.

He will also be attending the open mic nights at the library being held between the months of October through May.

Airport mgr. revs up for five-year plan

BY A.J. HOFFMAN
STAFF WRITER

Bailey

Matt Bailey, manager of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport, knows what to do to generate more revenue and make improvements to the airport.

In his five year capital improvement program, spanning 2009 to 2013, Bailey has it all planned out.

"My goal is to bring more revenue into Charlevoix and make the airport self-sustaining," Bailey said. "I feel we'll be successful if we don't have to ask the citizens for any money."

Bailey said that in an age of pork-barrel and excessive spending at the governmental level, a five-year plan noting the specific improvements they expect to make is in order.

"I want the airport to improve because it brings more tourism and industry," he said. "Ultimately, that increases the general fund of the city as well."

Bailey explained that the airport gets $1 million a year from the state because they get 10,000 passengers a year. He said it was due mostly to Island Airways, Fresh Air Aviation and a couple of other local charter operations that they are able to garner the money.

"If it weren't for them, we wouldn't be getting that money," he said. "We're treated as (a) primary airport, like Detroit Metro, but we're a small primary airport."

Bailey also said they get a lot of business from Harbor Springs, Net Jets, Day Jets, Biz Jets and North Country Aviation out of Gaylord.

"We also get a fair amount of military aircraft coming in here to re-fuel," he said. "Another thing this airport supports is North Flight, or Med-Flights, which transports patients or medical supplies in a hurry."

In addition to commercial flights, the airport receives its fair share of corporate flights.

"It's amazing what a variety of stuff we get in here," Bailey said.

The first step in their five-year plan is called Master Plan Phase II, which is a requirement of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). This step lays out all of the prerequisite planning for the rest of the five-year program.

The next step for the airport is to buy a small amount of property currently located in between U.S. 31 and the airport.

"The purchase of that property is meant to increase our safety area," Bailey said.

Item number three on the plan is to update the security fences and electric gates.

"During the winter time, these fences get pretty icy and just don't operate very well in the elements," he said. "We've already put a lot of money into trying to keep them functional. We just need to upgrade them because they weren't really made for the winter time."

Steps four and five of the program initiate expanding the current 4,500 foot long runway to 4,950 feet. Bailey said his intentions are to keep the runway under 5,000 feet.

"We're doing this for two reasons. The first reason is because the FAA doesn't like the end-around taxi-way and they want to correct that," Bailey said, explaining that an end-around taxi-way is a safety issue.

"Also, this will allow aircraft to have a greater takeoff so that they take on more distance and use more fuel."

Bailey explained that Charlevoix gets 20 cents for every gallon of fuel purchased at the airport.

"In doing this, it will bring in more revenue to the city as well," he said.

Steps six and seven are the site preparation for hangar relocation to the South hangar area and demolition of the North hangar/construction of the Southside hangars. "These hangars (on the North side) are aged and getting close to the end of useful life. The North hangar complex is 25 to 30 years old," he said.

Bailey said the relocation of these hangars are necessary because they currently in the obstacle-free zone, otherwise known as the runway protection zone (the RPZ) to the FAA.

"We have a waiting list of approximately 12 people waiting for hangar space here, and that would generate more revenue to the airport," Bailey said. "We're planning to build six to 12 hangars. Most of these people are local and would like to store their aircraft here but can't because we just don't have the space for them."

Items eight through 11 all deal with the land reorientation, construction, paving and lighting of a runway.

The grass runway is already being used by planes, but is not used during the winter time. "We're building this to deal with more diverse weather/wind conditions, that way we can use this all year around once it's paved," Bailey said. "It's better and easier on equipment to land on a hard-paved surface."

Finally, step 12 outlines terminal building expansion and renovation. "This is to get competing local business in the same building so there is a level playing field of competition," Bailey said.

"This in turn will directly benefit the community and users of the airport."

1800s-style schooner to be built

SHIP

Smith. "We're also going to try to set up cruises where we go to other harbors in the Great Lakes and be ambassadors of Charlevoix."

Smith also said that they're working closely with the Coast Guard to make sure that everything on the Challenge is built in cooperation with their regulations.

The donor of the initial contribution indicated that matching funds will be made available up to another $30,000.

"Boats have been built to the tune of four to five million dollars," said Stutzman. "With what we're doing, it shouldn't cost that much because Bob Schafer is personally going out to cut and donate all of the timber that's going to be used."

"We're hoping to avoid costly mistakes and get the Challenge built at a much smaller cost," said Smith.

Fred Hackl, Seaports Great Lakes board president has said that this is a "grass roots project" and will provide a wonderful incentive for increasing tourist visits while benefiting the community youth.

"We had the opportunity to see the Niagara this summer," said Tim Boyko, board member of Seaports Great Lakes. "All of the ships are a crowd-pleaser when they visit and generate a lot of interest. It would be great to have our own tall ship berthed right here in Charlevoix."

Boyko explained that this project will produce an authentic schooner, which is something that was essential to the economy in the late 1800s.

"It would dress up the harbor and though we have many tall ships in our harbor, its a big attraction," said Boyko. "That, along with the educational opportunity for young people, makes it a great thing to have."

Timbers for the ship's hull, deck and masts are being cut in the Upper Peninsula and will be hauled to Charlevoix for the building of the ship.

Shaping individual parts of frames and the vessel's keel is planned for the upcoming fall and winter, with an official keel laying next spring.

The project envisions building the replica schooner off of the original Challenge ship which once sailed during the 1800s. The vessel is projected to be built along the Pine River in Charlevoix.

The vessel, to be constructed and funded by volunteers of the community, will be used to represent Charlevoix and increase tourism as well as providing youth training opportunities.

"The Challenge schooner would be a fabulous addition to our wonderful city," said Boyko.

At press time, everyone involved with the Tall Ship Project was going through the final steps of approval from the city. Stutzman said they were very close to finalization.

There will be an informational meeting from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday Oct 11 at the Charlevoix Public Library. There, the Mackinaw will be on display as well as a five feet model of the Challenge.

Breasts are overrated:

"one body, one chance"

JULIE WITTHOEFT,
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

Natalie Jason, a 43-year-old Charlevoix resident, has a unique mantra.

"Breasts are extremely overrated — they really are," she said, eyes twinkling, bald head shining.

Jason's outlook on life followed a March 2008 breast cancer diagnosis followed by bilateral surgery and eight weeks of chemotherapy.

She discovered a lump in her breast in early March as she rolled out of bed.

"It felt like a hard knuckle," she said.

Jason is the third generation of women in her family faced with the disease — her grandmother and two aunts all suffered and she lost her mom, Mary Miles, to ovarian cancer in 1996.

"It wasn't a matter of if I'll get it, it was when," she said

With this in mind, after discovering the lump she headed to her family practitioner, Dr. Andrea Wendling at Boyne Area Medical, who immediately referred her to Craig Wendt, a general surgeon at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

In late April, Wendt removed a 9-millimeter mass and a second 2.5-millimeter mass, which later tested to be grade three cancer.

"I knew it was cancer, I just didn't know how bad it was. It would have developed if I'd ignored it," Jason said.

Dr. Wendt delivered her the news on May 7, two days before Jason was scheduled to graduate from North Central Michigan College with a medical assistant's degree.

He told her he'd removed the cancer but that it was invasive and may appear elsewhere in her tissue or lymph nodes.

Jason's answer was simple. The cancer won't show up in the usual places — the other breast or her reproductive system — because both are going.

"So, I graduated on Saturday, May 9, and had my breasts removed on Tuesday," she said.

The physical hit took an

Say no to mow! Judge gets warning for mowing state land

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Acting on a tip from a nearby property owner, DNR officials investigated a complaint and later issued a warning to Norwood citizen and 33rd Circuit Judge Richard M. Pajtas for mowing on state land.

However, Pajtas claims he has a right to maintain the two-third-mile-long, 15-feet-wide path on a southeast portion of the 2,678-acre park as a matter of necessity.

"Whiskey Creek, along with steep banks and swampland essentially sever the northern property from the southern portion of their property," wrote Pajtas' legal representation Kristyn J. Houle to the DNR in a letter dated Sept. 17.

She cited case law which states that a "party asserting the right to an easement need only show that the easement is reasonably necessary ... to the enjoyment of the benefited property."

However, Sue Rose, unit manager of Young State and Fisherman's Island Parks said mowing on the park is prohibited.

"It's a minor incident and we took care of it like any other incident," she said. "The case is closed. The grass will grow back."

Rose may consider the case closed, but Pajtas and his attorneys now away a response from the DNR to see if they will honor the easement he feels he deserves.

According to Pajtas, Michigan law dictates that a person shall not "destroy, damage, or remove any tree, shrub, wildflower or other vegetation or property without permission of the department," and he feels that, "Mowing grass does not destroy, damage or remove vegetation. If it did, you could not mow your lawn."

He added that, even if one were to stretch the rule to include mowing, "the holder of an easement has a right to reasonably maintain it."

The complainant, Pajtas' neighbor Wayne Wynkoop, is disappointed with the DNR's decision on the matter and feels Pajtas received special treatment. However, Rose said this kind of thing happens all over Michigan, and said it is always handled in the same way: Simply tell the party to stop doing what they are doing

Latest of Olds legacy dies

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

Bernice "Bunny" Olds Roe Smith died on Tuesday Sept. 2. She was 80 years old.

Smith was the granddaughter of Ransom Eli Olds, the automobile pioneer, and Metta Woodard Olds. The Olds family had several summer cottages and properties in northern Michigan, especially in Charlevoix.

"(At the Belvedere Club) my great-grandfather, Ransom, owned the #39 house, that's the one with the turret on top," said Clela Nicole Gray, daughter of Smith.

Gray said that her and her family used to come up to Charlevoix every summer. "My mother spent all of her summers here except for the last three years she was alive," said Gray. "She just thought it was a beautiful spot."

As a renowned dog lover, Smith was once quoted as saying, "Dogs are only children in fur coats."

Gray said that her mother was a lifeguard at the Belvedere as a teenager. She also said that she once saved a 2-year-old from drowning when the child fell off of a ski dock. Gray said that for most of her life, her mother was a housewife.

As a youngster, Smith also enjoyed sailing and beach parties with her family in northern Michigan. "I remember always having lunch from the Belvedere Club, or bringing some food and having a picnic lunch with her during the summertime," Gray said.

Smith's grandfather, Ransom, once described northern Michigan as "God's heaven." According to Gray, Ransom also used to own a boathouse that sat in Round Lake. "It was later made into a condominium in the '70s or '80s," said Gray. "Its that long barn-like looking thing."

Smith donated to, among many things, the community pool. She also gave money so children from Beaver Island could come over to Charlevoix and take swimming lessons.

"She was a very loyal supporter of the historical society," said Dave Miles, Harsha House Museum Director. "She was a patron, and from what I know of her, she gave to a lot of different organizations."

Charlevoix chosen as a top lakeside town

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

It might not be a surprise to Charlevoix residents and visitors that the area is replete with lush natural assets and trademark up north features like the wide variety of quaint shops and waterfront parks.

The preceding facts were not overlooked as Yahoo.com recently featured the piece "America's Best Lake Towns" by Caitlin Kelly who writes for Lake of the Ozarks Convention & Visitor Bureau.com.

"I think it's appropriate," said Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Erin Bemis. "We have a beautiful community and we are grateful to share it with whomever wants to come and enjoy it."

She added, "And, to have such great press at a national level, I think, is outstanding."

Charlevoix came listed second out of seven destinations, just after Priest Lake, Idaho and in the company of Lake of the Ozarks, Mo.; Lake Placid, Fla.; Lake Arrowhead, Calif.

"Shops, restaurants and galleries with lovely picture windows and awnings line Bridge Street, the main artery, well, more like capillary, of post-card-perfect Charlevoix, located where Lake Charlevoix drains through Round Lake into Lake Michigan," Kelly wrote. "A harbor-front park on one side of Bridge Street has a fountain and picnic tables, where families pause to savor treats like homemade chocolate black-walnut fudge from the original, family-run Murdick's Famous Fudge or a cone topped with a scoop of toasted coconut from Kilwin's Chocolates and Ice Cream."

Bemis is confident the Web mention of Charlevoix will have a positive impact.

"Tourism is one of the major industries here, and anything we can do to promote that and keep that strong ... is just another way the chamber helps promote our area," she said. "Michigan Meetings and Events Magazine (has) an article as well."

Visit http://travel.yahoo.com/p-interests-23486646 to see the full Yahoo.com article.

In a piece entitled "Million-Dollar Sunsets" by Julie Fracker, Charlevoix is listed along side Little Traverse Bay as an appealing destination.

"Charlevoix has earned a reputation as the "crown jewel" of vacation destinations because of its prized site between Lake Michigan, Lake Charlevoix and Round Lake," Fracker wrote.

HAPPY 100 Nazarene church

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

The Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene will celebrate the 100th anniversary of their denomination.

The celebration will take place at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday Oct. 5.

"All of the churches will be participating in communion and some of the same readings," said Gilmore. "Some of the same songs will be sang by each different congregation as well."

The church is located at 12023 Waller Road. Pastor Dan Gilmore said their congregation will join with 18,000 other Church of the Nazarene congregations in 151 world areas for the celebration.

The Church of the Nazarene has its roots in Methodism, drawn from the teachings of English evangelist John Wesley (1703-1791). The denomination was established in October 1908 in Pilot Point, Texas, the culmination of mergers of several like-minded groups. The mission of the Church of the Nazarene is to make Christ-like disciples in the nations.

"Our denomination has been real pro-active in practicing our faith and the fellowship has led us to re-examine our roots," said Gilmore. "Our goals have been to preach the gospel and focus on our missions. Its calling us back to that original vision."

Gilmore, who has been the pastor since 2002, said that over the years, at least 20 members of the congregation have gone on mission trips.

Eight people from their congregation went to Costa Rica and Nicaragua in April. "It was a youth trip with five teens and three sponsors. The group worked on a district headquarters facility in San Carlos," he said.

Translation of materials has been sent to every Church of the Nazarene across the globe. The plan is that all 1.6 million members of the church will celebrate in worship and communion in all 24 time zones of the world on the same day.

"Our congregation is excited to celebrate this anniversary with all of our denominational family around the world," Gilmore said. "We want to emphasize that the family of God never stops growing, and there is a place for all. In our society today, it seems that relationships often do not last very long. We invite our community to join us on Oct. 5 to see relationships that have remained strong for 100 years."

COURTESY PHOTO

At 9:30 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 5 at the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene, parishoners will join with 18,000 congregations worldwide to celebrate the 100th anniversary of their denomination.

Locally, Gilmore said their church is a small congregation which has 39 members, but they average about 50 people in attendance a week. As an opener to get people geared up for the celebration, they had a cookout at the church on Sunday Sept. 7 and it was well attended.

Gilmore said that celebrating the church's centennial anniversary gives continuity to their message.

"I'm passionate about ou victory and belief in Christ Jesus gives us victory and th privilege to live above the worl at a time when the world ca get us down," Gilmore said.

How to pick a prez

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

We are about to enter the most intense advertising season ever; And certainly the most comprehensive propaganda campaigns of the last four years.

The annual Christmas efforts in no way compare in intensity with the season of choosing a president.

The money spent on such advertising dwarfs even that spent by pharmaceutical companies in pushing new drugs.

The rules of saturation advertising are well known. Repeat what you wish to be true often enough and loud enough, and many people will take it to be reality.

We don't so much vote for a president as buy one. We often buy the one most effectively presented, rather than the one who could be best at being president.

Eventually, we might learn to be wary of such manipulation, but I suspect we will succumb to the endless repetition of what ad-makers wish us to believe. Consider the number of times in the past few years that a new, widely advertised and approved drug (often costly) has sold billions of dollars worth of itself, only to have it established that it is ineffective or dangerous or less effective than the earlier and less expensive version.

The power of repetition was most clearly brought home to me by a study of the effect on pre-school children of broadcasting repeatedly the films of the fall of the World Trade Towers.

Many of them were terrified or even traumatized because they believed that each time they saw it, a new set of buildings was being destroyed.

That power of repetition works to some extent on all of us, not just children.

Basic propaganda theory tells us that even the most outrageous lie repeated enough times will become our reality.

It is not that we are stupid, or don't listen carefully enough, it is just the way we are built; Our brains evolved to enhance our survival in the era before mass media.

When we see or hear something happening, our first inclination is to think that it is happening right now.

We are inclined to see each repetition as a new event, and each repetition reinforces the sense of reality.

Political campaign propaganda uses that long-time mental capacity to alter our beliefs or change our behavior. In exactly the same way we can be convinced that this brand of soap or that kind of cigarette is better than others.

We can be made to believe that a military hero is a fraud. We can be made to believe that inexperience is a precious virtue. At least some people still believe that John McCain fathered an illegitimate black child, or that Iraq was directly involved in the Sept. 11 attacks.

All of those false beliefs are the product of intense repetition of outrageous lies.

At their best, ads widely broadcast during a presidential race could be educational, meant to inform rather than merely convince. What can be said about the deluge of ads we are about to face is that children should not be allowed to watch for fear or permanent corruption of their mental capacities.

And, that adults should pay as little attention as possible out of fear of losing whatever small grasp they have on reality.

If you must watch the presentation of candidates, it is a good idea to watch only live broadcasts, like the debates, not the endless repetition of prepared ads or the repeated broadcasts of something said by someone weeks ago. Try not to be manipulated by repetition. You only get to vote once: make it count.

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamine Gohs

Arguing with the wife over politics again.

She's thinking Obama is a cross between J.F.K., J.C. and F.D.R. I'm thinking if this guy gets elected we're all S.O.L.The wife says the "O" man is an agent of change; I say so is Ex-Lax.

Things quickly go south.

Yeah, he has a different skin color, and he's taller than John Kerry, but I'm not so sure he's the incarnation of all things new and better.

Before you call Al Gore's goon squad to pull me kicking and screaming out of my Liberal Media™ brand bunker, just have a look at Obama's "Blueprint for Change" and, as Dave Barry would say, I am not making this up.

He wants more campaign finance reform, because as a free American, you shouldn't have the freedom to give as much money as you like to the politician of your choice, and you certainly don't have a right to keep that a secret.

Obama plans to increase public financing and give free radio and TV time to politicians as well.

Obama's history shows his love of big government. He introduced the Patriot Employer Act of 2007, a boondoggle that bribes companies to "maintain or increase the number of full-time workers in America relative to those outside the US; maintain their corporate headquarters in America; pay decent wages; prepare workers for retirement; provide health insurance; and support employees who serve in the military."

The system is so bad that the only way to get a shortsighted American company to do the right thing is give them tax breaks.

Of course, this is the same guy who fought a $2 billion cut in corporate welfare for the U.S. Ag' Department.

He'll keep government solvent by doubling after school program funding, give incentives to companies which offer more flexible schedules, pump $1 billion into a program to help "low-income Americans succeed" and send $1.5 billion of your tax dollars to force employers to offer employees paid leave.

And, if that's not enough to cause a mutiny, Obama plans to stem the flow of emigration from Mexico by promoting economic development, at our expense, south of the border.

Whatever happened to the American dream of employing your own vision and ambition to achieve a goal? Let me know if you figure it out.

Obama wants even more of your tax dollars to go toward the medical industrial complex (hundreds of millions of tax dollars already go to your local hospitals), but he does so at our peril; Give this nation's medical facilities the same type of bottomless purse as has the military, and watch an unwieldy beast of financial burden and sub par services rivaled only by the federal government itself.

Don't fret, cuz he's got a plan to pay for it all.

By increasing income and Social Security taxes on the wealthiest Americans he will create a federal surplus unrivaled in modern times. Which is good, because reducing carbon emissions, creating green industry and saving the planet isn't going to be cheap.

The Polar Cap Act(*1) will provide for construction of air-conditioned flats powered by solar panels and happy feelings. The diminishing, overheated polar bear population will find refuge in these arctic condos until Al Gore's third year at Hogwarts when he learns the spell for reversing global warming.

Then, in a bold move not seen since Hillary Clinton brought sexy back to the pantsuit, Obama will convince the big three auto makers to convert from gas to electric.

The demand for solar, wind and nuclear will stimulate the economy; The military will be issued hugs instead of guns and ordered to care at will.

Overwhelmed by star spangled utopia, Al Qaeda will throw down their jihad and Obama will hire them to replace the Latino laborers now thriving under Mexico's stout peso; Al Gore, having invented an environmentally-friendly way of discovering oil, will spearhead the drilling in ANWR where he and government geologists will discover a real life leprechaun who, by law, turns his pot of gold over to the U.S. Treasury(*2).

At the end of the day, change is working to make Americans more free. Change is slashing and burning wasteful and criminal governmental enterprise. Change is reinstating personal responsibility by eliminating the Big Brother style of government. Change is refusing to bail out companies, and private citizens, who make poor choices.

Judging by the look on the wife's face, the most important change of all is learning to shut my mouth.

*1 This I made up.

*2 Whiskey-induced speculation.

THANKS FOR C.A.R.E.-ING

Editor:

This is just a note to thank you and your staff (Charlevoix Courier) for the excellent article about the 2nd Annual CARE ENERGY Fair, held Sept. 6 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

We had many great presenters, a beautiful eco-fashion show, wonderful vendors, and a perfect day.

Thanks to all who came and listened to the great jazz and blissful musicians including the Northwest Academy Jazz Band.

Thanks also to the generous sponsors, members of C.A.R.E. and the WATCH Board of Directors.

MY TWO CENTS

Editor:

I would like to add my two cents to Larry Freedman's editorial last week.

I do not think it would be that difficult to do many of the Traverse City "Friday Night Live" features in downtown Charlevoix.

Many of the fun features done in Traverse City could easily be done in Charlevoix. We have already seen examples this summer.

In fact, my children, grandchildren and I were treated to a street musician and a juggler when they were visiting over Labor Day weekend.

We enjoyed the lively atmosphere as we walked through town and think that a "Live from Charlevoix, It's Saturday Night" would be great.

Not on special event weekends during the summer, but all the other weekends.

I don't think that it should be limited to the summer.

Why not have the event at least once a month during the rest of the year; it could be changed/altered to the seasons and draw families into town in the early evening on Saturday.

Why not making this happen for children, teens and adults?

As a side note, East Park has turn out beautifully, the band shell is wonderful, the new docks and seawall are great, the harbormaster's facilities are outstanding and the Kids Fountain is just plain terrific and fun.

TRYIN' BRIAN

Editor:

Occasionally, a Charlevoix County employee shows such exceptional performance on the project that a public thank you is necessary.

That individual is Brian Kelly from the GIS (Geographical Information System) department.

His dedication and superior attention to detail allowed for our island community to achieve another successful year of shoreline Phragmites treatment.

Brian displayed innovative approaches as we mapped our infestations and without his fine work, our shoreline with its sensitive and endangered species would be in jeopardy.

The Beaver Island community extends a BIG THANK YOU to Brian.

HONORING HELEN

Editor:

On behalf of Hospice of Northwest Michigan, the Board of Directors and Volunteers, I want to thank Ron Weislik and Cheri Hoffman for chairing the Eighth Annual Helen Open.

It is held each year in memory of that very special lady, Helen Weislik. This year's event was held on Aug. 17.

We are very appreciative of the extremely generous donations provided by community businesses and citizens. We received $19,000 for 2008 and a total of $97,000 since the event began in 2001.

We do not charge for our services, which include volunteer, bereavement and community outreach, and this money will be put to good use helping those in our communities.

I know how much work was put into this activity by those who worked, those who participated and those who donated.

I know that Helen is smiling down on all of you, and joins us in saying "thank-your."

Check Web for food recalls

As part of National Food Safety Education Month, the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) today launched a new alert system to notify consumers when food-related recalls and warnings are issued. Foodborne illnesses are a serious public health threat. Although the exact number of foodborne illness in the United States is unknown, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates as many as 5,000 deaths and 76 million illnesses each year are directly linked to foodborne illnesses.

"Protecting Michigan consumers from foods which may be contaminated with potentially deadly agents or organisms is the department's primary mission," said Don Koivisto, MDA director. "Thanks to emerging technologies, we are able to warn consumers almost instantly to avoid or discard recalled food products, ensuring public health is protected and maintaining the viability of the state's food safety net."

This new e-mail service is part of a cooperative project by the departments of Agriculture and Information Technology (DIT) in connection with the state's effort to better inform consumers when a Class I food recall is issued and protect public health.

A Class I food recall is a situation where the food has been deemed unsafe or unfit for human consumption and if consumed may cause serious adverse health consequences or death.

The number of Class I food recalls affecting Michigan continues to rise. From Fiscal Year (FY) 06 to FY07, MDA noted a 56 percent increase in the number of Class I food recalls affecting Michigan consumers (FY06= 62 recalls; FY07=97 recalls).

"This is another great example of how we are working with state agencies to utilize technology for the benefit of our citizens across the state," said Ken Theis, MDIT director and CIO for the State of Michigan. "Our strong partnership with the Department of Agriculture has resulted in this potentially life-saving new service that will prevent unnecessary illnesses and help to protect the health of Michigan citizens."

MDA employees enforce Michigan's comprehensive food safety laws and regulate the food supply at the state's 17,900 food-processing plants, retail grocery stores, convenience stores, markets, and fair concessions. In partnership with local health departments (LHDs), MDA staff ensures the 31,000 state licensed restaurants are serving safe food to Michigan's consumers and visitors. Additionally, MDA and LHDs investigate foodborne illness outbreaks and other food emergencies.

National Food Safety Education Month was created by the food industry in 1995 and is widely recognized by federal, state, and local governmental agencies, the food and agriculture industries, and consumer organizations.

AN HONOR

Local residents awarded eddis for their commitment to the arts

CHRISTINA ROHN
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

The eighth annual eddi Awards at Crooked Tree Arts Center began as an evening of University of Michigan alumni bashing Michigan State University alumni.

Bob Forman, University of Michigan alumni and master of ceremonies for the event, had the crowd in stitches Friday evening as he performed joke after joke at the MSU graduates' expense.

During award acceptance speeches, several State alumni eventually got their revenge.

Although this lighthearted joking was a constant throughout the award ceremony, eventually Forman and the presenters were able to focus on the task at hand — awarding individuals and organizations within the community for their outstanding commitment to the arts.

Eight awards were given out during the evening, which included a visual artist, performing artist, arts and cultural organization, arts in education, arts and cultural leadership, individual patron, benefactor and lifetime achievement.

Mary Ann Chew of Charlevoix seemed overwhelmed as she took the stage to accept her award for lifetime achievement.

The Charlevoix native was honored for her dedication to her hometown community. Chew has taught for the past 31 years at Charlevoix Public Schools. While there, she was assigned by the board of education to be the representative for the public library where she helped to develop Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library.

She has served for the past 30 years on the board of directors for the Charlevoix Council for the Arts and Charlevoix Art Fair. She was responsible for Charlevoix's participation in Crooked Tree's "Art In Public Places" project, and also had a hand in securing Tom Moran's large-scale sculpture of a Monarch butterfly to be permanently situated on the grounds of the Charlevoix library.

Chew said she was extremely humbled by the honor.

"My thanks to all of you who helped bring the joy of art, music and the theater to our community. It is my pleasure to be a small part of such an important job," she said. "I will treasure this eddi award. This evening will be a cherished memory."

One of the most memorable acceptance speeches of the evening came from Roy Harvey, recipient of the performing artist award.

It was impossible to deny him as he walked to the podium and immediately began booming his deep baritone voice, taking on the role of a sports announcer.

"Good evening ladies and gentlemen and welcome to the Ross Stoakes Theatre!" he said with gusto. "I am truly honored and humbled to be receiving this award. As a performer and singer you don't need any awards or accolades. This is the greatest honor I've ever gotten in my life besides being married to my wife and having my children."

Other eddi Award recipients included Cynthia Rutherford for visual artist, the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra for arts and cultural organization, Mary Beth McGraw for arts in education, Jane and Dick Lent for arts and cultural leadership, John Fershee for individual patron and the Association for Harbor Arts (AHA!) for benefactor.

Liz Ahrens, executive director of Crooked Tree, said she believes the evening was a great success.

"The energy in the room was at a heightened level all evening, between the winners being acknowledged and the sponsors who felt privileged to be a part of this community — it creates a great synergy," she said. "To me (the eddi Awards) are great. These individuals are receiving accolades for what they do naturally — to them, they're humbled by receiving these awards. Even though there's award winners, there's no competition."

Fall color season could be brilliant

A few trees in some parts of Michigan have already started to show their fall foliage, and AAA Michigan says this may be a harbinger of what could be an excellent fall color season if Mother Nature cooperates.

The current trend of vacationers staying closer to home, along with a cool summer with substantial rainfall early, points to a promising season statewide between now and late-October, when it ends in southern Michigan.

According to Dr. Bert Cregg, associate professor in the departments of Horticulture and Forestry at Michigan State University a hot Labor Day weekend and dry weather preceding it have caused many trees in the mid-Michigan area to shed leaves.

"The extent and brilliance of this year's fall color may depend on how quickly we recover from the current dry spell," Cregg said.

The key to brilliant color also depends greatly on weather conditions that prevail in September and October, he said.

Sunny days and cool nights are the best combination for a blockbuster season. Adequate soil moisture helps the trees to hang onto their leaves and increases the duration of the show.

Michigan is blessed with vibrant natural color, and leaf-peepers have plenty of places to enjoy it.

There are more than 18.6 million acres of forested land, two national shorelines, nearly 100 state parks and recreation areas, hundreds of local and regional parks, three national forests and state forests in both peninsulas.

Autumn travelers can enjoy the season in many ways; From leisurely canoe floats down rivers, pedaling mountain hikes, on horseback or enjoying local fall color cruises, to taking a traditional weekend drive to see Michigan's more than 160 waterfalls.

Fall color trips can be tailored to fit any budget; From hour-long treks through local woods to multi-day stays at a resort, with golf and spa packages included.

Other stops include tours of pumpkin patches, wineries, cider mills and fall festivals.

AAA recommends two adults traveling in Michigan budget $211.19 per day for lodging and meals.

Travelers can also seek discounts, and showing a AAA card, or other membership card, may help in obtaining discounts for meals, lodging and attractions.

When planning trips, remember that shoreline areas along the Great Lakes tend to have delayed peak color compared with inland forests because of lake-effect warmth. Valleys, hilltops and roadways often turn earlier because they are more likely to see cooler temperatures.

AAA also recommends motorists pay attention to their driving: it is best to pull off the road to enjoy fall color.

Chamber orchestra's upcoming event in Charlevoix

COURTESY PHOTO

It's a String Thing with the Music of Vaughn-Williams, Saint-Saens & Mozart will be performed at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8, at Charlevoix Performing Arts Center.

The string instruments are the heart of the orchestra and so we feature several of our Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra string talents. Ralph Vaughan-Williams-fantasia is a lovely short fantasy on the familiar Greensleeves tune and includes the "other" string instrument, the harp. Also featured is Bach and one of his best concerto for two violins featuring our concertmaster, Paul Sonner and assistant-concertmaster, Beth Weston. We also will play a virtuoso showpiece entitled "The Havanaise by Saint-Saens," a flashy, Spanish flavored piece.

Mozart's Jupiter Symphony, arguably the greatest symphony ever written in the classical style is a familiar piece and represents the culmination of a genre for Mozart.

For more information, or to get tickets (available for all performances at area book stores, Chambers of Commerce, Crooked Tree Arts Center) or by calling (231) 487-0010.

Local man gets Kiwanis service award

Local Ike Boss recently received the Kiwanis Community Service Award for the work he has done with and for kids in the Charlevoix community.

Boss was recognized at a luncheon held by the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club in August for his life time of service to kids and the Charlevoix community.

Boss has been the Director of the Charlevoix Recreation Department and has been an integral part of many Charlevoix projects and activities.

It is his drive that has continued the Charlevoix tradition of having life guards at beaches in the summer, softball tournaments that brings hundreds of visitors to town, and continued development of the Mt. McSauba ski hill and summer camp. Under Boss's direction Charlevoix's beaches now have playgrounds, pavilions and bathrooms, our community has a fantastic skate park, the Mt. McSauba ski hill boasts ski runs for young and old, cross country ski trails, a sledding hill and the recently added play ground area for campers and locals to use

"It is with great honor that the Charlevoix Kiwanis presented this award to Ike Boss," Kiwanis Director Leah Olson said. "He has been coaching basketball, organizing softball, adding new facilities to our beaches and parks for as long as I can remember. And, he continues to be open minded to new sports and events that keep Charlevoix an active town."

Boss is currently working to raise funds for a new groomer for the Mt. McSauba park, has recommended improvements to the sledding hill and continues to grow summer sporting events.

Fifty Eight artists were selected to show their most recent fiber art, over 100 works, wall hangings, clothing, accessories, animals, dolls, jewelry and three-dimensional sculpture.

A great variety of materials were used from wool, velvet, felt, cotton, organza, silk, leather, natural fibers, and even, recycled tea bags, bike inner tubes, neckties, sweaters, buttons and safety pins.

Techniques were just as varied and could be found on many works.

They were quilting, weaving, stitchery, beading, knitting, appliqué, quill work, dying, painting, silk screen, stamping, photography, embellishment, and calligraphy.

In the lower gallery was the display of needle felting created by students, grades 3 through 6 from in-school workshops.

Schools which participated were: Alba, Bellaire, Concord Academy Antrim and Boyne, East Jordan, Ellsworth, and St. Mary's Charlevoix.

In addition book tassels "On the Fringe" were created at the Charlevoix Public Library during the summer reading program.

Many patrons created their own needle felting project Stonehenge was on hand to demonstrate their yarns and roving.

Roger Lilak, musician, entertained the guests.

Refreshments were served by the committee: Sylvia Walworth, curator of the exhibit, Sandi DiSante, Kathleen Glynn, Beth Raddatz, Marcia Waara and Babs Young.

2008 Juried Fine Art Exhibition

W.O.W. (Works on Whatever) the Crooked Tree Arts Center's 2008 Juried Fine Art Exhibition opened on Saturday, Aug. 30 and presented awards to six Michigan artists.

The juror for this year's exhibition was Cynthia Rutherford of Harbor Springs, Michigan. "This is a "statement show", smaller than some in years past, but with the powerful message that "Art allows no definition" states Rutherford. "In today's world there is considerable overlap with art and technology. Works on Whatever, W.O.W., is a challenge to the artist to discover a surface that was just asking to become art."

Awards for the W.O.W. exhibition were presented to: Mary Bea McWatters of Petoskey, First Place Award for "Bike & Ride" sponsored by Crooked Tree Arts Center, Peter Balestrieri of Bellaire, Second Place Award for "G. W. Bush at 100" sponsored by Kit Carson Paint & Wallpaper, Diana Call Gilmore of Harbor Springs, Third Place Award for "Evolving" sponsored by Ben Franklin Crafts. Honorable Mentions were awarded to Cherie Correll of Lake Ann for "Salvaged" Kathleen B. Tomasek of Indian River for "Remembering Tony" and Patrick Wise of Huntington Woods for "Open".

The W.O.W. exhibition will be on display at Crooked Tree Arts Center until Nov. 22.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. For more information please call the Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

Rally for cure

Tha Rally for the Cure golf event, held at tha Charlevoix Golf Club on Tuesday, Sept. 16, raised $1,057.00. to support Susan G. Komen for the Cure. Komen has invested nearly $1 billion to fulfill the promise Nancy G. Brinker made to her dying sister, Susan G. Komen to do everything in her power to end breast cancer forever.

The winner of the Rally's closest to the pin contest on hole #3 was JoJo Allarding of Eastport.

Thirty-eight golfers teed off at 9:30 a.m. in the shot-gun event.

There were 48 registered entrants. Additional funds were collected by selling mulligans and "move-up's". Golfers were able to pay $3 to move forward to the gold tees on the two par threa holes.

Mulligans were allowed on all holes except the par three holes.

Each hole had a contest with prizes, plus a tow gross and a high gross score prize and many donated door prizes.

The rally organizers thank all volunteers: the ladies who helped set up, the men who worked on determining the winners of each hole, during the event and many friends and businesses who provided gifts and sponsorship to the event.

A potluck luncheon was held at the Club efter the event.

Anyone wishing more information about hosting or joining a rally may call (800) 327-6811 or e-mail to info@rallyforthecure.com.

"... and in this corner"

BY A.J. HOFFMAN

Violence. It's one of the essential factors in sports. Well, some sports anyway.

The sounds of a grown man whimpering, growling in pain are coming from my computer. My editor is concerned and asks what I'm watching.

"It's a guy who just got his jaw broken," I tell him. "The guy was already knocked out, but the ref didn't call the fight fast enough, so the other guy hovered over him and sent a closed fist right to his jawbone."

As I've gotten older, I'll admit, I think I've become a bit of a wuss. Back at home, my friends go to a local bar/college hangout to watch the Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) fights on giant television screens.

One of their favorite fighters is Chuck Liddell. Since I am relatively new to UFC, I have only seen his last three or four fights live.

Each time I've seen him, he's lost. However, my friend Will assures me that the "Iceman" is the most brutal of all men walking the face of the planet.

I'm kind of a Jens Pulver guy myself. He's a lightweight and I'm a wannabe fan, so my friends tell me he doesn't really count.

But he's so easy to root for. He's a scrappy little mixed martial arts guy who looks like your best friend. He's always real cordial in interviews, which is appealing to me because I'm a journalist; he gives credit where credit is due, and he's not the chest-pounding "I'm the man" type of athlete.

The sport is incredibly violent, and for some reason, when I watch the fights today, I don't seem to enjoy them as much as I should.

When someone gets knocked out, I cringe and hope they're going to be okay. I know, this isn't the manly thing to do. But keep in mind, when a guy gets hurt in football, everyone genuinely cares about his well-being.

In football, if a man needs a stretcher, even the opposite team will join in prayer with their opponents, because, "we just don't want to see anyone get hurt."

It's an act of concern that we just don't see in any kind of fighting.

I guess there's no sympathy is cage fighting for a very special, unspoken reason. Because we all know that if you're dumb enough to think that you can be an Ultimate Fighter, you probably deserve to have your brains smashed in or get your jaw broken.

When I was young, I loved action movies. Especially the "Die-Hard" movies with Bruce Willis. I still enjoy a good slasher movie every once in awhile. I can even find fun in the really bad Vin Diesel films as well.

Somewhere along the way, between childhood and now, I changed. I got a bit softer and the urge to drink blood wasn't so prominent anymore.

Watching the fights, which occur about once a month on pay-per-view, or on a daily basis on the VS. channel, I see how soft I've gotten.

How lame have I really become? And why did this happen?

I think it happened after seeing Ali, both the movie and the real-life former champion in his current state. Have you seen Muhammad Ali lately?

I read an interview with one of his daughters and she said he enjoys crossword puzzles. That's about all the man can do anymore. He can't speak, he can hardly move and it's all because his fighting days finally caught up to him.

Questions have risen about whether Liddell should retire after his latest loss to Rashad Evans, where he was knocked completely out. Some say Ali didn't retire soon enough.

Sadly, maybe the experts are right about Liddell. The UFC is far more violent and the fights take place much more frequently.

There is no wrap up or solution to this mass appreciation of violence in the octagon.

I enjoy the fights themselves, but I guess I'm going to have to learn to enjoy seeing someone pummelled to the point that I know it's going to cause permanent damage, or come back to haunt them when they're old men.

0710 IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Bernie Holtzman
April 11, 1952 - September 27, 2002

Little did we know that morning that God was going to call your name. In life we loved you dearly, in death we do the same. It broke our hearts to lose you but you did not go alone, for part of us went with you, the day God called you home. You left us peaceful memories. Your love is still our guide and though we cannot see you, you are always at our side. Our family chain is broken and nothing seems the same. But as God calls us one by one the chain will link again forever in our hearts. We loved you and always will.
Rest in peace, Bernie, rest in peace. God bless Bernie's soul.

Love and Hugs,
Brother, Bob Holtzman &
Mother Stella Holtzman Pearl

not just deer, but John Deere's (tractor), people riding horseback and four-wheelers on trails created by that individual. I have concerns," Wynkoop said. "If you let one person do that and give them nothing but a warning; what if everyone else adjoining the state park does that? How will that impact the park in general?"

Pajtas feels Wynkoop's claims are less of concern for the park, and more like sour grapes.

"We live next door to Wynkoop's limestone quarry and have opposed it as contrary to the zoning ordinance," Pajtas stated, in a photocopy of an undated e-mail sent to a local TV news station. "In retaliation, Wynkoop has filed an unfounded complaint against me for using my tractor and riding my horse on a trail/lane on state land."

In addition to prohibition of ATV and passenger cars and trucks, horseback riding is strictly forbidden at Fisherman's Island Park.

Wynkoop first noticed the activity while viewing digital images captured by two wildlife cameras he placed in the park, a legal action according to Rose, to prepare for hunting season.

"Under the ruse of photographing deer, he has secretly photographed me, my wife, my children, grandchild and friends who walk that trail daily," Pajtas wrote. "My wife has avoided the area in fear of her own safety."

Wynkoop hopes the rest of the community will take notice of what he feels are multiple violations.

"A man in his position should be held at a higher standards," he said. "At a minimum the same standard as everyone else."

Nonetheless, Pajtas maintains his right to the implied easement which Houle described "clearly intended" by the previous property owner.

According to Houle, there must be clear indication by the state and former property owner that Pajtas is not privy to the easement, and, that no such provisions were ever stated or enforced.

Here is an image of a tractor which is seen driving on Fisherman's Island Park in an area where motor vehicles are prohibited. The DNR says they warned tha individual involved not to mow the grass or ride horses and motor vehicles through the park, but the case could ba far from over.

emotional toll. Jason had dedicated three years of her life to cleaning jobs while she worked toward her degree and now felt trapped.

"I couldn't do anything but cry. I was so angry," she said. "I spent three years cleaning toilets to get a nice job. I'll be damned if cancer would take that away."

Before graduating, she had done her last clinical with Dermatology Associates in Petoskey and interviewed there.

The same day she was scheduled for surgery she received a job offer from Dermatology Associates. She informed the team of her physical condition, expecting a "too bad" response.

Instead, they replied, "Can you be released for work?"

This was a turning point for Jason.

"I could have spent the whole summer laying in bed feeling pity for myself but there were people out there that saw something beyond cancer, beyond hair, beyond breasts. They saw something and said, 'No matter what, we want you,'" she said.

In mid-June, during a four-round , eight-week intensive bout with chemotherapy, Jason walked into her dream job. With the help of her "team of angels," including friends, family, former employers and community members, she missed only three days of work during those eight grueling weeks of chemotherapy.

Jason protects her life, professional aspirations and desire to watch her daughter, Avery, 15, graduate and become a wife and mother with ferocity. She's planning a hysterectomy in December so the cancer can't make a new home in her reproductive system, a common place for breast cancer to spread.

"I'm beating you to the punch. You're not getting me," she said. "I choose life."

With no breasts, no reproductive system and no hair Jason said the strength she has gained and the sisterhood she's developed with close friends have made her more of a woman today that she was two breasts ago.

"It was a hell of a summer. I'm not super woman, but I'm determined," she said.

To other women fighting for their lives, Jason says to remember, "You are in control."

To women who haven't felt cancer's hold, she says, "Know your body, do regular self breast exams and don't let anyone tell you you're all right if you feel like something is wrong."

"You've got one body. You've got one chance," she said.

Mixed bag

over support of medicinal marijuana ballot initiative

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Michigan voters will decide whether or not to legalize medicinal marijuana in a state wide ballot initiative this November.

Although polls show there is growing support for the move, getting people to speak openly about the subject can be a bit more difficult.

According to a September poll by the Michigan Resource Group of Lansing, 67 percent of voters said they would support the proposal, while 29 percent said they opposed it. If passed, the law would permit physician approved use of marijuana for patients with "debilitating medical conditions" including cancer, Glaucoma, HIV/AIDS, Hepatitis C, multiple sclerosis, as well as other conditions approved by the Department of Community Health.

Those patients permitted to use marijuana would be given an identification card and the right to grow marijuana plants in an enclosed, locked facility. The last portion of the law would also permit care givers and patients the right to used medical reasons as a legal defense in marijuana prosecutions.

Joshua Snider, a 30-year-old Petoskey resident, advocated for the use of marijuana as medicine for a variety of medical conditions. Snider said his own mild temporal epilepsy was improved with occasional use of marijuana.

Besides working as a pain killer and an appetite stimulant, Snider asserted that marijuana also has antispasmodic qualities.

Signs, signs, everywhere there's signs

Relief could come to business owners feeling left out of the directional loop

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Owners of some businesses located off Bridge Street are optimistic as the city planner prepares to present proposed sign ordinance revisions to city planning commissioners.

At issue is whether to allow off-premises signs and portable signs and how, if at all, they will be lighted.

"I have a lot of people who come into the restaurant and ask me how to get to the library, where the beaches are, how to get to the historical society," said Racchel Wright, owner of the Alcove Cafe which is located just off Bridge Street on Park Avenue. "There is a contention by certain business owners (on Bridge Street) that, because they pay the high rent there, they should have an advantage in terms of signage, and allowing off Bridge Street businesses to have signs on Bridge Street is unfair."

She added, "Anything good for one business in town is really good for all businesses: A rising tide lifts all ships."

Charlevoix City Planner/Zoning Administrator Mike Spencer will present the proposal to the Charlevoix City Planning Commission at the 7 p.m., Oct. 13 meeting with a public hearing expected in late October or early November.

"The proposed revisions are (intended) to allow businesses greater flexibility for advertising, clarify language and make the regulations easier to understand, administer and enforce," Spencer wrote in an e-mail response to questions. "The planning commission and council (the planning commission will make a recommendation to the city council after public input is taken) will evaluate under what circumstances to allow banners for advertising. The variance procedure will also be evaluated for compliance with state laws and to provide logical criteria to evaluate variance requests."

City council could review the recommended amendments as early as November or December: not a moment too soon according to business owners who have been waiting nearly two years for an answer.

"It's been a long and hilarious adventure," Wright said. "Nobody wants great big signs; nobody wants it to look like a strip mall. We want something in keeping with the quaint, friendly look of the town."

Tony Duerr, owner of Pine River Books, agrees with his fellow side street business owners.

"This is supposed to be a central business district, not a Bridge Street business district," Duerr said. "I think wayfinding is something that is not done well, and that is kind of a separate issue, but visitors must be able to learn where the beaches are, where the Earl Young houses are, where the historical museum is, where the library is."

Duerr said he, too, has heard the argument that businesses on Bridge Street pay higher rent and therefore deserve more consideration from the city.

"Bridge Street has all the advantages: when the hanging petunia plants are done, it's on Bridge Street; when sidewalks are washed, it's on Bridge Street, when park benches are set out, it's on Bridge

Stem cell research

up to a vote this November

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

[Editor's note. Ballot proposals can often be complex and, sometimes, even misleading. The following piece is intended to be informational and free of pleas to vote either way.]

Stem cells: What are they?; Where do they come from?, and for what are they used?

Since Michigan voters will decide whether proposal 2, a measure to allow stem cell research, goes forward, Charlevoix Courier sat down with Marcia Baum, Executive Director of the Michigan Citizens for Stem Cell Research and Cures, a non-partisan, nonprofit organization devoted to educate people on the issue of stem cell research.

"Our position of education is very clear: we do not take a position on any legislation, candidate or ballot initiative," she said.

On their site www.stemcellresearchformichigan.com you will find links to opinions supporting stem cell research from the ALS (amyotrophic lateral sclerosis) also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, and you will find links to opinions from Focus on the Family, the Catholic Church and the Christian Coalition who are

Public hearing

'Council to renew DTE Energy agreement'

An agreement which will renew a contract between the city and DTE to allow the energy company access to public lands is scheduled for 7 p.m., Oct. 6 in Charlevoix's City Council chambers.

City clerk Carol Ochs said the public hearing on this matter was originally held earlier this summer, but due to a technical requirement, the city was forced to wait for an unspecified number of days before they could make a decision.

"They're simply redoing what they already did," Ochs said. "It's just telling them (DTE) they can use right-of-ways to have access to their lines. If we use (public properties) for anything other than public, we typically put an agreement in place to preserve the public's rights."

She added, "It's not exclusive, so if another energy company came in, we would offer them that type of agreement too."

When the measure is likely approved, it will last five years with the option to renew.

Ochs said the city does not charge DTE a fee for this courtesy.

"They would just pass the fee on to the consumer," she said.

You may obtain a copy of the agreement at city hall, 210 State St., Charlevoix or call 547-3250 for more information.

Home invasion on city's northside

Police in Charlevoix are investigating a home invasion that took place on the city's north side late Sunday.

Police chief Gerard Doan said the incident happened at about 11 p.m. at a home on Cherry Street. Doan said the homeowners, who were at home and awake at the time, discovered a young man had entered their home through an unlocked patio door

The man fled out a back door and through the back yard when confronted by the homeowners. The suspect, who police said made off with some cash and possibly some credit cards, is described as white male in his late teens or early 20s, about 6-foot tall, medium build, medium-length sandy blonde hair, no facial hair, wearing a green shirt and dark blue pants.

Police called in a K-9 officer and his dog from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's office, but they were unable to track the suspect.

Doan asks anyone with information on the incident to call the Charlevoix Police Department at 547-3258 or 9-1-1, and reminds area residents to lock the doors to their homes.

Voter registration deadline nears for Nov. 4 election

Residents will vote for president, state House and local seats

Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land reminds residents that Monday, Oct. 6 is the last day to register to vote for the Nov. 4 general election.

"Michigan residents have an opportunity to be heard in this presidential election," said Land, the state's chief election officer. "If you are not yet registered to vote, I encourage you to sign up now. Your vote is your voice, and in this election, you have the opportunity to be heard at every level of government."

Ballots will include the presidential race, state House contests, local races and statewide and local proposals.

To register, people must be at least 18 years old by Election Day and be U.S. citizens. They must also be residents of Michigan and of the city or township in which they wish to register.

Voters may register in person or by mail. The mail-in form is on the Department of State Web site at www.Michigan.gov/sos. First time voters who register by mail must vote in person in their first election, unless they hand deliver the application to their local clerk, are age 60 or older, are disabled or are overseas.

To check their registration status, voters may visit the Michigan Voter Information Center at www.Michigan.gov/vote. Residents also will be able to find information on voting by absentee ballot, using voting equipment and contacting their local clerk. They can also find a map to their local polling place.

Voters who qualify may choose to cast an absentee ballot on Election Day. As a registered voter, you may obtain an absentee ballot if you are:

- age 60 or older
- unable to vote without assistance at the polls
- expecting to be out of town on Election Day
- in jail awaiting arraignment or trial
- unable to attend the polls due to religious reasons
- appointed to work as an election inspector in a precinct outside of your precinct of residence.

Those who wish to receive their absentee ballot by mail must submit their application by 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 1. Emergency absentee ballots are available under certain conditions through 4 p.m. on Election Day.

Registered Michigan voters who have moved within 60 days of the election may still vote at their previous address if they did not register to vote at their new address by the close of registration for this election. This also applies to voters whose homes have been foreclosed upon. Voters in default on their mortgages but living in their homes may still vote without restriction.

Clerks are required to provide accessible polling places for all voters, including voters with disabilities. In addition, the AutoMARK Voter Assist Terminal will be available at all polling locations to assist voters with disabilities in marking their ballots.

Residents are again reminded of the voter identification requirement on Election Day. They will be asked to present photo identification at the polls, such as a Michigan driver's license or identification card. Anyone who does not have an acceptable form of photo ID or is not carrying one can still vote. They will sign a brief form stating that they're not in possession of a photo ID. Their ballots will be included with all others and counted on Election Day.

Voters who don't have a Michigan driver's license or identification card can show the following forms of photo ID:

- Driver's license or personal identification card issued by another state
- Federal or state government-issued photo identification
- U.S. passport
- Military identification card with photo
- Student identification with photo from a high school or an accredited institution of higher education, such as a college or university
- Tribal identification card with photo.

Beishlag waives preliminary examination

STEVE ZUCKER
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

A former Cheboygan County man facing criminal sexual conduct charges in Charlevoix County has been bound over to face trial on reduced charges.

Aaron Beishlag, 39, now of Harrison waived his preliminary examination Thursday after prosecutors agreed to reduce the charges from first degree to third degree criminal sexual conduct. Both charges involve sexual penetration with a person between the ages of 13 and 15, but the first degree has the added element that the defendant was in a position of authority and used that authority to coerce the victim into the sexual activity.

The first degree charge carries a maximum penalty of up to life in prison. The maximum for the third degree charge is 15 years.

The charges stem from allegations that for an eight-month period from June 2003 to February 2004, Beishlag, then 34, had a long-term sexual relationship with a girl who was 14 at the time.

Under Michigan law, engaging in sexual penetration with anyone under the age of 16 is a felony, regardless of the victim's consent.

Beishlag was originally charged with crimes in both Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties because the incidents were alleged to have happened both at Beishlag's home in Cheboygan County and at his father's home in the Charlevoix area.

On June 20, following a four-day trial, a Cheboygan County jury found Beishlag guilty on two counts of third degree criminal sexual conduct. His trial on the Charlevoix County charges was set to begin three days later, but prosecutors dismissed the charges before the trial began to spare the victim from having to testify again.

However, at Beishlag's Aug. 28 sentencing hearing, Cheboygan County Circuit Court Judge Scott Pavlich granted a defense motion to set the jury's verdict aside and declare a mistrial.

Charlevoix County Chief Assistant Prosecutor Shaynee Fanara re-issued the Charlevoix County charges against Beishlag after learning that the Cheboygan County verdicts had been thrown out.

"I am pleased that the defendant waived his preliminary examination so the victim would not have to testify," Fanara said.

Beishlag is free from custody after posting a $5,000 surety bond. He is scheduled for arraignment and a scheduling conference in circuit court on Oct. 3.

Don't worry, be happy

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

"Don't worry, be happy": a well used slogan whose essence has been studied scientifically; I'll delve into this a little further but first I need to mention that some days it does take a little effort to be happy.

The state of happiness is not a requirement for daily living but actively seeking to be in a better mood does improve your health and mental well-being.

If you turn on the television after working all day and view broadcasts of homes lost in floods and hear updates on the economic plans debated in Congress you wonder what can you possibly be happy about.

Purchasing a new boat or selling one creates a euphoric feeling at first but that feeling quickly fades and the aura of bliss leaves us.

Some of us have a tendency to spend money to feel good.

As long as its not emptying the entire household savings you are among many who do the same.

Others may think they would be happier if they made more money, found the perfect person to spend their life with or could lose twenty pounds, then they could finally be happy.

This couldn't be further from the truth.

The science of happiness has been studied by a professor sometimes referred to as the "happiness professor."

Dr. Sonya Lyubomirsky completed her research and has come up with these facts: 50 percent of happiness in genetic, 40 percent is intentional and 10 percent is circumstantial

Being happy has more to do with how you act and think.

Research by Lyubomirsky revealed individuals who wrote down once a week what they were grateful for experience a positive attitude which in turn brings happiness.

This research also recommends practicing forgiveness, tolerance, becoming more involved in your church and savoring positive moments.

Essentially being happy for what you do have.

When I first moved to northern Michigan some 30 years ago I had a tendency to drive family and friends around to see the lovely homes in the surrounding area.

They would usually mention that it must be nice to live in one of these beautiful homes overlooking the lake and the lives of the occupants must be picture perfect.

My usual reply was, "what they live in doesn't necessarily make them happy."

It's interesting to note that happy people usually experience more success in their lives because of their positive attitude and sometimes this can lead to making more money.

Wealthier individuals who have been interviewed for studies on their degree of life satisfaction report they are happiest when they can become involved in philanthropic activities.

The act of sharing and caring brings them happiness, not having money for money's sake.

We have been blessed with many happy philanthropists in our area thus I may also add to my usual comment "yes, money buys beauty but the beholder is responsible for their own happiness."

So, if you are feeling sad and you have realized it's not in your genes to be in a better mood, you need to review your circumstances.

You can change how you feel by your own actions.

Suggestions from research indicates that marriage does not bring happiness but a married life improves greatly when you clearly cheer your partner on for their successes they achieve.

The act of hugging improves your over all feeling of wellness and happiness.

For senior citizens, reminiscing about past events emotes happiness and they are doubled when this information is shared with family and close friends.

Aerobic workouts can be almost as effective as medication, so it's important to take some time out of your week to increase your heart rate.

Having a job that is meaningful where time passes quickly because you are doing something you like also increases happiness.

Happiness isn't getting everything right, it lies in the way you live and look at the world.

Volunteering in the community creates a feeling of satisfaction which, in turn, can make you feel better about yourself.

Pursue something you enjoy and happiness catches up with you.

A new program at the University of Pennsylvania provides educators and health professionals the ability to earn a Master of Applied Positive Psychology.

Positive interventions can supplement traditional interventions that relieve suffering.

So, even in these times which most consider nothing to be happy about, put a smile on your face and your feelings will change to meet your thoughtful look.

Sure signs of the apocalypse

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Perhaps I should have heeded the hints: the stack of Watchtower booklets left on my porch every Saturday; the plague of pill bugs hiding under the couch; the phonetically spelled warnings in my alphabet soup.

They say there are no atheists in foxholes, and I can assume that also applies to the apocalypse.

Now, I don't want to unnecessarily worry anyone, but I have begun to notice some strange happenings.

Granted, I've been known to blow things out of proportion in the past: I've self-diagnosed no fewer than 839 heart attacks, six different kinds of cancer, emphysema, asthma, perforated intestine, paralysis, stroke, full-blown diabetes, SARS, typhoid, dysentery, rickets, Epstein-Bar, lupus and sickle-cell leukemia. But this time it's different, and the end of days is near.

It all started at the grocery store. Not the stereotypical venue for cataclysm, but according to my old testament readings the devil appears where you least expect him.

I noticed something was wrong when, while looking for a shaving razor, I found a moisturizing hand cream for men.

At first I thought it was placed there by a lazy shopper making a last-minute cut from the shopping cart, but upon closer inspection the label read "For Men."

First it was pastel clothing, then they said we could cry, but a skin hydration system was certainly the devil's work.

I ran screaming, warning my brothers to stay out of aisle five. I continued shopping, but threw away the wife's list and bought only gender affirming stuff like red meat, beer and an auto trader.

Passing by the cereal aisle, I glimpsed a toddler speaking in tongues after his mother refused to buy Lucky Charms. I swear he looked right through me.

Frantic to escape Satan's boutique, I cruised to the checkout.

Gridlock!

The shopper to cashier ratio was roughly 37:1.

"Act casual, Gohs" I told myself.

From six carts back I squinted to read September's National Enquirer.

"Hmm, Kevin Spacey is gay. A Huskee named Pachee swallowed a fork and lived to bark about it. Brad and Angelina are having trouble," I spoke aloud, trying to convince any demons within earshot that I was merely a mild-mannered shopper.

"Can't let them know you're on to them, Gohs."

The line slowly edged forward until I was second, but there was no cashier.

I looked up to see if the lane was still open. The large square light was on, but it read "Self-Serve."

"Self-serve checkout?" I thought. "What's next, self-serve dry cleaning; self-serve taxidermy?"

I wanted the hell out of this three-dimensional Escher painting but if I bolted they would have known that I knew.

"Steady as she goes."

The woman ahead of me had a cart full of vegetables and fruit. She just stood there, waiting for a cashier to materialize until a stern looking woman in a grocery store uniform and overpopulated key ring stepped forward.

"It's self serve, there is no cashier," the warden grunted.

Veggie lady eyed the contraption. It was like a chimp' trying to work an adding machine. I expected her to start beating the register with a turkey bone out of frustration.

She turned to me, her eyes pleaded for help. Ashamed, I averted my eyes. Like a fellow cow to slaughter, there was nothing I could do.

Then the machine spoke. It told her to scan her items and place them on the conveyor belt. She put an eggplant on the scanner. Nothing happened.

The machine spoke again. It said help was on the way, but this time it sounded angry.

The warden appeared, shook her head in disapproval and then pushed a series of the beast's buttons.

I could sense the rest of the herd behind me shifting, anxious. A nervous "moo" escaped my lips.

In an instant veggie lady was gone. Like a modern-day Edmond Dantes, she was whisked away to a prison island for angering the machine.

Then it was my turn. I humbly prostrated myself before the machine, determined to get free if only to tell veggie lady's story.

I scanned my items: Steak; beep. Beer; beep. Auto trader; beep. "I'll eat your soul"; beep.

Some of you may be thinking automation is not the end of the world, but for my sake; for veggie lady's sake, I'm seriously considering getting my butt to church.

LETTERS to the editor

THANK YOU

On behalf of the City of Charlevoix Recreation Department, we would like to extend our sincere appreciation to all who helped make the fundraiser for Mt. McSauba on Sept. 20 a success.

A special thank-you to Charlie's Root Fusion, who gave of their time and talent.

Thank-you to Brennan Stebe and volunteers, for their time and effort on building the boxes and rails for the terrain park for his Eagle Project, which were on display.

Thank-you to all the businesses and persons who donated to the raffle prizes: the generosity shown was immeasurable.

Thank-you for supporting Mt. McSauba and the grassroots effort to raise funds for a new groomer.

Without this groomer, the ski hill will not open and the season will be forfeited.

Thank-you to the fundraising committee for your tireless effort to promote and raise funds for this much needed piece of equipment.

For further donations and inquiries please contact the recreation department at 547-3253.

Another fundraising event is planned for Oct. 18 at Judy's Restaurant.

All donations are tax deductible.

We would also like to mention that all donations received that evening were made in memory of Connie Pischner. She was a longtime supporter of Mt.McSauba and the recreation department who recently passed away.

Her warm smile and generosity will be missed.

Ike Boss, Charlevoix City Recreation Department

THE RIGHT WOMAN FOR THE JOB

Editor:

Let's consider a man who had a job, didn't want it anymore, applied for another job and was told by his superiors that he couldn't have it and he'd better go back to where he'd been before.

Saying he'd do it for them, apparently not really what he wanted to do, he did go back.

This reluctant person is a politician, the one with the oversized signs along the Antrim, Charlevoix, Otsego and Cheboygan roadways.

There's another hitch about this reluctant job seeker: He can't get the job he didn't want unless many people vote for him.

Given the circumstances, why would any responsible voter cast a ballot for him when a woman who is highly-qualified, organized, bright and responsible wants to serve as Representative for District 105 in the Michigan Legislature?

Connie Saltonstall is that woman.

She has served as a Charlevoix County Commissioner, a Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education member, and is currently a board member on the Charlevoix Commission on Aging, Hospice of Northern Michigan, and Northern Community Mediation.

She is also a retired school teacher and former successful small business owner.

Her diverse background assures that she will bring to Michigan the know-how to foster better health care, bring about lower drug prices and institute better educational opportunities.

Most importantly, she will work to return new job opportunities to Michigan.

Connie Saltonstall will lead the way to rebuild the Michigan economy.

MENTAL ILLNESS AWARENESS WEEK OCT. 5 - 11

Editor:

Mental Illness Awareness Week is Oct. 5 through 11. That same week, our presidential candidates will hold a town hall debate, in which up to a quarter of the audience are likely to have experienced a mental illness.

That's because one in four adults lives with depression, bipolar disorder, schizophrenia, post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and other mental illnesses every year. That's almost 60 million Americans.

Mental illness does not discriminate between Republicans and Democrats. It can strike anyone at any time.

Mental health is part of health care and it is essential that it be included in the nation's health care reform debate.

Mental illness affects children. It affects people of color.

Two million Americans live with schizophrenia; twice the number of those with HIV/AIDS. One in five veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan, almost 300,000 troops, will experience major depression or post traumatic stress disorder upon returning home.

Unfortunately, two-thirds of people who live with mental illnesses do not receive treatment.

But, treatment works; recovery is possible.

Between now and Election Day, every candidate needs to talk about these facts.

For more information, visit North Country Community Mental Health at www.norcocmh.org or you can contact the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) at (800) 950-6264 or visit www.nami.org.

The economic crisis, the election and us

Forum comes to Charlevoix

The current economic crisis and how it affects families in northern Michigan will be the subject of a series of free public discussions scheduled for 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 8 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Conducted by nationally known economist Sam Williamson and financial advisor Charles Saad the discussions will be an opportunity to hear from and question two experts. The format will be informal with brief presentations and considerable time for questions.

"We're looking for a real dialogue between ourselves and with the public," says Williamson. "Our hope is to help clarify these economic issues, particularly as people try to sort out the coming election."

The series of dialogues will address such questions as: How does the current economic crisis affect me? What can I do to protect my family and our future? What are the economic issues to consider in this election? What should we look for in the candidates? What are the real differences between the two candidates' positions? How would the election of either candidate impact our families, our economy?

The programs are sponsored by the Michigan Campaign for Change and supporters of the candidacy of Barack Obama.

A recent study conducted by the Associated Press found voters say, "They are hurting on a personal level from the country's economic woes, and, like everyone else, they say the economy is the top issue. Most haven't decided who would best solve their problems as president. Simply put: Most of these voters are looking for a better life and a leader to help make it happen."

Williamson and Saad see the discussions as interactive and will encourage members of the audience to participate and ask questions.

Sam Williamson, Professor Emeritus of Economics from Miami University of Ohio and a visiting professor/lecturer at universities around the world, specializes in economic history, pensions and the economics of Social Security. He has published over a dozen articles in journals such as The American Economic Review and The Journal of Economic History as well as book chapters and reviews. He was cofounder of the Cliometric Society, creator and former executive director of EH.Net, the economics history services website. He is also founder of Measuring Worth, a public service for calculating worth over time.

Charles Saad has been a financial advisor and investment broker with Dean Witter and was a Senior Vice President of Investments with Wachovia Investments. Saad is now a writer living in Harbor Springs and founder of "The World-Wide Coalition for Peace, a non-profit organization "dedicated to the achievement of peace through thoughtful, respectful dialogue on the many challenges and conflicts we face today."

The economic discussions are free public affairs events.

Day of caring HUGE SUCCESS

The 5th Annual Day of Caring succeeded in connecting over 700 volunteers in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties with 50 service projects needed by non-profit community agencies, schools, cities and counties.

This event promotes teamwork and gives people a taste of volunteering, while making a difference in the community.

The Day of Caring matched teams of volunteers from businesses, schools, faith communities and community groups with non-profit organizations in need of hands-on help.

Project sites ranged from the Alanson Food Pantry to the YMCA and geographically from Pellston to East Jordan. Volunteers cleaned, painted, weeded, cleared brush, worked with seniors, built shelves, washed cars and much more.

With 700 volunteers donating an average of three hours each, the hours provided to non-profit agencies totaled 2,100 or a full-time equivalent staff person.

Since the estimated value of a volunteer is $19.51 per hour, the Day of Caring provided nearly $41,000 of person-value to the community on Sept. 16.

"The Day of Caring is a logical tie-in with United Way and our 2008 Campaign LIVE UNITED," said Julie Voci, Char-Em United Way's administrative/program assistant. "Not only do the non-profit agencies in our community need financial support, they need volunteers as well. We are happy to help connect agencies with all available resources to help them meet the community needs. As United Way increases its involvement in community volunteer coordination, we hope the Day of Caring will lead to year round volunteer engagements for the individuals who participated."

Char-Em United Way recently began its fall campaign and is conducting work site fund-raising drives in approximately 50 local businesses, as well as raising funds from the general public.

Funds are invested in community health and human service programs which meet United Way's mission of improving the lives of people in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

For more information, contact United Way at (231) 487-1006 or info@charemunitedway.org

Bible study

A 10-week study is planned for area Christian singles at 4 p.m., Sunday afternoons beginning with Oct. 5.

A book by Chuck Swindoll "Character Counts Building A Life That Pleases God" will be the topic of the study.

Singles are asked to bring their Bibles, a notebook for journaling and an open mind and heart to learn what the Bible says about character in our lives.

The concept, character, stirs up a variety of feelings: admiration, confusion or even guilt.

Our character dictates the kinds of decisions we make and determines how we will treat those around us.

Godly character is a stabilizing force, keeping us anchored in Christ.

The meetings will be held at 384 Lind Drive, Traverse City.

The Mona Shores Fiddlers

Tim Staudacher, Mona Shores High School Orchestra director, formed the Fiddlers in 1996. The group will perform at the Charlevoix Oktoberfest.

The Fiddlers will perform at noon and again at 3:15 p.m. on Saturday of the festival.

The group was started to create an alternative style for string players that revolved around the performance of folk music from various cultures.

The group performs throughout the West Michigan area for numerous private parties and charity events each year.

The 2003 Fiddlers traveled to Tennessee for a performance at the Murfreeshoro Arts Center in conjunction with the annual Uncle Dave Macon festival. The group also performed various concerts as part of the Mona Shores Orchestra tour of China during the summer of 2005, including a performance on the Great Wall of China. In 2006 the group released its first CD entitled "Fiddlers First."

The Fiddlers host a yearly Fiddle Festival that features the group and a guest artist. In the past the Fiddle Festival has featured Ruth and Max Bloomquist, The Oat Bran Boys, Fonn Mor, a popular Celtic band, and the Canadian based fiddle group Barrage. The 7th annual Fiddle Festival will be held November 1st, 2008 featuring the exciting Bluegrass of Detour.

During this past summer The Mona Shore Fiddlers traveled with the school orchestra on a tour of Ireland. The group performed a number of concerts including a performance at Dublin's oldest establishment called the Brazenhead, were they were well received.

God hates sin, loves sinner

FAITHFUL SERVANT
BY STEPHEN GUTHRIE

The most satisfying ministry work I've ever done is the three years I served as a chaplain at Northern Michigan Hospital. Chaplaincy brings one into the midst of profound pain in the lives of those who sick and injured and afraid, and that is at once a privilege, a responsibility and a challenge.

One afternoon I was called to the mental health unit at Lockwood and asked to meet with a woman who had admitted herself, pleading for help and protection from her own hand.

She had been crying uncontrollably for days, moaning and wailing bitter tears from deep within. Overcome with cumulative remorse for a child she had aborted a decade earlier, guilt and shame over the death of that unborn baby had caused her collapse.

The abortion had seemed an expedient decision at the time. Only later did she come to regard what she'd done as having killed her own child, and she was horrified at what she now believed was an affront to God of such magnitude it was beyond His capacity to forgive.

That afternoon I used God's word to show her forgiveness is part of the package with Jesus Christ, that He came to bind up the broken heart and not condemn.

We read God's Word together and she was able to see that the God of the Bible is not some angry old man bent on tallying up our mistakes until He has enough points to condemn us. Rather, He is a God of a thousand second chances, intent on reconciliation and restoration.

I was able to show Her that no mistake of ours, regardless of how heinous it may seem to us, is beyond His capacity to forgive.

We prayed together, and when that peace of the Lord came upon her, that peace which makes no sense but is nevertheless real to the human spirit, I watched her change before my eyes. Tears of remorse were replaced with tears of gratitude and relief. Tears of the sort we cry when someone we love is restored to us after a long and painful separation.

That afternoon, the healing of the wounded heart promised by Jesus Christ became real to a guilt-ridden child of God. She had known of Jesus, even known a little about Jesus, but the afternoon she met Him up close and personal.

That woman's remorse was a vivid illustration of how debilitating guilt and shame can become in the aftermath of our mistakes. It is surprising how consuming this particular form of self-loathing can become.

In the counseling office we separate guilt and shame, two emotions that are toxic to the human spirit. We know things follow this predictable progression: sin leads to guilt, which produces shame, which leads to self-condemnation and a sense of worthlessness, including worthlessness before God.

Guilt springs out of our innate sense of right and wrong and is evidence of our conscience at work. In a larger sense, though, guilt is accountability for wrongdoing, found throughout the Bible and our legal system. Shame is the byproduct of guilt. Self-condemnation is something we do to ourselves.

Mistakes and sin are part of the human experience, and guilt is part of a universal law of accountability. Shame, though, is the wild card that can draw us closer to God or drive us away. We will explore shame in the next column.

If we err and experience guilt it can lead to genuine sorrow. The result of that godly sorrow is repentance, literally a 180 degree turning from bad back to good. God, in His forgiveness, takes something bad and uses it for good to bring us closer and build up our relationship.

For the person who rejects God and the restorative work of Jesus, their burden of guilt and shame is carried largely by choice. When a person elects to go it alone in life with the naive belief their strength, wits, or wallet are sufficient, they reject any need for God and forego any help He might offer, including His forgiveness.

But what struck me that day at Lockwood and continues to amaze me is how we followers of Christ – we professed believers – drag this load of guilt and shame through the day as though we had no savior and no basis for forgiveness and reconciliation.

For the follower of Christ, lugging that load of guilt and shame through life is simply unnecessary.

Jesus does not condemn you, and there is nothing to be gained by condemning your self.

Your savior is waiting to hear from you, and trained healing prayer ministers are available right here in Charlevoix. Call us if we can help you lay that burden down.

MARIJUANA

"It works a lot better than any other prescribed medicines," he said. "A lot of them can make you pretty sick, they mess with your stomach."

Snider is an outspoken advocate for marijuana and helped collect signatures to get the measure on the statewide ballot, he said it is not uncommon for people to shy away from speaking about marijuana in public.

"All of it is fear," Snider said. "Right now it's dangerous to use it under the current law."

While the current ballot initiative would allow patients with glaucoma to use marijuana, Dr. Tim Jarvi, an ophthalmologist in Petoskey, is not convinced that marijuana is better other pharmaceutical treatments already on the market. While marijuana can reduce ocular pressure, Jarvi pointed out that it also decreases blood pressure and therefore makes it more difficult to pump nutrients into the eye through the optic nerve.

"It's impractical," he said. "Even if it was legal we wouldn't use it."

Dr. George Wagoner, a retired obstetrician and gynecologist in Manistee, admitted that he had no scientific experience with marijuana. But during his wife's unsuccessful battle against severe ovarian cancer in 2007, he said they turned to the illegal drug and found it helped her cope with the pain better than anything else.

Wagoner said his wife developed intractable nausea and vomiting during her chemotherapy and that other pharmaceutical drugs were ineffective.

"When my wife inhaled the smoke twice, she said the nausea was gone," he said. "It took practically none to be effective. I think everyone in her situation should be allowed to do this legally."

However, there are those, even with a personal knowledge of cancer, who do not support the current ballot initiative's scope.

Bob McCullough, a 74-year-old Petoskey resident, is in remission from multiple myeloma and said he understands the need for medicinal marijuana, but was uncomfortable with people being given the legal right to grow it. He said that would open up the possibility of people selling it illegally for profit.

"There is such a strong desire for this stuff, I think it needs to be done through a pharmacy," he said. "I would like to see it made available, but only a month's supply at a time. That way a doctor would know if you are starting to abuse it."

Although marijuana is illegal under federal law, and classified as a schedule I drug, 12 states have passed medicinal marijuana legislation. In 2005, Traverse City passed a city ordinance to make the prosecution of medicinal marijuana cases the lowest priority. However, both the offices of the county and city prosecutors referred requests for comment to one another, preferring to stay mum rather than weigh in on the taboo subject.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater deferred a request to comment to his successor, Don Schneider, after admitting he was not familiar with the ballot language. Although Schneider had yet to read the language, he said his first reaction was that legalization of medicinal marijuana would compound the issue of prescription drug abuse and marijuana use further.

"I think there's always the potential for it to be grossly misused," he said. "There are some doctors, although they are few and far between, that lack integrity and will give a prescription for anything."

SIGNS

Street; when there are festivals, they're on Bridge Street; when trees are lit, it's on Bridge Street," he said. "Very little is done with DDA and city resources that promotes businesses down the side streets."

Duerr added, 'We all pay taxes and the DDA captures tax revenues from us the same as it does with those on Bridge Street."

Duerr was careful to emphasize that he is not trying to "pick a fight" with Bridge Street, but wants to see equity for all DDA members.

Duerr and Wright are asking for small signs, one being posted on the wall of a business at the corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Street, of which permission has been given, that could be read by pedestrians at various locations along the strip.

Though Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. believes some concessions will be made to allow off-premises signage, the issue is more complex than that.

"It's not just downtown that we're dealing with," he said. "Any changes we make would apply for anything in the city limits."

Carlson said there must be a balance found between promoting businesses and avoiding clutter while respecting Michigan Department of Transportation regulations on what types of signs can be installed near state highways.

"I think council has proved to be a pretty strong supporter of business and they will continue to," Carlson said. "It's just a matter of how far we can legally help."

Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority member John Taylor said he feels off-premises signage should be allowed.

"We were just being asked for our opinion. We weren't setting policy," he said, adding that proposed ordinance changes are easier to understand and apply.

"I see it as being a good thing for everybody," Taylor said. "We want people to shop in downtown Charlevoix and we don't want our town to be truly cluttered with all kinds of signs."

SPORTS reviewing the action

Charlevoix 20, East Jordan 15

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix outlasted a game East Jordan squad, which reached the Rayders' red zone before time expired.

"We'll take it any way we can get it," Charlevoix coach Don Jess said. "East Jordan is a tough, physical football team, and we knew they weren't going to quit."

Charlevoix is 3-2, 2-1 in the Lake Michigan Conference. East Jordan is 0-5, 0-3.

Charlevoix quarterback Clayton Mitchell ran in two short touchdowns, and threw for another, a 15-yarder to Jon Putman.

Brandon Darrah led Charlevoix's defense with eight tackles, while Brock Yenglin had an interception. Bill Ivan blocked a punt.

East Jordan quarterback Teddy Snowden was 10-for-21 passing for 84 yards. He scored on a 6-yard run in the fourth quarter. The Red Devils' other TD came after Nate Peters blocked a punt and Michael Becker took it in for the score. The Red Devils also scored on a safety.

Crew gets certified

The Crew has recently all become scuba certified under the instruction of Murray Kilgour. The Crew is making plans for a Scuba Adventure at SeaBase in the Florida Keys in July of 2009. There are still a few slots available for any young adult ages 14-20 that would like to join us. Contact Crew Advisor, Lynda Stolt if interested in SeaBase or if you would like more information about the Crew. We have been raising funds for this adventure through can drives, Bosman's burger sales, the Depot brick project, and weeding petunias. Watch for more ways you can help support one of these young adults as they prepare for an adventure they'll never forget.

The Charlevoix Venture Crew is a very active group for young men and women ages 14-20. The Crew is run by the young adults with adults alongside to advise. Their activities are limitless. If they desire to do something, go somewhere, learn something, they can make it happen. They can EXPERIENCE IT through the Venture Crew.

SAFE in Northern Michigan

SAFE — Substance Abuse Free Environment — in Northern Michigan is a coalition of area organizations that seeks to reduce substance abuse among young people. Participants include probate and juvenile court representatives, law enforcement, Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, the Health Department of Northwest Michigan, Community Offering Alternatives to Substance Abuse (COATS), Community Against Substance Abuse (CASA), Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES), Harbor Hall, Northern Michigan Substance Abuse Services, the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians, and substance abuse professionals. It is an over-arching body created to encourage collaboration among the participating groups that partner with families, communities and schools in prevention efforts against drug and alcohol use among youth.

"We are looking to expand our representation, specifically seeking community, agency and school personnel from Charlevoix County to join our cause," said SAFE co-chair Tricia Graham. "Although we are targeting Charlevoix County, we would welcome additional members from Emmet County, too," she said.

SAFE envisions a community where youth do not use tobacco, alcohol, or drugs, and live in a home where teens and their parents have open lines of communication to talk about smoking and drugs. SAFE also envisions a community that rallies behind the initiative to wipe out tobacco, drug and alcohol use and supports preventive and rehabilitative programs for young people.

"Our major objective is to identify resources and increase public awareness of issues in our communities," according to Terry Newton, SAFE co-chair.

SAFE was born out of the identified concern about peer substance abuse by their peers of the Youth Advisory Committee of the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation. SAFE is funded by the foundation and operates as a workgroup of the Charlevoix Emmet Human Services Coordinating Body.

SAFE is in the process of contracting with an epidemiologist to analyze available data to direct the group's activities. A data-driven focus will help assure successful impact on an issue that continues to place area youth at risk.

To learn more about SAFE in Northern Michigan or to become involved in the organization, contact Lorraine Manary at 347-6701.

STEM CELL

against stem cell research.

- What are embryonic stem cells?

They are generic or foundation cells which become bone or blood or even various organs.

- Where do they come from?

Sperm and egg are mixed in a petri dish and five days later a formation the size of a ball-point pen tip called a blastocyst is formed; from that blastocyst are extracted microscopic stem cells.

- Types of stem cells

The two types of stem cells are adult and embryonic. Adult stem cells are found in bone, blood, and some bodily organs. The reasons scientists are studying embryonic stem cells is because adult stem cells only work on certain applications. Scientists believe they may eventually be able to manipulate embryonic stem cells to repair or replace nearly any part of the body, from damaged brain tissue to dead heart muscle.

- How are stem cells used?

"Adult stem cells have been used to fight and treat some diseases like blood cancers," Baum said. "However, scientists in all these 45 to 50 years have not been able to find stem cells in all organs of the body where repair is needed."

She added, "The theory is embryonic stem cells can be directed or coaxed to be any of the cells in our body because they're unprogrammed

- What does current Michigan law state?

Michigan is one of five states which prohibits stem cell research which of a "live human embryo, fetus or neonate for non-therapeutic research, if... the research substantially jeopardizes the life or health of the embryo, fetus or neonate" and offers the embryo no therapeutic benefits. Law breakers face up to 10 years in prison and $10 million in fines.

- Proposal 2 would "expand the use of human embryos for any research permitted under federal law" so long as the embryos:

—are created for fertility treatment purposes;

—are not suitable for implantation or are in excess of clinical needs;

—would be discarded unless used for research;

—were donated by the person seeking fertility treatment.

—ensure that stem cells will not be taken from human embryos after 14 days of cell division —prohibit the sale and purchase of human embryos for stem cell research;

—prohibit state and local laws that prevent, restrict or discourage stem cell research

"Men can produce a nearly unlimited amount of sperm and women usually produce around 30 to 40 eggs. Once the blastocyst is formed and implanted to make the child in the woman, the rest of those are discarded," Baum said. "This proposal would allow them to be donated for research."

- How much will Proposal 2 cost you?

"This proposal does not ask for one penny," Baum said.

Embryonic stem cell science has been around for nearly 10 years.

The other states which prohibit stem cell research are North and South Dakotas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

What do you think about embryonic stem cell research?

E-mail your opinion to news@charlevoixcourier.com or call 547-6558 (extension 4424) to voice your opinion and your perspective could be included in the follow-up piece on stem cell research.

New photography studio open on Marion Center

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

After years of honing her portraiture skills while working as a web designer and photojournalist, M. Chris Leese has opened a photography studio.

Open by appointment from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, Photography by M. Chris Leese, located at 1600 Marion Center Road is ready to document your graduation, family outing, boating adventure, business and more.

"I have been working in Web design for 12 years and photography for five," she said. "I think that having a great uncle and four of his brothers who were all photographers was a definite influence."

Now that Leese's daughter works with her on photo shoots, there are five generations of her family which worked as photographers.

"I have found photojournalism and portraiture is more of a passion than a job," she said. "I'll go anywhere they (customers) want. The more creative, the better for me."

Leese works alongside her husband and business partner Alan who helps run www.pleasurehorse.com an e-zine devoted to all things equine in the pleasure horse world.

"People were buying more and more pictures from there every year, so I felt the call for it and decided to open the studio," she said.

Leese continues to be mentored by great uncle Jim Robbins, an International Photography Hall of Fame honoree.

Robbins, now retired, flew to Charlevoix from Florida to work with Leese during her grand opening last weekend.

"I follow the whole family to the beach or on the sailboat and take a gazillion shots and compile a book," she said. "So, instead of a scrapbook with plastic pages, it's a nice beautiful book with glossy pages."

Call 237-9204 or e-mail Leese at info@mchrisleese.com to learn more.

Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix ahead of renewable push

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

With Michigan power going green, the cities of Petoskey, Harbor Springs and Charlevoix are already moving in that direction following a recent agreement to buy landfill gas.

Although lawmakers in Lansing made an official move toward renewable energy with its adoption of a renewable portfolio standard of 10 percent by 2015, city officials said their work within the Michigan Municipal Electrical Association preempted the state mandate.

"We are proactively getting involved," said Petoskey's director of public works, Michael Robbins. "We know where the industry is going and we're doing our part to find those sources that fit our needs."

Don Swem, Charlevoix's electrical department supervisor, said the recent agreement with the Granger landfill project should do enough to meet the RPS mandate. Swem mentioned a program where customers may buy green power voluntarily at a higher, "green rate."

"That may pay for any increase because of renewables," said Swem. "I don't know what effect on rates yet, but I don't expect a big effect at all."

Apple Fest' turns 30!

MAGGIE PETERSON
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Apples will be taking center stage during the 30th annual Charlevoix Apple Festival this weekend.

"A lot of people call this the homecoming. It's just one of those fall festivals that's community-oriented and family-oriented, and really unique to our area," said Charlevoix chamber executive director Erin Bemis.

The festival runs 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 10 to 11, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 12.

Area growers and local orchards will be lining Bridge Street, offering 30 varieties of apples as well as fall harvest items. There will also be hot food items for sale by area nonprofits.

Friske Orchards owner Richard Friske said they have been involved with the Apple Festival for about 25 years.

"It's a big, kind of a hometown thing for us, that's a lot of fun and an excellent retail opportunity," he noted.

He added that they will have about 15 varieties of apples for sale in quantities up to a bushel, as well as their homemade apple cider, apple pies and other baked goods. They will also have a doughnut fryer set up on site again this year, turning out apple doughnuts.

Friske said he likes that apples have stayed the focus of the event throughout the years, and he plans to return to the festival in the future.

"It truly is an apple festival ... No matter what other attractions they bring in, apples stay the focus of the whole thing," he noted.

Also on Bridge Street will be a tent with commemorate festival Apple Festival T-shirts for sale. This is the first year for the T-shirts, and there will be a limited quantity available.

Kids activities will take place in East Park, and include face painting, a petting farm and pony rides. Twister Joe will be roaming throughout the park 3:30 to 6 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Entertainment will be in the bandshell, with Al Frost taking the stage with relaxing classical and finger-style music 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, and 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Ellis Boal joins Frost noon to 12:45 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Charlevoix Public Schools nepotism policy challenged

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Charlevoix High School chemistry teacher Todd Klinger wanted nothing more than to be the Rayder's athletic director.

But, despite having applied for the position three times: in 2006, 2007 and 2008, the Charlevoix Public School Board's 2002 nepotism policy prevents him from being considered for the job.

"In 2006, Doug Drenth was named (athletic director) while Gary Grundman was the high school principal. In 2007, I was going to be recommended to the school board for the job by Mr. Janik (Chet Janik, Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent) and was told to start working. However, I worked for one week before I was told by Mr. Janik that the board would not support me for the job due to the nepotism policy even though the job structure was going to be set up that I would report to Mr. Janik," Todd Klinger wrote in an e-mailed response to questions. "At this point, I withdrew my name for the position without knowledge that I could fight for the job. In 2008, I was denied a chance to interview for the job due to the nepotism policy."

Klinger said he has wanted this position for years because of an "immense interest in athletics."

"In our structure, the athletic director reports to the high school principal and Todd asked for clarification whether he would be eligible or not because he is married to Suzanne Klinger (Charlevoix High School Principal)," Janik said. "He requested a waiver from the board of education ... and the board voted not to grant him a waiver."

The first vote was 5 - 2, with board member Christine Michaud and former member Diane Kilkenny the lone yes votes.

The most recent vote was 6 1 with Michaud again supporting Todd's request.

Janik

The policy states that the board shall not hire any teacher or other employee over 18 if said person would be supervised by a member of their immediate family.

However, according to Suzanne Klinger there would be little if any difference between the current situation and if Todd was allowed to be the athletic director.

Klinger

"Todd and I have worked together for 16 years professionally, and there has never been an issue between us," she said. "I think what's tough in this situation is the nepotism policy is applied in one situation Todd works in this building with me, but he is not allowed to be released as the athletic director in the same building."

Kevin Lockman PLEADS GUILTY to receiving, concealing stolen cash

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Kevin Dale Lockman, husband of imprisoned embezzler Karla Sue Lockman, pleaded guilty to receiving and concealing between $200 and $999 of the money his wife stole from her former employer Northern Preferred Title Company in 2005.

Kevin made the plea, Thursday, Oct. 2, before 90th District Judge Richard May.

Authorities earlier this year claimed Kevin knew the nearly $30,000 he spent on attorney fees for his wife's defense between June and November, 2005, were a portion of the more than $850,000 thought to have been taken by Karla Sue.

Kevin was originally charged with receiving and concealing stolen property of $20,000 or more and faced up to 10 years in prison and nearly $90,000 in fines and costs, but the new maximum penalty he faces is up to a year in jail and/or a $500 fine.

However, that has yet to be determined by a judge; According to district court officials, no sentencing date has been set.

Neither Lockman's attorney Robert Banner or special prosecutor Charles Koop of Antrim County returned calls by press time.

Karla Sue currently serves a five to 10-year sentence at a women's prison in Washtenaw County after being found guilty in August, 2006 of two counts of embezzling more than $20,000.

Kevin remains free on $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

Fire destroys seasonal home

BAYSHORE — Fire officials say an electrical problem appears to have caused a fire that destroyed a seasonal home in Charlevoix County's Hayes Township early Thursday. Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said firefighters were called to the Roger and Joyce Gonda residence at 7531 Nine Mile Point Road to a report of a house on fire. The fire was reported to 9-1-1 at about 4:15 a.m. by a neighbor. Thompson said firefighters arrived to find the two-story home fully engulfed in flames, with flames already coming through the roof. No one was home at the time of the fire. Thompson said the owner's were at their full-time residence in Brighton and had not been at the Hayes Township resident for some time, He said it took firefighters about 30 minutes to put the but fire crews remained on the scene until about 8:15 a.m. Thompson said although some of the home is still standing, the structure is a total loss. The owners had insurance on the home. Thompson said he was back at the scene today, Friday, with an investigator from the insurance company. He said the preliminary investigation points to an electrical problem as the cause of the fire. Thompson noted that Thursday's fire was the department's first major structure fire since it took delivery of a new engine about a year ago. He credited the new engine's compressed air foam system for significantly reducing the amount of time and water it took to put the fire out. "It was just like you turned out the lights," Thompson said of how quickly the glow from the fire disappeared in the early-morning darkness. The Charlevoix Fire Department assisted, helping shuttle water from LexaLite.

Cooperative planning yields smart growth

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Who cares about clean water and responsible land use?

Apparently five townships, the city and county of Charlevoix do.

"Communities have minimal standards for setbacks and greenbelt provisions, some of which are not adequate," said Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan. "By ensuring good standards for both of those, you will help minimize the potential nutrient flow into Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan."

For nearly three years, the Charlevoix Area Multi-Jurisdictional Comprehensive Smart Growth Land Use Initiative team of municipalities has worked to create uniform language across the proverbial board of local governmental districts to ensure setbacks and greenbelts are adequate.

A setback is the minimum distance a building may be constructed from property lines, other buildings or water.

A greenbelt is an area of natural or fallow vegetation left at the water's edge to help prevent runoff of oil, antifreeze and other harmful chemicals into lakes, streams and rivers.

Charlevoix City Planner Mike Spencer added that setbacks and greenbelts aid in controlling flooding and erosion in addition to filtering contaminates like pesticides and fertilizers from water runoff.

"Being an area that relies heavily on tourism, protecting water quality is very important to our local economy," Spencer stated in an e-mailed response to questions. "Many people feel our water is one of the main reason people visit here."

Sullivan

Spencer has said that, if this language is approved by the municipalities involved, it will give jurisdictions the legal authority to protect the water and ensure responsible land use.

Priorities of this voluntary venture include protecting the environment, preserving aesthetics, ensuring appropriate economic development, maintaining what they refer to as "small-town" character and improving traffic flow.

"As a general rule in Planning it is always important for different jurisdictions such as cities, townships and counties to come together collectively to deal with planning issues because they usually affect everyone involved," Spencer wrote. "For example, Lake Charlevoix borders the City of Charlevoix, Charlevoix Township, Hayes Township, etcetera, so for just the city or one of the townships to take measures to protect water quality that is obviously not as good as all of the jurisdictions coming together and taking measures to protect water quality."

He added, "A collective, cooperative approach to this with everyone involved will do way more to protect water quality in Lake Charlevoix than just one jurisdiction. What we do in the City affects the surrounding townships and vice versa."

The estimated cost of this program is $27,500, with the bulk of the cost paid for by grants: Partnerships for Change and Frey Foundation gave $19,500, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation contributed $5,000, and the municipalities of townships Charlevoix, Eveline, Hayes, Marion and Norwood and Charlevoix City and County are covering the remaining $3,000.

An example to changes and additions which could be approved by Charlevoix City Council, its planning commission and the other members of the initiative include:

- The high-water mark, often used as a measuring point for setbacks, would no longer be 581.0 National Vertical Geodetic Datum, but 581.5 International Great Lake Datum which basically means an established level of high-water mark equal to the 10-year flood limit line;
- The greenbelt requirement for "Natural" trees, shrubbery and other vegetation has been changed to "native" types of the same;
- The greenbelt shall include all land within 50 feet of the ordinary high-water mark;
- No structures, other than boat ramps, docks and retaining walls, will be allowed;
- Aside from "reasonable sanding" of beaches, dredging and filling is prohibited;
- Pesticides, herbicides, fertilizers and supplemental nutrients are prohibited;
- Yard and garden waste may not be stored or burned;

While water quality has been one of the main focuses early in the process, Sullivan said other issues will be considered in the future.

"The thought is that this is going to be an ongoing process," he said. "Farmland preservation, regulation of big box stores and a half-dozen other things will probably come up in the future."

Sullivan added, "The idea is for the community to continue to meet and ... bring up what their concerns are on an individual basis and see where there is a commonality of concerns and then look at ordinances and see what makes sense and implement those useful changes to the ordinance."

Fungi: nature's clean-up crew

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Every worthwhile event or organization needs a clean-up crew.

Someone who takes responsibility for sweeping the floor, packing up the waste paper, taking down the signs and tidying up the place.

The natural world provides us with abundant examples, especially this time of year.

You may have noticed that as summer winds down, there are more spiders than at any other time.

They are part of the clean-up crew that makes sure the insects don't take over completely.

There is an excess of insects near the end of summer and the spiders are busy turning them into more spiders, who can survive the winter and be ready to help out next year. It's almost as if nature were planning ahead.

The very best and most effective of nature's clean-up crew are the molds or fungi.

You, or someone hired, must be the clean for the tree leaves that fall on your lawn; but, out there in the real world of the forest, the molds take care of it.

Long before the leaves fall from the trees, they are already infested with fungi busily taking them apart chemically and physically.

Once the leaves reach the ground they become part of a complex system of fungi that take up all the valuable nitrogen, phosphorous, calcium and potassium, and funnel these nutrients directly back into the roots of other trees and plants, not just a clean-up committee, but a reinvestment plan as well.

It is not just the dead leaves that provide fodder for the fungal clean-up committee.

If death and taxes are the only certain things, we have to deal with taxes, but the fungi deal with the results of death.

Everything, plant and animal, dies eventually, and without the fungi we would all be armpit deep in things that died a long time ago.

The environmental movement did not invent recycling, the fungi were doing it at least 400 million years ago.

I say a kind word for the fungi every day.

They may occasionally invade something we would rather they left alone, like that loaf of bread or the grout between your bathroom tiles, but they do a lot of good, mostly charitable, work and should be appreciated.

We clearly have a host of natural world clean-up committees.

Now, if we only had one for the political and economic clean-up, someone or some group that would clean up the messes left by our often too-casual approach to taking care of money and people.

What we need is a clean sweep: the clean-up committee's metaphor for "Throw the rascals out."

Raising money for groomer

THE CRYING TOWEL

Ben Gohs

How often do those in government give the taxpayers the choice to decide 100 percent for themselves on spending?

Not very often.

Enter Ike Boss, Charlevoix City Recreation Department director, who could have fought to get city council to pay for the ski hill groomer necessary to continue operating Mt. McSauba, but he didn't.

He instead worked a deal where the city would loan itself a portion of the money as long as Boss could come up with the remainder through private donations upfront and pay off the rest over time.

So far Boss' efforts and the generosity of the community have far exceeded our expectations, especially at a time when so many are uncertain about their collective financial futures.

The recent fundraiser at Mt. McSauba helped put this community effort a few thousand dollars closer to the goal.

And, there will be a benefit breakfast from 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 18 at Judy's Restaurant in Charlevoix, 117 Antrim St. with 100 percent of the proceeds going to the Mt. McSauba groomer fund.

Stop down for pancakes, sausage, coffee, tea and milk and give what you can: $3, $5, $10, $1,000.

Organizers are not asking you to give until it hurts, just what you can afford.

Since Judy's Restaurant has generously donated the food, labor and grill space, you can be confident that every penny you donate will go toward the groomer.

Our favorite part about this effort is that everyone's favorite recreation director himself, Ike Boss, will be acting as head waiter. We like our coffee with two creams, two sugars and make it snappy.

A spokesperson for Judy's said they will keep the doors open past 2 p.m. if there is enough interest.

If you can't make it for breakfast, call Ike at 547-3253 for more information on how you can help save Charlevoix's ski hill.

SENIOR PICNIC WAS SUPER

Editor:

On behalf of Beaver Island Senior Citizens and the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, I would like to thank the following volunteers, individuals and businesses for their generous contributions of support, gifts of door prizes and volunteerism for our fourth annual picnic.

This celebration of our seniors was held on Sept. 21, at the new Beaver Island Community Center.

It was a tremendous community effort to put on such a special event and celebrate our Beaver Island senior citizens.

DOTING ON DONORS

Editor:

I want to express my most sincere appreciation to the many citizens of Charlevoix who helped the American Red Cross toward its goal at a successful blood drive on Sept. 25. The site, once again, was the Community Reformed Church.

The staff of the church is so cooperative and works hard to accommodate all of the activity connected with the blood drive.

The Charlevoix Lions Club was there in the morning to set up, then again in the evening to cart out the 92 pints of blood that were collected and Red Cross equipment.

A special thank you to the donors, who by your patience, showed your support and kindness to the up to 270 sick and injured patients the pints of blood will benefit.

I must say, the canteen also makes the waiting worth while. Thank-you to the individual bakers who provided the fabulous food.

In addition to hot fudge sundaes, we had key lime tarts, three different varieties of cheesecakes and wonderful cookies and bars.

Fresh fruits and cheese and crackers were also available.

Many thanks to the businesses who displayed posters, the water and electric department for putting up the banners and the office that allowed volunteers to make reminder phone calls.

The Red Cross would not be able to do its life saving work without its volunteers.

The volunteers that help me with the Charlevoix Community Blood Drive are dedicated and simply fantastic.

I sincerely thank each one of them.

The next blood drive is on Nov. 20 at the Reformed Church.

I hope to see you there.

THANK YOU

"Keep Charlevoix Beautiful" would like to thank all of the donors, both merchants and private citizens, who helped make the "Bids for Blooms" party and silent auction such an awesome success.

A relative newcomer was overheard to have said that he had never lived in a community where everyone "just pitches in" and gives of their time and their money to help the community as much as the people in Charlevoix do.

"Keep Charlevoix Beautiful" would like to agree with him.

This community supports, on a daily basis, the projects that make Charlevoix such a wonderful place in which to live.

BIPARTISAN BROTHERS: "HANDS OFF POLITICAL SIGNS"

Editor:

The Charlevoix County Democratic and Republican leaders are issuing this joint statement deploring the continuation of a loss or theft of political yard signs.

Earlier this campaign year, after several campaign signs around the county for Presidential candidate Barack Obama, Michigan House seat candidate Connie Saltonstall and sheriff candidate Don Schneider were stolen or vandalized, John Haggard, county Republican chair, Bill Lovett, county Democratic chair and John Jarema, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney warned that not only is it illegal to tamper with political signs, but it is against the spirit of American electoral tradition.

As Haggard pointed out, the signs are on private property, purchased at the owners' expense, and destroying them is against the law.

In addition, all posted signs must have the permission of the property owner and not be located in the public right-of-way.

Jarema stated, "Anyone caught stealing signs will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater has offered a reward of $100 for information on larceny of a political sign resulting in the apprehension of the perpetrators.

Lovett noted that whoever is doing this may think it is just a prank, but, "they are destroying one of our cherished means of expressing our political opinions."

RAYDER SUMMER CAMP A SUCCESS

Editor:

I'm writing on behalf of Charlevoix Elementary School's Summer Camp program.

Our second summer of camp proved to be a successful one.

We were able to provide a fun-filled quality program for nine weeks to almost 400 campers.

This certainly couldn't have been done without the support of a number of generous individuals and businesses in our community.

We would like to express our thanks to the following: Amy Pott and Caroline Smith from Charlevoix Public Schools, Shannon Pemble, Kathleen Whittaker and the Ragamuffins, John Pearl Sr., Bruce and Katie Beaudoin, Raven Hill Discovery Center and the Charlevoix County Transit.

I would also like to extend a "job well done" to three Charlevoix students: Parker Skeel, Katie Kurchinski and Abbie Romano.

These three students worked as counselors-in-training this summer, volunteering their time and enthusiasm to our program while learning the basics of being a camp counselor.

And, last, I would like to thank our dedicated camp counselors and the families who participated in the program.

We look forward to planning another fun and educational program for the kids in our community next year.

See you then.

MCCAIN, PALIN OUT OF TOUCH

Editor:

John McCain, and now Sarah Palin, not only oppose women's access to safe, legal abortion, they are against sex education in the schools.

These are the positions of extremists, not mavericks.

According to the National Public Radio/Kaiser Health/Harvard University poll, 93 percent of Americans support comprehensive sex education in our schools. Even more startling, the prestigious poll found 71 thought it appropriate for teens to have access to birth control pills without permission from parents. Shame on the media for treating the McCain positions as a legitimate debate on what the American public wants.

McCain is willing to put the health and lives of women, especially young women, at risk and kowtow to his fundamentalist base.

McCain's positions on sex education and birth control are way less popular than the popularity of George W. Bush.

That's no small feat these days.

GOVERNMENT BAILING THE WRONG SHIP

Editor:

Let's do the math: $700,000,000,000 is the amount proposed to be given to the fat cats on Wall Street; 289,000,000 the estimated number of citizens that are not illegal aliens according to 2007 numbers; 700,000,000,000 divided by 289,000,000 equals $2,422.15

Now, what would happen if the government wrote every single man, women and child that holds a Social Security number a a check for $2,422.15?

Now, if your family income is over $150,000, the top six percent earners, you'll have to return the money in your 2008 Tax Return; Thus a savings of $42,000,000,000.

I don't know about you, but my family of four could use an almost $10,000 shot in the arm, or bail out.

This approach would have a huge impact on the economy. Most of us would spend the money before Christmas. The money would still get into the economy, but would keep it out of the control of those who have already proven they don't know how to manage money and improve the economy.

Hmm, something to think about.

Of course, those in Washington won't buy it because they stand to lose if the Wall Street bail out (had) not occured.

If you think this plan could work, or you just find it to be an interesting analysis, pass it on to your friends and colleges.

John P. Taylor
Charlevoix

[Editor's note: This letter was submitted prior to passage of the $840,000,000,000 bailout/rescue plan.]

WHY I'M VOTING FOR OBAMA

Editor:

1. The war in Iraq. It's costing us at least $720 million each day; nearly 4,200 American lives so far; Nearly 100,000 Iraqi lives lost, with millions displaced; The "surge" has succeeded: it turns out that paying Sunni insurgents $10 a day not to attack Americans works; We never found those weapons of mass destruction, but now that American and British oil companies have their lucrative deals, isn't it time to declare victory and get out?

Why are we still there? Because we need Iraq's permission to build 58 permanent U.S. bases to guard the world's second largest proven oil reserves; And the right to control Iraq's air space; And immunity from prosecution under Iraqi laws for all U.S. military personnel and contractors and employees of those oil companies. Huh?

2. The economy. Because of the war; Because of failed fiscal policies. In the largest one-time transfer of wealth from working families to corpprations ever, American families are going to pay to bail out failed financial institutions. Greed has become the national ethic. By chasing wealth, along with oil, we've sacrificed what really counts: our health, time with our families, education, a clean and safe environment, our reputation in the world, our integrity and our future. Enough.

3. It's about issues, but given the gravity of our current situation, who could have imagined the damage that could be done in only eight years?, character matters more than it ever has before.

One candidate, Obama, has exhibited the stability, temperament, intellect, integrity and courage required to lead this country back to prosperity.

Northwest Academy gains online students

ALICE PERRAULT

Northwest Academy has adopted a seat time waiver that allows them to enroll students who cannot attend their school in an online program.

"It's a good fit for us. The waiver means the students do not have to be in our classrooms, but they still get a high school diploma," John Bailey, a Northwest Academy school leader said.

Northwest Academy is one of three participating schools in the state to offer this program. The seat time waiver program allows students to get an education without spending all day in the classroom.

"It's for students who cannot make it to school for whatever reason. We have one student who has to work during the day and another who is raising children. Both of them do their school work at night," Bailey said.

There is no cost for the students in this program. All materials such as books, tuition, and other supplies are paid for by the school. The school can even provide the student with a computer.

"Out of the 16 students we currently have enrolled in the program, we have provided two computers," Bailey said.

"The program gives students the opportunity to get an education through an accredited high school, and allows them to get a diploma, not a GED. It provides the students with better future options," Northwest Academy school leader, Gary Stutzman said.

With this program, students can work at their own pace and have one on one access with instructors.

Bailey said, "We contract with other companies to do online courses. In some cases mentors go to the students with text books, and in others students do the class work online or through software programs. It really depends on the need of each student."

"It's like any other school program. Some students do very well, and others we have to teach how to be motivated. Only time will tell," Bailey added.

"I'm really excited about this program," Stutzman said.

On average, the students are enrolled in seven classes, depending on how many credits they need to graduate. Schedules are very flexible, and are formed around each student.

Currently, this program is only available for students seeking high school education, but may become available to middle school students as well.

"There are no judgments with this program. It doesn't matter if you're a single mom, in foster care, or even in jail. This program is available to everyone," Bailey said.

Know your cholesterol ABCs

September was National Know Your Cholesterol Month, but it's always a good time to know where you stand when it comes to your health.

If you are one of the 593,000 Michigan residents who has been diagnosed with diabetes, it's time you learn the ABC's of your disease.

Studies show that by lowering your blood glucose (A1c hemoglobin), blood pressure and cholesterol, also known as the ABCs of diabetes, you can lower your risk for cardiovascular disease and its many complications. September is National Cholesterol Month. Celebrate by learning more about cholesterol and the different techniques to keep it under control.

There are two main types of cholesterol—HDL and LDL. "Bad" cholesterol, or LDL, is absorbed from saturated fat and cholesterol in the foods you eat. Age, gender, heredity and cigarette use all affect the amount of cholesterol in your system. LDL cholesterol builds up and clogs arteries, contributing to heart attack, stroke and circulatory problems. High cholesterol is particularly harmful to those with diabetes because they are already at an increased risk for heart disease and stroke. If you have diabetes, lowering your LDL cholesterol will reduce your chance of developing other dangerous health conditions.

Some ways to stay below the recommended LDL level of 100 are:

- Have your cholesterol checked regularly.
- Eat a diet low in saturated fat, trans fat, salt and cholesterol
- Get 30 minutes of physical activity every day
- Stop smoking
- Take medicine as prescribed

You can take charge of your health. Diabetes education is available in your local community.

To find a diabetes educator and resources near you call TIPDON, Northern Michigan's Diabetes Outreach Network, at (800) 847-3665 or visit www.diabetesinmichigan.org.

Great Lakes Compact

passes U.S. House of Representatives

MARCI SINGER
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Despite opposition from U.S. Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee), the Great Lakes Compact resolution, which will establish new rules to protect the Great Lakes from water withdrawals and diversions, passed the U.S. House of Representatives yesterday.

Passed earlier this year by all eight Great Lakes states, the Great Lakes Compact allows the Great Lakes states to manage their water, which allows just one governor to veto any major diversion or withdrawal. This protects the Great Lakes from being sold or diverted from the residents that live in the region. The resolution, which was authored by U.S. Senators Carl Levin (D-Mich) and George Voinovich (R-Ohio), was approved by the Senate in August. The legislation will now go to the president to be signed into law.

Dr. Grenetta Thomassey, policy director at Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council in Petoskey said the organization is thrilled the compact passed the House.

"It is now on it's way to the president's desk for a signature and Mr. Bush has indicated that he will sign it. This is a very exciting step forward," Thomassey said "We believe the benefits of passage far outweigh concerns and we also believe those concerns can be addressed as we move forward."

Thomassey said the council did not agree with Congressman Stupak's objections but appreciated his thoughtful approach to this extremely important issue. She added there are opportunities for every state to do what Michigan did when it passed the compact, including regulating the bottled water industry and putting programs in place that specifically enact the compact provisions in their states.

"Moving forward, we will work on getting groundwater explicitly covered under the Public Trust Doctrine," Thomassey said. "We believe the states should do that but it will take some time for them to catch up on that point. The compact lays a perfect foundation for making the argument to do so because it formally recognizes the hydrological connection between surface and groundwater."

Jill Ryan, executive director of Freshwater Future in Petoskey and co-chair of the Healing Our Waters Coalition, said the compact is a once in a lifetime opportunity to protect the nation's largest fresh surface water resource.

"We are celebrating. People often work in the environmental field for decades and never see a victory like this. This was an historic agreement between all eight Great Lakes states governors and more than 1,300 legislators from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin," she said.

Ryan said she respects anyone — lawmakers and citizens — who fight for the strongest possible protections for the Great Lakes.

"It's a good thing when any lawmaker takes time in making careful decision and thoroughly reviews questions," she said. "Through intensive research and review of legal advice over the six years it took to develop the compact, we are confident any current protections for the Great Lakes will not be weakened. We can always create stronger laws. Additionally, each state can create stronger protections."

With the compact banning far off diversions, Ryan said if you are a lawmaker from a state whose water supplies are running out, the question is why would you vote to ban diversions to your state from the Great Lakes?

"The compact sets an important baseline for Great Lakes protections that has never existed before while giving each state the ability to create even stronger protections," she said.

THE COMPACT INCLUDES:

- ■ A general ban on new diversions of water from the basin, but limited exceptions could be allowed in communities near the basin when rigorous standards are met
- ■ Communities that apply for an exception will have a clear, predictable decision making process; standards to be met; and opportunities to appeal decisions. These processes and standards do not exist under current law
- ■ The states will use a consistent standard to review proposed uses of basin water. The states will have flexibility regarding their water management programs and how to apply this standard
- ■ Regional goals and objectives for water conservation and efficiency will be developed and they will be reviewed every five years. Each state will develop and implement a consistent water conservation and efficiency program that may be voluntary or mandatory
- ■ Economic development will be fostered through sustainable use and responsible management of basin waters

Charlevoix transit department awarded grants but eco friendly vehicles not in the future

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix County Transit is set to replace some of its aging fleet.

Although the public transportation program will be purchasing four replacement buses and a replacement van in 2009, manager Ray Leach was not confident the county would be purchasing eco-friendly vehicles with the funds.

While there are some prototype vehicles that run on electricity, natural gas and biodiesel, Leach said none of those types of alternative fueled vehicles would be coming to Charlevoix.

"For small rural systems, it's difficult to have research for spec vehicles," said Leach. "Once they are tested and available they will be put into service."

Rep. Bart Stupak, D-Menominee, announced earlier this week that Charlevoix County Transit, which has an annual ridership of 120,000, would received about $300,000 in grants. Leach said he does not expect to see the vehicles for at least nine months.

Leach said vehicle requirements for size and wheel chair accessibility demanded by the ridership limit his options and that the availability of alternative fuels in the area also hampers him.

"It's not that we wouldn't like one of these prototype buses, but if we can't fuel it, then it's not much use," he said.

Leach said that drivers have stopped idling their vehicles in an effort to make the county's public transportation more eco-friendly and added that there are plans in the future to add smaller, hybrid sedans to the fleet.

White stuff may have road commissions seeing red

STEVE ZUCKER
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Despite facing soaring costs and sinking revenue officials at two Northern Michigan road commissions are going to do their best to keep area roadways passable on the weekends this coming winter.

Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon said although the financial struggles that prompted his agency to try a cost-saving policy of not plowing or salting secondary roads on the weekends last winter have not improved, he plans to have crews out on the roads on weekends as needed this winter.

Early last winter the Charlevoix County Road Commission, in an effort to save on overtime and fuel cost, experimented with a policy that called for only a few primary county roads to be plowed on weekends.

Road commissions in both Charlevoix and Emmet County are under contract with the state to plow and salt state trunklines such as U.S. 131, U.S. 31, M-75, M-119 and M-68 and those roads were not affected by the policy.

But, the experiment was short lived after an early-season storm struck the area on a weekend leaving much of the county snow bound for several days. Harmon said, after hearing a great deal of complaints from the community after that weekend, the road commission went back to its previous policy of calling in crews on the weekends when needed.

Road commissions throughout the state are finding themselves cash-strapped for a number of reasons. High fuel costs not only mean it costs more to run plow truck, but also are causing consumers to use less gas. That means less income for road commissions who receive the bulk of their funding through a per-gallon gas tax.

Harmon said the road commission's gas tax payment for July was down about 9.5 percent from the same time last year.

Salt prices per ton have jumped from $37 to $42, or 16 percent this year.

Harmon said higher salt prices will force him to look more closely at how salt will be used on winter roads.

Deadline nears for economic stimulus payments

Many vulnerable households in Michigan have yet to file

More than 118,000 low-income seniors, disabled veterans and others with disabilities in Michigan have yet to file for their $300 economic stimulus payment ($600 for married couples). That adds up to $35.6 million in unclaimed payments for Michigan residents.

Time is short. Eligible households have until Oct. 15 to file.

The group identified by the IRS on Sept. 7 includes those receiving Social Security, certain pensions and veterans benefits that have yet to file for the stimulus payment because their incomes were too low to file a 2007 tax return. An unknown number of other low-income Michigan households with earnings of at least $3,000 also need to file for the economic stimulus payment if they didn't file tax returns.

"We need to make sure that every eligible household files. That is money that can go to pay winter heating bills, make home repairs, or help buy nutritious food for vulnerable residents. And it's good for the Michigan economy," said Sharon Parks, president and CEO of the Michigan League for Human Services.

Those who haven't should call the 2-1-1 help system (or 1-800-552-1183 if 2-1-1 isn't available in your area) to locate free help in filing for the stimulus payment.

"No one should pay for help in filing for this payment," Parks said. "This is money that is due to eligible seniors and others, and they can get free help to file for it."

Bill Lovett (left) and John Haggard, the chairs of the Charlevoix County Democrat and Republican parties, made a friendly wager over the presidential election and a call for bi-partisanship following the race.

Noah Fowle
News-Review

Haggard, Lovett agree to friendly wager over election

Political pundits, both Democrat and Republican alike, already agree that there is plenty at stake in this year's presidential race between Barack Obama and John McCain.

However, Charlevoix County Republican chairman John Haggard decided to up the ante with his Democratic counterpart, Bill Lovett.

The two agreed that the chairman of the party that loses Charlevoix County will take the other to dinner at Stafford's Weathervane restaurant in Charlevoix.

Lovett admitted that he was making a generous concession to Haggard by limiting their wager to the county's results rather than the national results, but pointed out that Gov. Jennifer Granholm won the county over her Republican challenger, John DeVos, in 2006.

"I recognize that the majority of the Charlevoix County residents have voted for a Republican president in the past," he said. "But I think everyone is dissatisfied with the last eight years and our economy, and there has been such a favorable response in the county for Barack Obama this year."

Although Haggard and Lovett disagreed over presidential candidates, they agreed that whomever wins on Nov. 4, a considerable effort must be made by both sides to heal the wounds opened by each campaign.

"Both parties have been talking about bipartisanship and it needs to be remembered after the election," said Lovett. "People are sick and tired of the animosity that's going on both sides of the aisle right now."

The pair also came together in a recent letter condemning the practice of sign stealing.

DNR fall hunting seasons preview part II

Changes in licensing requirements allow first-time hunters, who find they have an opportunity to go afield, the ability to purchase an apprentice license without having to have completed hunter education first. The apprentice license allows a new hunter the opportunity to participate for two seasons with a mentor before completing hunter education. Otherwise, anyone born after Jan. 1, 1960 is required to have a hunter education certificate in order to buy a license.

Youngsters can begin hunting small game at 10 years of age with a firearm or deer with bow; youngsters must be 12 to hunt deer or bear with a firearm. Firearm deer hunters 12 and 13 years of age are restricted to private-land hunting only

• Bear season: Bear licenses are issued, by lottery, for specific time periods and geographical areas. Hunting on the mainland in the Upper Peninsula runs through Oct. 26. On Drummond Island, the season now until Oct. 21. In the northern Lower Peninsula, the Red Oak Management Unit is open Oct. 5 through 11 Outlook: Bear hunting is excellent in Michigan, with an estimated bear population of 15,000 to 19,000 animals in the northern two-thirds of the state. In the Upper Peninsula, the population appears to be stable to increasing. In the northern Lower Peninsula, the population appears to be stable, though animals continue to range farther south Hunters using hounds are not allowed during the first five days of the season in the Upper Peninsula.

• Elk season: Dec. 9 through 16 in all of the state's elk range in Alpena, Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Montmorency, Oscoda, Otsego and Presque Isle counties. A special hunt may be held Jan. 15 through 19 in agricultural areas if biologists determine the earlier hunt yielded an inadequate harvest to meet population goals. Outlook: The DNR estimates [illegible] animals, above the state management goal of 800 [illegible] animals going into the season.

• Deer season: Archery season is Oct. 1 through Nov. 14 and Dec. 1 through Jan. 1. Firearms season is Nov. 15 through 30. A late antlerless only firearms season on private land is slated for Dec. 22 through Jan. 1 in most of Zone 3. Muzzleloader seasons are Dec. 5 through 14 in the Upper Peninsula, Dec. 12 through 21 in the northern Lower Peninsula and Dec. 5 through 21 in the southern Lower Peninsula. A special firearms hunt for hunters with certain disabilities is on tap for Oct. 16 through 19. The season limit is no more than two bucks. Hunters may purchase up to five antlerless deer licenses, though no more than two may be for the northern two-thirds of the state. New this year, Upper Peninsula hunters who wish to take two bucks will be required to buy the combination license and the tags will be restricted to a buck with at least three antler points on one side and a buck with at least four antler points on one side

Outlook: An estimated 700,000 hunters will take to Michigan's fields and forests this year, enjoying more than 10 million days of outdoor recreation. The deer population is estimated to be similar to slightly larger than it was last year, when hunters took roughly 476,000 whitetails. Hunters in the Lower Peninsula are reminded not to bait deer due to disease risk concerns with Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD). CWD was detected in a Michigan deer on Aug. 25.

• Bobcat season: Bobcat hunting in the Upper Peninsula is divided into two zones; the mainland (Unit A) and Drummond Island (Unit B) and both are open Dec. 1 through March 1. In the northern Lower Peninsula, for Unit C (Alcona, Alpena, Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Montmorency, Oscoda, Otsego, and Presque Isle counties) the season is Jan. 1 through March 1. In Unit D (Clare, Crawford, Gladwin, Iosco, Kalkaska, Missaukee, Ogemaw, Osceola, Roscommon and Wexford counties and part of Arenac County) the season is Jan. 1 through Feb. 1. The bag limit is two with only one from Unit B and only one from Units C and D combined. Outlook: Bobcats are primarily found in the northern two-thirds of the state. The population appears to be in somewhat of a decline in the Upper Peninsula, where harvests vary widely from year to year, based in part on snow conditions and road access. Last year hunters killed 340 bobcats statewide. Hunters must possess a valid fur harvester's license and a bobcat kill tag, which is available free from DNR field offices. Immediately upon killing a bobcat, the hunter must apply the kill tag to the animal.

Despite liberal hunting regulations, including an early firearm antlerless deer season in September, deer numbers in southern Michigan continue to be well above the management goal. The DNR encourages all deer hunters who hunt in this region to purchase and use antlerless licenses this fall to help manage the herd by taking adult does.

Hunters are required to present the carcass to a DNR office within 10 days of the close of the season. DNR personnel will collect data, including the date, location and method of harvest and may collect the skull or a tooth from the cat. The bobcats will be sealed by the DNR

• Coyote season: July 15-April 15 statewide, except in Zone 1 (Upper Peninsula) and Zone 2 (northern Lower Peninsula) during the firearms deer season (Nov. 15 through 30). They may be taken year-round on private property when they are doing or about to do damage. Coyotes may not be taken from April 1 through Sept. 14 on state parks and recreation lands and they may not be pursued with dogs from April 15-July 14. There is no bag limit. Outlook: Coyotes are widespread across Michigan. Coyotes may be hunted at night. Night hunters are restricted to .22 caliber or smaller rifles or handguns, bows and arrows, or shotguns with shells containing shot smaller than buck shot. Check the 2008 Michigan Hunting and Trapping Guide for additional restrictions.

• Raccoon season: Oct. 1 through Jan. 31 statewide, though they may be taken year-round on private property if doing or about to do damage. There is no bag limit. Outlook: Raccoons are abundant and widespread and may be found practically anywhere, though they are partial to hardwood forests, especially along waterways. Wood lots adjoining agricultural fields are particularly productive early in the season. Last year hunters took an estimated 75,000 raccoons in Michigan. Check the 2008 Michigan Hunting and Trapping Guide for firearms and equipment restrictions.

Fox season: Oct. 15 through March 1. There is no bag limit. Outlook: Both red fox and gray fox are found across all of Michigan.

Last year hunters killed about 750 gray fox and 2,000 red fox in Michigan.

PREP FOOTBALL:

Ramblers rebound, trip Charlevoix

BY STEPHEN BELL
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS WRITER

CHARLEVOIX — If Boyne City carried any ill effects from its drubbing less than a week before at Traverse City St. Francis, they weren't evident Friday at Charlevoix, where the Ramblers won, 31-7, in a Lake Michigan Conference football game.

TheRamblers are 5-1, 3-1 in the league. Charlevoix is 3-3, 2-2.

"I was happy with our effort, particularly in the second half," Boyne City coach Dave Hills said. "Coming off a tough game like we had at Traverse City, you never know how you're going to come back, and I thought we responded well."

The Ramblers won the battle up front, as senior Trever Kruzel banged through the line 33 times for 168 yards and four touchdowns. He scored three times in the first half, from 2, 1 and 7 yards out, and Boyne led 18-0 at halftime.

"Our offensive tempo is improving, which we've been working on," Hills said.

"You can't spot a good team that kind of lead," Charlevoix coach Don Jess said.

Boyne City dominated on the other side in the first half as well, limiting the Rayders to 29 yards of offense and no first downs.

But the Rayders opened the second half with a 78-yard drive, capped by a 6-yard scoring pass from Clayton Mitchell to J.T. Lawrence.

Charlevoix had good field position on its next possession, but saw its drive stymied by a 15-yard chop block penalty. Boyne City took over on Charlevoix's 41 and Kruzel scored from 8 yards out to give the Ramblers a 25-7 lead with 8:41 left in the game.

Cody Wilmont scored Boyne's last TD, on a seven-yard run with under a minute to play.

For Boyne's defense, Wilmont and Marc Calo both had seven tackles. Nick Young made an interception and Zac Trafelet recovered a fumble.

Scoreboard workshops set for Charlevoix and Inland Lakes

Beyond the Scoreboard has scheduled workshops at two area schools.

At 6 p.m. Monday, Oct. 13, the group will meet at Charlevoix High School and at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 15, it will meet at Inland Lakes High School in Indian River.

The workshops are open to the public and are aimed at athletes, coaches and parents. The tops are redefining the term athlete, the parent's role in athletics, and teaching character through sport.

The keynote speaker is Rob Miller, director of Miller Sports Consulting Group.

Miller is the director of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Champions of Character program.

A Pigeon, Michigan, native, Miller has served as the executive director of the National Christian College Athletic Association; commissioner of the Wolverine Hoosier Athletic Conference; and as director of athletic facilities at Spring Arbor College.

Miller has coached and played sports at various levels, from youth to college, and holds a masters degree in sports administration from Michigan State University.

Have you heard about the Michigan State Housing Development Authority's (MSHDA) Property Improvement Program?

This program offers low interest home improvement loans to single-family homeowners with low-to-moderate income: up to $65,000, or $74,750 in certain areas; and landlords renting to low-to-moderate income tenants.

Eligible home improvements include repairing or replacing a roof, installing new siding, adding insulation, replacing a furnace, installing a ramp, remodeling a kitchen and other similar improvements.

With energy costs continuing to rise, this program is an affordable way to make improvements that will increase energy efficiency and reduce utility bills over the long term.

Homeowners can borrow up to $50,000.

MSHDA does not require equity in the home for loans $25,000 and under, making it the ideal product for a new homeowner or existing homeowner with limited equity.

Because MSHDA can amortize the loan up to 20 years, the monthly payments are very affordable for those on a fixed income.

The interest rate for homeowners is four, six or eight percent, depending upon income.

Landlords can borrow up to $25,000 per unit, with a maximum outstanding limit of $100,000 per borrower. Eligible properties cannot have more than 24 units.

The interest rate is fixed at eight percent.

There are no income requirements for landlords, but the rental units must meet MSHDA rental limit guidelines.

These loans are provided through MSHDA-approved participating lenders and community agents.

For participating lenders, these loans provide a product that can bring new customers to their business.

While the lender works directly with the borrower to underwrite the loan, MSHDA purchases the loan and assumes the financial debt and loan servicing. Further, MSHDA pays the lender up to $400 per loan.

Our current participating lenders tell us that many of the PIP customers return to the bank, open checking or savings accounts and apply for other loan products.

The goodwill established when offering a PIP loan can continue beyond the loan process.

For realtors, these loans may be just the product to close the deal.

MSHDA does not require equity in the home for loans $25,000 and under, making it the ideal product for a homeowner.

STUPAK 'Clarify Great Lakes Compact'

U.S. Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) has asked House Judiciary Chairman John Conyers (D-Mich.) to add clarifying language to the committee report on the Great Lakes Compact before it is considered by the full U.S. House of Representatives. In a letter to Conyers, Stupak proposed language that would clarify the intent of the compact and provide additional protection against water diversions.

"It is not my intention to kill this legislation but rather to strengthen it," Stupak said. "I intend to do everything in my power to ensure that the Great Lakes Compact signed into law does everything possible to protect our Great Lakes from water diversions."

Specifically, Stupak asked that report language be added clarifying that:

1. A water withdrawal in a container of any size is a diversion;
2. The individual Great Lakes states retain their rights to authorize all requests for water withdrawal;
3. Waters of the Great Lakes Basin are not a commodity under NAFTA or any other treaty, law or agreement;
4. Congress recognizes that the waters of the Great Lakes Basin are a precious shared natural resource held in the public trust by the various Great Lakes states.

"The Great Lakes Compact appears to be on the fast-track in Congress," Stupak said. "Before we codify this agreement we must ensure it accomplishes its well-intended goal of protecting against water diversions and that decisions about Great Lakes water rest with the people of the Great Lakes Basin."

Stupak noted that it took the Great Lakes governors more than three years to approve the compact. "It is not unreasonable for Congress to take the time necessary to make sure we are not opening the door for the commercialization of Great Lakes water."

On July 9, Michigan became the last of the eight Great Lakes states to ratify the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence River Basin Water Resources Compact. The interstate compact now requires the approval of Congress. Resolutions to ratify the compact have been introduced in both the House and Senate. The Senate approved the compact on Aug. 1. The House Judiciary Committee passed the resolution on July 29. It now awaits action on the House floor.

Stupak represents Michigan's 1st Congressional District, which has more shoreline – 1,613 miles – than any other congressional district in the continental United States. It is the only congressional district in the nation that borders three of the five Great Lakes.

Also throughout the weekend is an arts and crafts show, featuring more than 100 vendors. There are no food item vendors at the craft show, and the show features all handmade crafts, many with a fall and holiday focus.

Susan Borowiak of Petoskey will be one of the vendors at the show. She's been to about eight of the festivals.

"When I was just starting, it was close to home and it said it was a well attended show ... It was one of the first shows I ever did and I absolutely loved it, and I've been there ever since," she noted. "They do a fantastic job. It's a really organized, well-attended show."

Borowiak creates stonework pieces, which include lamps, picture frames and house numbers.

She said while the Apple Festival arts and crafts show is on par with other shows she does in terms of size, it does differ from the norm.

"It has a really good blend of art and craft, so there's just a huge variety, and that's the type of show I'm looking for," she noted.

She added that there's something else about the festival which she can't quite describe.

"It's just the park, and the boats and the water. It just has a certain feel to it. It's always been one of my favorites," she said.

For more information on the Apple Festival, call the Charlevoix chamber at (231) 547-2101 or visit www.charlevoix.org.

POLICY

the board and Todd will plead their case before an arbitrator who could give a decision to one side or even throw the case out.

"I feel that I have the temperament and personality to deal with athletes, coaches, parents, and all others involved. Plus, I feel with my background and experiences in athletics coupled with my knowledge of the history of Charlevoix athletics would be an asset to the position," Todd Klinger stated. "I have been a classroom teacher for 17 years and feel a change in job responsibilities would be good for me and help me grow, professionally. Since I have been employed by the district since 1992, I feel this policy does not apply to me since I am not a new hire to the district. The position of athletic director in our school is no longer an administrative position. The position is a full time teaching position (teacher's contract, not administrative contract) with release time for administrative duties as athletic director."

He added, "To my knowledge, this is the third instance that policy has been used by the school board. The previous two times a waiver was granted. There is obviously not consistent use of the policy and I question how there can be a policy that is only enforced some of the time. In a small town, it can be difficult to avoid having spouses or family members work together. There are employees who are related working together in our district. It is inevitable where situations are going to arise like this case. I believe if people have proven that they can work together and be professional they should not be denied a position that they are the most qualified for."

While no hearing date has been set, Janik expects the arbitrator to hear the case in February or March, 2009.

"There's been numerous court cases in the respect that 'Can boards have nepotism policies?' and it is pretty clear that, not just schools, but government agencies and businesses can have nepotism policies," Janik said. "I have to support this policy because it is my job as superintendent to enforce the policies and procedures passed by the board."

Since Todd is already a full-time teacher who teaches three sections and works as the curriculum design team chairman and high school science core department head, he already reports directly to the principal.

"Being an athletic director in our high school would be a change of duties for me, or any teacher, just like being assigned to teach a course for the first time," he stated. "My current situation was approved by the board when my wife, Suzanne, was hired as high school principal in August of 2007."

Suzanne Klinger said Todd just wants a fair shot at doing something he loves.

"He's been a coach for probably 20 years," she said. "He coaches little league, Pop Warner, track, basketball this winter. He's coached varsity football, boys' basketball."

She added, "He's coached as long as I've known him, and growing up in a family passionate about athletics: his father coached and ended his career as an athletic director, so it is in his blood.

Janik said it was never an issue of whether Todd was qualified for the job.

"In my opinion, the board does have the right to have a nepotism policy," he said. "And, it's not uncommon for board(s) of education to have these type of policies.

Ann Gorney currently serves as a math teacher and athletic director at the high school.

Todd Klinger graduated from Central Michigan University in 1992 with a BS in biology and school health and 1999 MA degree in School Administration.

Peace, freedom & justice

Filmmaker Laurie White will introduce her acclaimed documentary film, "Refusing to Be Enemies: the Zeitouna Story," at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 12 at the Charlevoix Public Library. The film profiles a group of six Jewish and six Arab women from Ann Arbor who seek peace and an understanding of Palestinian-Israeli issues through dialog and friendship. The program is one in a series sponsored by the Little Traverse League for Peace and Freedom to promote more understanding of issues related to peace and justice. It is free to the public, although donations are welcome. The women calling themselves "Zeitouna," the Arab word for "olive tree,." include a Holocaust survivor and a survivor of the Nakbah's terror. The film does not attempt to answer questions of right or wrong, or how to break the deadlock of the Middle East conflict. Instead it offers living proof of how the journey of personal transformation may pave the way to socio-political transformation and peace. The group, their ages spanning 40 years, agreed to be filmed over 24 months of meetings after White explained their story could be a "stepping stone" for others wanting to bridge terrifying divides. The documentary features an original instrumental score by Shaun Williams, White's editor that combines classic Arabic and Jewish Klezmer instruments as well as two songs written and performed by Laurie White. The film premiered in Ann Arbor in March, 2007. Since then it has been shown across the U.S. Seen here are members of the "Women in Black" who continue to protest for peace in the Middle East.

Despite no contract, teachers keep teaching

Negotiations continue between board, educators over union contract

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

While an agreement over Charlevoix Public Schools teachers compensation contract has yet to be reached, players on both sides remain "cautiously optimistic."

According to Charlevoix schools superintendent Chet Janik, the teachers will continue to work under the terms of last year's contract until a new contract is negotiated.

"It's safe to say this is a frustrating process for everybody, and a direct result of the economic situation Michigan is in," he said. "Obviously the major issues are financial."

Janik added, "I would say we are not close to an agreement. We have not made progress in our negotiation sessions."

However, Charlevoix High School teacher and chief bargainer for Charlevoix Education Association, AnneMarie Conway feels that after months of slow movement between the teachers and board, they are arriving at some "middle ground."

"It is difficult to pinpoint the status exactly because the board and the superintendent meet in closed session to discuss labor issues," Conway stated in an e-mailed response to questions. "Therefore, we can never be sure of their positions."

While both sides refused to illustrate the financial gap between bargaining parties, Janik and Conway have their own ideas about what is equitable.

"The fact is, our district has enjoyed a very high level of compensation and benefits for many years," Janik said. "But, these tough economic times may

CHANGES at McSuaba Mountain

BY: ALICE PERRAULT
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

CHARLEVOIX- McSuaba Mountain is making some changes this season.

Ike Boss, Recreation Director, said McSuaba is raising their rates.

"It's to pay for the $228,000 new snow groomer, and the addition of the hockey rink," Boss added.

"You have to have a groomer when you have homemade snow. It pushes the snow around, and takes care of the grounds. The groomer we just got is a 2006 model, and it's like new," Boss said.

New rates will be different for city and out of city residents. City residents will pay $12 for a daily pass per person, and non city residents will pay $15 per person.

For a one person seasonal pass, city residents will pay $100 and non residents will pay $150. A two person season pass will be $165 for city residents and $220 for non residents.

The hockey and skating rinks are free, and skates are available for rent for $1 a pair.

The mountain also has a sledding hill and cross country paths that are free to use.

Boss said he believes rise in prices will not affect the business in a bad way.

"I believe we will still have lots of visitors. We are still the cheapest around, and with gas rates people are not going to want to drive somewhere else. I don't think it will make business go up, but I don't think it will make business go down

COA free rides making seniors mobile

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Looking to ever expand the scope and quality of services they offer their constituents, the Charlevoix County Commission On Aging has expanded their three month pilot of free rides for seniors for another 12 months.

The first 90 days was so successful, said COA board member Margo Johnson, the commission opted study the potential program further.

"What really amazed us was that we had no idea what usage was going to be, but usage was good and cost was really low," she said.

Commissioners had set a limit of $20,000 for the pilot, but it only cost them an average of just under $1,100 per month.

The idea for the program was spawned both by increasing gasoline prices and the idea that seniors still able to drive in the summer

Senate OKs plan to provide tax relief for Michigan job providers

The state senate recently approved legislation aimed at helping revitalize Michigan's economy by providing needed tax relief to Michigan's businesses, said Sen. Jason Allen, R-Traverse City.

"The Senate passed vital legislation to help reduce the tax burden on state businesses," said Allen, who chairs the Senate Committee on Commerce and Tourism. "This sensible plan will reduce the financial burden of the Michigan Business Tax and help make Michigan competitive again."

Senate Bill 1038 fixes a structural problem in the MBT by amending the definition of "gross receipts," essentially eliminating the current "tax on a tax." The measure will provide tax relief to an estimated 50,000 Michigan job providers.

SB 1242 phases out the 21.99 percent MBT surcharge over three years beginning Jan. 1, 2009. The surcharge would be reduced from the current 21.99 percent to 14.66 percent in tax year 2009 and 7.33 percent in tax year 2010, and it would be eliminated in tax year 2011.

The phase-out or reduction of the surcharge was the primary recommendation of the Senate MBT Impact Assessment Subcommittee.

"The Senate listened to concerns voiced by companies across the state," Allen said. "This surcharge was a jobs killer. We took an important step today to help turn around the state's struggling economy and show businesses that we want them to stay in Michigan."

SBs 1038 and 1242 now head to the Michigan House.

Celebrating 130 years of faith and worship

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Parishioners and clergy of The First Baptist Church of Charlevoix celebrated its 130th birthday last Sunday, Oct. 12.

While anything over a century old could be said to have passed the test of longevity, church historian and lifelong member Carol Pines and new Pastor Gene Stringer took some time to reflect on significance last Sunday marked.

"It's the community's church That it's the First Baptist means it was the first Baptist church to be in Charlevoix," Stringer said. "Being in the community for 130 years is a reason to celebrate."

The first minister was Rev. A. M. Parmenter, who served from October 1878 through 1882 in the original church building which was where the Charlevoix City Fire Department resides.

Stringer said anyone interested in sharing fellowship and worship is welcome at the church.

"The Baptist faith believes in priesthood of all. It means everyone is called out to be a priest of god," he said. "They believe in soul freedom: everyone needs to make the choice for themselves."

Martin Luther King Jr. was a minister and member of the Baptist church.

The church, according to Pines, has been a veritable hotbed of activity in the local faith community.

"We had the first big community-wide vacation bible school. Our lady's circle had 118 members in 1949 and they got together and they would have some bible verse reading and pray for whoever needs it and then they would do something in the circle that needed to be done like making bandages out of old sheets to be sent to the Congo or put quilts together and send them somewhere they were needed in the U.S.," Pines said. "It wasn't just a get-together to pray ... it was action. You didn't go to government agencies to get things done, the churches took care of them."

Pines, who is one in a line of five generations who have attended the church, also gave an account of how her grandmother was kicked out of First Baptist; never to return.

"My mother told me this and, now that grandmother's dead, I can tell it. My father was a POW of the Japanese during World War II, and they did not know whether he was alive or dead," she said. "As far as the military was concerned, he was missing in action and presumed dead. Grandmother always maintained he was alive and she would play with a Ouija board and it told her my dad was alive. She was warned several times and finally they kicked her out of the church."

Pines added, "We laugh about that now, but it was a really serious offense to be doing those things like that. But, she was very adamant my dad was alive and he was. His submarine was sunk in the sea of Japan in March '42 and he was released in 1945."

In addition to quirky happenings and more than a century of local and worldwide mission work, First Baptist has had some high profile parishioners including the family of Ransom Olds, founder of the Oldsmobile car line.

Times have changed and so too some of the church's stricter rules.

"They used to do what's called a role call, and if you were not in church, you were erased off the books," Pines said. "They started doing that in the 1920s. I came across some of those books while doing research. Instead of crossing them out, the erased them. Luckily the printing was still there so you could see it and keep a record of who all was in this church."

Anyone interested in attending the 10:45 a.m., Sunday morning service is welcome. And, don't worry. Pines assured, no one will be erased or booted for tardiness or use of certain board games.

Stringer came from Jamestown, N.Y. and brought his wife Tiffaney and four sons: Brandon, Zechariah, Jared and Noah.

The 6 p.m. Sunday evening contemporary service is also open to everyone. Music and worship with electric guitars, drums and singing occur weekly.

First Baptist is also a supporter of the Rainbow Shoppe resale store.

The church is located at 6781 M66 North. Call 547-4121 for more information.

Clarification:

Due to reporter oversight there may have been some confusion over the omission of the word "embryonic" when used to describe what Proposal 2 would make legal if passed in the second line of the page one story of Charlevoix Courier dated Oct. 1. Adult stem cell research is currently legal in Michigan and, if passed, Proposal 2 would amend a 1972 law to allow human embryonic stem cell research to proceed using donated embryos discarded from fertility clinics af-

Open seats on various county commissions

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With nearly 20 open seats on commissions and boards of oversight ranging from the commission on aging and the transportation authority, to the road and planning commissions, county officials hope to see some proverbial new blood.

"It's a chance to get involved and participate in your community," said Chairman of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners Chris Christensen. "Members of these boards are responsible for setting policy and procedure, writing grants and, in some cases, determining how budgets will be written."

The following seats will expire and the respective individuals currently holding those seats will most likely be reassigned to their respective boards in the absence of interested parties from the community at large:

The commission on aging has three terms set to expire; that of Joan Blanchard, Betty Pearsall and Nels Northup.

The road commission has one seat, that of Keith Ogden.

Three seats will expire for the parks committee; David Seeley, Jane Brannon and Ralph Harmon.

The county planning commission also expires three terms; Larry Levengood, Michael Buttigieg and Nancy Ferguson.

The department of human services has one expiration; Oral Sutliff.

John Mathers Jr.'s veterans affairs seat also comes due.

John Mathers, Jr. Veteran's Affairs 12/31/08

Henry Erber's seat on the transit committee expires, as does Dennis Jason's seat on the transportation Authority.

Two seats on the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance board expire; Don Vorson and Mike Hansen

Two brownfield development authority seats; Arch Wright and Randy Frykberg, as well as one Emmet/Charlevoix County Fair Board seat; Bill Thompson.

Terms may vary from as little as one year to as many as six, and each requires varied amounts of time to be spent traveling, attending meetings and training sessions.

Prior experience in any of the aforementioned fields of expertise is helpful but not necessarily necessary to garner a board seat.

For more information on any of these open seats or to make application, call the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office at 547-7200.

Columbus Day recognition

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Many of us celebrated this past Columbus Day traveling about, viewing the spectacular color that is starting to unfold in our neck of the woods.

Some of those same individuals relished a longer weekend thanks to President Nixon.

Yes, I too was a bit surprised as I personally equate Watergate and Nixon in the same breath.

It was Nixon who declared the second Monday of October as the National Holiday recognizing Chris for discovering America.

Even though he did not discover North America we celebrate his ability to develop economic competition between developing nations.

When Columbus set sail he already knew as others did too that the earth was round but his adventurous side wanted to check out how big the earth really was.

He traveled westward and landed in the Bahamas, Haiti and then on to the Dominican Republic where some of his ashes still remain.

The reason we exemplify him as discovering North America may be more in tune with a great agent or his own need for getting noticed.

An entrepreneur of the New World, he is best known for setting up trade during a time when the economy was weak.

He was by all accounts ruthless and greedy.

His desire to seek social status was so important to him that he made certain he earned a coat of arms to which he added embellishments.

Columbus was responsible for the exchanging of plants, animals and goods as well as introducing diseases to the European continent, biological warfare so to speak.

Reading about Christopher Columbus is knowing for certain that history does repeat itself.

Before Columbus was completely involved in his discovery of North America gig, Leif Erikson had come to North America 500 years earlier.

To honor Leif as the first European to land on American soil, Oct. 9 was selected to celebrate his day.

Leif's good friend, Bjarni Hergelfson, also a sailor, saw North America but found it too rocky and not of much value so he turned around and sailed back to Norway.

This reminds me of a plaque I read on Mackinac Island referring to Father Charlevoix.

When he arrived north from Detroit and landed on the island he felt Mackinac Island was not worth visiting as it was nothing but rock and moss.

He may not have been the visionary we thought he was.

I found it interesting that many states celebrate Columbus who didn't discover America and we don't celebrate St. Christopher who really did by all accounts help others with traveling. St Christopher, recognized by most Catholics as the patron saint of travelers has been a favorite of mine since childhood.

Our old Buick had a medal carefully placed on the floor area of the front seat of the car.

Mom explained that she felt safer driving the car with it in plain view.

Since I spent most of my teen years lost on I -94 I found myself displaying a pin or facsimile with me. When the feast day of St. Christopher was removed from the Roman Catholic calendar mom's Irish ire went up but she assured us she was still traveling with a St. Chris medal in the car.

Long and short, Columbus gets his day in the sun and St. Christopher doesn't.

Lesson learned here is the man with power and marketing skills is the one who gets noticed, it doesn't necessarily mean he gets the job done.

Depending on where you live you may have had the day off.

A larger number of Nordics have settled in Wisconsin and Minnesota celebrating Leif Erikson Day .

The East Coast states have a larger Italian Catholic population so parades and a day off is in order for Columbus Day.

In the Dakotas where there is a larger native America population they celebrate "Native American Day" not Columbus Day.

California, a state that doesn't surprise anyone with their creativity, celebrates "Indigenous Peoples Day" with a pow wow and parade.

However you celebrate and whichever day you choose it's nice to know you can find a reason to take a day off to enjoy what life has to offer.

Uncle Sam to the rescue: bailout rewards bad behavior

THE CRYING TOWEL

Ben Gohs

"In a closed society where everybody's guilty, the only crime is getting caught. In a world of thieves, the only final sin is stupidity." -- Hunter S. Thompson

We apparently find ourselves playing Jeopardy: The Moron Edition. I'll take self-inflicted crises for $700 billion, Alex.

The use of subprime mortgages and liar loans allowed the so-called predatory lenders and their willing accomplices to flood the market with foreclosed homes, loans that will never be repaid and a fiscal domino affect felt in every corner of the nation. They were stupid, and they got caught.

So enters the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008, a fitting tribute to the age of bloated, self-serving narcissists.

As Pat Buchanan pointed out in his Sept. 26 column, this $700 billion comes in the wake of "$29 billion to buy the rotten paper of Bear Stearns ... ; $85 billion for 80 percent of AIG ... ; $150 billion in a stimulus package ... ; (and) perhaps $300 billion to bail out Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac."

That's over a trillion for those of you keeping score at home.

This Dungeons & Dragons campaign on crack consists of vague language which says some unspecified homeowners could have their interest rate or even their principal lowered. The other 205 pages of the bailout deal with tax credits for everything from making your home more energy efficient, coal gassification plants and carbon dioxide sequestration to a $240 "fringe benefit" for people who ride their bike to work.

Oh wait, it gets better.

There is an extension of an energy efficient appliance credit. That's $45 to $75 for dishwashers, $75 to $250 for washing machines, $50 to $200 for refrigerators not to exceed $75 million per citizen. And, let us not forget the exemption from an excise tax for "certain wooden arrows designed for use by children" which repeals a 43-cent tax on wooden arrow shafts which was passed in 2004.

Furthermore, billions have been allocated as tax deductions on student loans, owners of homes in disaster areas and to people who buy electric cars. Wind and refined coal facilities get a one-year extension for tax credits and so too, hundreds of millions in bonds will go to municipalities, public utilities or energy cooperatives for renewable energy projects.

The credit market finally tightened up after the crisis could no longer be kept a secret. But, instead of allowing the system to self-correct, the government decided it would be a good idea to use taxpayer funds to flood the market, once again, with credit.

This rescue could be the worst prescription for the health of the American economy since actions taken before, during and after the Great Depression—you didn't really believe the stock market crash of '29 was to blame, did you? Do yourself a favor and read "Great Myths of the Great Depression" another fine product of the Mackinac Center for Public Policy; second thought: make your kids read it too.

Just as then, instead of taking rabies-riddled Old Yeller (played this evening by terminally ill lenders and ne'er-do-well borrowers) out behind a tree and blowing his addlepate brains out, Travis (usually played by capitalist hem Free Market) has decided to coax the fatal and communicable disease from Yeller with a series of tax credits, guaranteed loans and socialist incentives.

Little does the audience know that Free Market was actually bludgeoned by Uncle Sam's evil twin and notorious fair-weather capitalist Komrade Vladimir, and Free Market now lies unconscious in the prop closet at the back of the theater; visions of Adam Smith dancing in his head.

Instead of protecting the system by allowing much needed capitalistic bloodletting for those who deserve it, the government has smothered the economy in steak sauce and given the lion a knife and fork.

Now we wait, napkin tucked under chin, for the vile victuals of increased regulation, government ownership of private companies and handouts, so capricious in nature, that even the government does not yet know who will qualify.

What would Hunter think?

My god man, the swine have taken over the banks. What's next, nationalized dry-cleaning?

The real question is, will we sit and twiddle our thumbs while the stupid and guilty collude to kill the notion of the free market?

ECONOMY

Editor;

In listening to the debate last night, I am amazed at the lack of knowledge by the politicians and the audience, and thoroughly disappointed in our educational system when it comes to how our economy functions.

In this country, the majority of start-up businesses, and small companies are formed under a sub-chapter s, or a limited liability company, which allows the owner to include the business' results under his/her own IRS filing, thereby minimizing the complexity of starting a business.

When it comes to senator Obama's new tax plan that will only penalize the "rich," and be status quo for everyone else, nothing could hurt this country more, and be further from the truth.

Let me give you an example: Under this plan, if you make $250,000, your income tax remains the same. But, if you own a small business, and your combined income of personal and business is $250,001, you will see a dramatic tax increase.

This plan will not stimulate the economy and create more jobs.

The opposite will hold true for most businesses and create a loss of jobs in the most vital part of our economy, which is small startups and companies formed under LLC.

We all have to get beyond the rhetoric and educate ourselves if schools don't; and realize the impact politicians make on our lives if they are ignorant as to how jobs are created and what they will do to the engine of our economy.

FIREFIGHTERS SAVE THE DAY

Editor:

We would like to recognize the Charlevoix Township volunteer firefighters for saving our neighborhood.

It was certainly terrifying to awaken in the middle of the night to see a blazing inferno just 150 feet from our home.

The wind was blowing in excess of 25 mph.

Huge quantities of burning debris were lifted high into the air and blown across the road, landing on rooftops and woodland.

It was only the quick and professional response of these firefighters that averted a more devastating outcome to the neighboring homes and neighborhood.

Although the home is a total loss, and we sympathize with the homeowner, we are very grateful that the fire was contained.

These volunteer firefighters worked as a team and demonstrated great courage, skill and professionalism.

Thank-you for your quick and able response. Without it, the outcome would have been much worse.

Charlevoix Township provides the entire fire fighting support for neighboring Hayes Township. This house fire occurred in the early morning hours on Thursday, Oct. 2, in Hayes Township.

Even though the fire occurred in the middle of the night, these volunteer firefighters arrived in a matter of minutes.

Thank God.

To all these firefighters: Thank-you for a job well done.

PROPOSAL 2

Proposal 2, the Human Embryo Research Proposal, seeks to alter the Michigan Constitution, allowing for unregulated experimentation on and the destruction of live human embryos.

As a constitutional amendment, Proposal 2 will prevent any future legislative attempts to regulate or restrict human embryo research.

This proposal even seeks to restrict any legislative oversight on human embryonic research.

In short, the Legislature will have no ability to regulate anything related to human embryo and stem cell research in Michigan.

This proposed constitutional amendment appears to simply legalize human embryonic stem cell research; however, this is simply not the case. Such research is already legal in Michigan and is being done in Michigan. If passed, this amendment would actually open the door for unfettered experimentation on human embryos.

I believe this proposed amendment is very dangerous, and I hope the citizens of Michigan will see through the hype and the high finance of the proponents of this measure and Vote No on Proposal 2.

WHAT SURGE?

Editor:

We all know what a "surge" is. We have surge protectors on our computer plugs.

Rivers have levees for surges in the water level.

By definition a surge is temporary.

What goes up comes down.

We have not yet seen a "surge" in troop levels in the war in Iraq. We have seen only the increase. We cannot discuss the success of the surge until the troop levels decrease.

If we continue to remain in Iraq in the same force, the "surge" has not succeeded.

It has failed.

If we do not see thousands of dead or captured Al Qaida, we have not defeated them in the war on terror; we have just driven the terrorists to Iran or to Afghanistan or elsewhere.

In addition to the surge in the military troop level in Iraq, the level of armed U. S. civilians – Blackwater, Haliburton, etc. – has reached 180,000 such mercenaries, according to Virginia Senator Jim Webb in his book "A Time to Fight."

Billions in our taxes are being paid to these civilian companies who are not interested in having the U. S. pull out of Iraq.

Senator Barack Obama has promised as president to get us out of Iraq and to redeploy troops and tax dollars where they are needed in the war on terror.

Northern Lights Celebration

a huge success despite the economy!

Held on Sept. 27, St. Mary School's largest fundraiser generated $75,000 for the school and its operations. Of that amount, angel gifts generated the following for angel scholarships, $8,625; technology upgrades, $3,045; and science curriculum upgrades, $3,505 which will include new textbooks. The grand prize winner for the cash raffle was Robert Brooks of Grosse Pointe Shores, who received $7,000. The $1,000 winners were Marita and Angelo Parrish of Houston, Texas; Eileen Shiverdecker of Cincinnati, Ohio; and Dan and Larissa Flynn of Charlevoix. The $500 winners were Pat and Judy Donnelly of Charlevoix; Beth Shields of Ft. Wayne, Ind.; and Robert Hoffman of Charlevoix. The winner of the Wii game system was George Haggard of Morristown, Tenn. The iPod Touch was won by Maureen Henze, Charlevoix; and the Flat Screen TV was won by Bill Clark of Lansing. St. Mary's would like to thank everyone who bought a cash raffle ticket in support of the school, in which it makes everyone a winner. Highlights of the evening included the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts students portraying characters from Marilyn Monroe to Hannah Montana, which reflected the theme of the evening, "An Evening with the Stars." Some students were paparazzi and snapped pictures as the guests walked the red carpet. Photos of the event are online at the school website www.stmaryschoolcharlevoix.com. The Chocolate raffle was won by Tim and Beth Shields of Ft. Wayne, Ind., which was a stay at Black Star Farms in Suttons Bay. The Children's Art Gallery is also a special highlight of the event, in which art produced by the students of St. Mary's in auctioned off. St. Marys would like to thank all the local businesses who generously donated goods, cash or gift certificates to the event. Without your support this event would not be as successful as it is. They also thank all the parents, parishioners and volunteers who came together to make a magical evening for all to enjoy. Thank-you to all the guests for coming and supporting St. Marys.

Boating accident

A Grawn man was injured Wednesday evening in a boating accident on Lake Charlevoix.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Robert G. Ward, 25, was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by East Jordan EMS around 8:43 p.m. on Oct. 8, after his father, 48-year-old Charles C. Ward of Ellsworth, drove their 26-foot Bayliner vessel into a 55-foot break wall near Lakewood Drive, sending them airborne where they glanced off a 25-foot tree and came to rest in a small cove.

Robert, who was a passenger of the vessel, was treated for head, shoulder and back injuries before being released from the hospital a short time later.

Assisting at the scene were the East Jordan Police, EMS and Fire departments, as well as the U.S. Coast Guard.

The accident remains under investigation by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Marine Division, and according to Lt. David Beyer, possible marine violation charges are pending.

'Building Better Bones'

Osteoporosis can be a silent disease, one that causes thinning of the bones which then causes the bones to become fragile and more likely to fracture.

"It's a disease that people often don't realize they have until they fracture their hip, wrist or ankle," said Linda Linari, RN, BSN, ONC and orthopedic nurse clinician with Northern Michigan Regional Hospital.

Linari will share information on osteoporosis prevention and treatment during the upcoming Healthstyles class, "Building Better Bones." It will take place from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 9, at the Community Health Education Center, across from the hospital's main entrance.

The program is free and open to all individuals interested in the prevention, early diagnosis and treatment of osteoporosis. Bone biology, bone density testing, treatment options, nutrition instruction, exercise and fall/fracture prevention will be discussed.

Linari, who will provide an overview of osteoporosis, will be joined by presenters Janet Havens, a registered dietitian, and physical therapist Anne Grimmer.

"(Anne) will go over exercises you can do to strengthen muscles, which strengthens bones and increases bone density, and ways to keep yourself safe so you don't injure your back, or slip and fall," Linari said.

Havens will educate attendees on making proper dietary choices to increase calcium intake.

"And, she will go over reading labels. There's a lot of information on food labels and it can be confusing. She will discuss how to read the labels appropriately," Linari said.

Women and men, particularly the elderly, can both suffer from osteoporosis, she added, though it does more commonly affect women.

"It's a disease we can prevent, or one that we can halt the progression of with appropriate medications and education," Linari said.

Pre-registration for Healthstyles classes is requested and can be arranged by calling HealthAccess at (800) 248-6777.

Flu vaccination recommended

As flu season approaches, public health officials are recommending flu shots for nearly everyone over six months of age.

Appointments are now available for community flu shot clinics as follows:

- Oct. 16, at the Charlevoix Middle School
- Oct. 22, at the Gaylord Intermediate School
- Oct. 24, 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Mancelona High School
- Oct. 28, 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Petoskey Middle School

In addition, flu shot appointments are available at Health Department locations in Mancelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey/Harbor Springs, and Gaylord.

Cost is $25 for flu vaccine and $30 for pneumonia; Medicare and Medicaid accepted.

Call (800) 432-4121 to schedule an appointment.

Unlike some previous years, there is no shortage of flu vaccine this season.

In fact, there are about 145 million doses of flu vaccine available this year, an all-time high.

That is three million more doses available than last year.

This year, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention expanded its recommendation about who should get the flu vaccine.

Now, more than four out of five people are recommended to get an annual flu vaccine, including all children 6 months through 18 years of age.

"It is vital for parents and caregivers to realize that children experience the highest rates of influenza," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "About one in three children contract the virus every year. Infants and children can develop severe complications, such as pneumonia, seizures, and ear or sinus infections. Last year, 83 children in the U.S. died of flu and related complications."

"The single best way to prevent the flu is to get vaccinated each year," said Meyerson. "If you are a parent or child care worker, a health care professional, or have contact with people age 65 and older, protect those high-risk individuals by getting vaccinated."

Charlevoix design firm featured in dream homes book

The Charlevoix-based design firm of Indesign, owned by Tim Fisher, is featured in a new, exclusive book showcasing Michigan's finest architects, designers and builders titled, Dream Homes Michigan.

DREAM HOMES

"Dream Homes Michigan presents breathtakingly rich photographs of the most technically innovative and aesthetically interesting architecture and construction of recent years," claims the publisher, Panache Partners, LLC. Panache produces magnificent collections of visually stunning homes highlighting various states and regions, with this most recent volume featuring homes throughout the state of Michigan, where the breathtaking beauty and diverse characteristics of buildings sites are remarkable. Dream Homes Michigan is the company's 20th in the series, which has featured major markets across the country, including Colorado, Florida, the Carolinas, Chicago, New York and the eclectic Southwest.

"The book is showing some of the most spectacular homes in our immediate area," said Fisher. "It's not just another home book, but one that is specific to our region, which shows the variety of homes and width of local talent found here."

A disproportionate number of the 230 homes represented in the new book are from northern Michigan. Readers will get more than a glimpse inside some of the most stately homes in Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Bay Harbor, and the surrounding area, designed by some of the most premiere architects and builders from throughout the state.

Indesign, based in Charlevoix for 25 years, was invited to present three of their projects in the exclusive publication. As a testament to the design firm's compelling and highly detailed design and quality craftsmanship, two of Indesign's homes grace the front and back cover of the opulent, glossy publication

"We were delighted to be invited to contribute," Fisher said of the inclusion in the beautiful book. "Anyone would be proud to put this book on their coffee table."

The three Indesign homes featured in Dream Homes Michigan reveal the variety of design styles the firm is accustomed to creating, and the caliber of their work, Fisher said. One of the homes is a log and shingle lodge with stone fireplaces throughout, another one is a New England shingle style home, while the third is a country French Tudor home overlooking Lake Michigan in Charlevoix.

"A house is a reflection of the homeowner," Fisher said. "It's a reflection of their dream, their vision. We're translators. We listen to the owner and gather information on their dream and translate it into their dream home. No two dreams or homes are alike."

Indesign is unique in that it is a collection of talented architects, interior designers, kitchen and bath experts, lighting designers, furniture and fabric professionals, along with surface and material specialists, all under one roof to provide smooth interaction throughout the design and development process. While a client may not enlist all of these skilled trades on any one particular project, access to this collection of professionals ensures an ideal fit for whatever type of project the client may have, Fisher said. Working not only in Charlevoix and throughout Michigan, Indesign has recently completed projects in Florida, Ohio, Indiana and a spectacular penthouse in downtown Chicago.

While Indesign is involved with all sizes of projects, from small remodels of one or two rooms to larger redesigns to entire ground-up evolution of a masterpiece, the three projects featured in the new book represent just a small sampling of 25 years of home building.

"We have had the privilege to work on so many great projects," said Fisher. "We would have liked to have shown them all."

The breathtaking photographs of Indesign's creations in the book are merely samples of the countless photographs that capture the design firm's depth of skill and variety of talent that can be found on their Web site, www.indesignfirm.net.

Dream Home Michigan features 37 different design firms from around the state, yet out of those 37, six are locally based. The book can be purchased for $39.95 at Book World and Round Lake Books in Charlevoix; Horizon Books and McLean and Eakin in Petoskey, and Between the Covers in Harbor Springs, and Horizon Books in Traverse City. Or visit the company online at www.panache.com.

history of candy corn

Candy corn has been around for more than 100 years. George Renninger, an employee of the Wunderlee Candy Company, invented the popular confection in the 1880s and Wunderlee became the first to produce the candy. Tha Goelitz Candy Company (now Jolly Belly Candy Company) started producing tha confection in 1900 and still produces candy corn today.

When candy corn first appeared, it was popular among farmers because of its agrarian look. The tri-color design was considered revolutionary and tha public went crazy for it. Lack of machinery meant that candy corn was only made seasonally from March to November. Candy corn has remained unchanged for more than 100 years and is a favorite at Halloween.

How is Candy Corn Made?

In 1900, it was the job of many men to produce candy corn for eight months of the yaar.

Sugar, corn syrup and other ingredients were cooked into a slurry in large kettles. Fondant and marshmallow were added to give a smooth texture and bite.

The 45 pounds of hot candy was poured into buckets called runners. Men dubbed stringers walked backwards pouring the candy into cornstarch trays imprinted with the kernel shape. It took three passes to make the white, yellow and orange colors. Originally, candy corn was delivared by wagon in wooden boxes, tubs and cartons.

The process of making candy corn is very similar today, but now machines do most of the work.

Manufacturers use a method called the corn starch molding process.

A tray containing depressions is filled with corn starch. Candy corn is made from the bottom to tha top and in three-color passes. First, the depression is filled one-quarter full with yellow syrup and allowed to partially set. Next, the orange syrup is added.

The mold is then topped oft with tho white syrup and is cooled. The candy now can gel together. After is it has finished cooling, the trays are emptied and the little candy corns are ready to be eaten.

Food drive

Residents may drop off nonperishable food items at Michigan Secretary of State branch offices to benefit needy families in their communities for the 18th annual Michigan Harvest Gathering.

"Your donations help put a meal on the table for someone in need," Michigan Secretary of State Terry Land said. "Of the one million Michigan residents expected to visit a food bank this year, 38 percent are children and 14 percent are senior citizens. I encourage you to contribute to Michigan Harvest Gathering to help your less-fortunate friends and neighbors, including our most vulnerable populations."

The campaign, which is coordinated by the Food Bank Council of Michigan, helps supply the state's regional food banks through donations of food and money.

The regional food banks serve food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters in every Michigan county.

People can drop off donations at all branch offices through Dec. 12.

Requested items include peanut butter, canned tuna and other meat and canned fruits, vegetables and soups, although all nonperishable food items are welcome.

Envelopes will be available for those who wish to mail cash donations, which are used to cover the cost of collecting and distributing the food.

In 2007, the Michigan Harvest Gathering collected more than $400,000 and 289,000 pounds of food.

The 2008 goal is $430,000 and 300,000 pounds of food.

Business incubator program

The new regional business incubator program officially launched on Oct. 1.

The program will be managed and administered through the Entrepreneurial Division of NLEA under the direction of Lori Meeder. An incubator is a support system that accelerates the successful development of start up and existing companies.

The launch of the program was a culmination of hundreds of volunteer hours from community and business leaders in nine communities throughout the region. Each of the communities had a steering committee that met monthly to brainstorm, discuss, and create the program.

"The program's goal is to connect the client with a targeted set of resources tailored to the individual needs of that particular client. These resources and services could include access to capital, business mentors, technical and professional advice, business related workshops and training," said Lori Meeder, Director of the Entrepreneurial Division. "Each client is at a different stage in their business and we will craft a plan that fits their needs at whatever stage they are in the journey."

Through an application and screening process, the program is open to all for profit entities that have a strong desire to grow and expand their business – and a business plan that points to a product or service with positive market potential.

The premise is that, with the help of a strong set of advisors, the business can make a significant impact on the region's economy. The candidates seeking advice and connections with resources and experts must also exhibit a willingness to learn and be coached by others.

A comprehensive data base of local, regional and state experts in a wide array of business categories ranging from market research to graphic design to website developers to legal advisors is being created.

One of the keys to program success is finding the best mentors and service providers to coach and guide these young businesses. Experienced volunteers who are willing to share their time and expertise to help potential entrepreneurs are encouraged to call and volunteer. "Many successful business people know how important it is to have the right advice and guidance in the beginning and understand that giving back should be part of that process. We are so fortunate to have so many successful business leaders who live in Northern Michigan and have a real passion to help entrepreneurs prosper and grow," says Meeder.

If you are interested in learning more about becoming a mentor, service provider or client, please contact Northern Lakes Economic Alliance at (231) 582-6482.

New towing service in town

BY ALICE PERRAULT
NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

COURTESY PHOTO

Jay Roharge has opened a new towing business in Charlevoix.

Roharge opened his shop this past January. Since then, he said business has been great.

"It keeps me pretty busy. It's been working out really well," he said.

Roharge started the business out of necessity.

"I did construction for 20 years. But with the way the economy is, there was not enough work. Since I used to do this when I lived in Alpena, I thought I could do it again," he said.

Jay's Towing is open 24 hours, seven days a week.

They will work with anyone in northern Michigan, not just those in Charlevoix.

They are also quick to respond to a situation, according to Roharge, and this is something he said customers appreciate.

"People are happy with our fast response time," he said. "They always have positive things to say."

Jay's Towing will match or beat another competitor's price.

"If a customer is shopping around for the best price, we'll work with them," Roharge said. "We're just trying to make a living too."

Roharge said the staff at Jay's Towing takes pride in the care they give to their customers.

"We are here for the customers. We care about your situation," he said. "If your car breaks down, and you don't know what to do, we'll help."

"It's about giving people a choice with who to use," Roharge added.

Call Jay's Towing 547-9638 for more information.

TEACHING

force us to look at other options in terms of compensation and benefits."

He added, "Like any other business, and every home, we can't deficit spend year after year. So, we have been reducing staff, but we cannot continue to do that without impacting the quality of education."

Conway said "generous compensation" is in the eye of the beholder

"Any single contract line item might appear higher when compared to other districts, but we feel this is a narrow view Charlevoix ranks eighth among northern Michigan school districts in starting pay," she stated. "It's important to keep in mind Charlevoix teachers' years of experience, number holding advanced degrees and our rank among area schools' MEAP scores when making district comparisons."

She added, "We're arguing for a reasonable contract, given all the circumstances. The budget is tighter than it has been during some years, and that needs to be one consideration."

Conway said other factors must be considered during negotiations.

"We feel that the district has more resources available which could be devoted to instruction. The last two teacher contracts have included major concessions: a shift to a much cheaper PPO for health insurance, for instance, that has saved the district $400,000 in the last two years alone. In 2006, the teachers also accepted a one-year freeze in the cost-of-living increase—a move rarely seen even in neighboring districts with similar budget concerns—resulting in a cumulative loss of up to tens of thousands of dollars over the course of an employee's career and retirement," she stated. "Prior to that, in 2004, we agreed to changes in our health insurance policy which netted an additional $400,000 savings over the life of the contract. Clearly, the teachers have a history of working with school management in a climate of various challenges."

She added, "We also take issue with the assumption that leaner years necessarily correlate to substantial cuts in salary and benefits; by that logic, many of the fatter years in the past should've resulted in large increases and new benefits. Of course, that wasn't the case. Salary increases haven't come in above 3% in decades, and, as mentioned, insurance costs have been reduced substantially over the years.

While Janik sympathizes with the teachers, he noted this is not just a local but a statewide issue, and added that he find additional funding where there is none.

"It simply comes down to this: in the last five years we are down approximately 185 students, and that has caused us to reduce staffing by over 30 people. We anticipated a budget deficit of over $800,000 and we made approximately $350,000 in cuts, which means we are still projecting a budget deficit of approximately half a million dollars," he said. "We will continue to negotiate and hopefully be able to come to some resolution with the union, but salaries and fringes alone are 84 percent of the budget, which gives us very little to work with."

The schools system's current fund balance is $1.6 million, not accounting for the half-million dollars Janik anticipates pulling from it.

"If we continue losing 30 students a year, because we graduate more than we're taking in, that's a quarter of a million right there, and expenses are increasing," Janik said. "We're getting less state aid, we're losing students, we're dealing with increased health care, food services, transportation costs."

He added, "I have total respect for the teachers and the job they do. We have outstanding test scores; by all measures the students do very well, but financially we can't continue the path we're on."

Conway said there are no plans for a teacher strike at this time. So, for now, it appears as though both sides will continue collective bargaining.

"We love our jobs and have been quite willing to return to work this year even though it's the first time since 1993 that we've done so without a contract," she stated. "Again, I'm cautiously optimistic that we will reach an agreement of compromise that fairly compensates our staff while also taking our district's finances into account."

either," he added.

The rumor about season passes on sale for last year's price is true. On October 22-23, McSuaba Mountain will have their winter sale of not only equipment, but on passes as well. During these two days, people can purchase season passes at the old price of $80 for one person or $150 for two.

A rope pull is also in the works for McSuaba. However, due to costs of the groomer, the rope pull will not be put in until next year.

"We just didn't have enough money this year. But it will be there next year for sure," Boss said.

With all the new additions, McSuaba Mountain has paid out about $231,000 this year.

Other new additions include a new terrain park, wireless internet, and video cameras. The cameras will allow parents to watch their children while they are on the hills.

Approximately 6,000 people use McSuaba each year. Boss said this number does not represent 6,000 people, it represents 6,000 usages.

Boss said, "Come check it out. It's going to be great this year."

might not be as willing to brave treacherous winter highways.

It previously cost senior citizens — those 60 and older — 50 cents to ride less than 15 miles one way; a dollar one way for anything over 15 miles within the county; and $3 one way outside the county.

While a couple dollars may not sound like much money to some, Johnson said it can be a serious strain on the budget of a senior with a fixed income.

In addition to free rides anywhere within the county for grocery shopping, hair appointments, medical exams, banking, entertainment or just visiting a friend or loved one, seniors may now take advantage of free rides to Petoskey, Gaylord and Traverse City for doctor appointments.

Just call the transit service from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday throug Friday at (231) 582-6900 extensio 0 to make an appointment to h picked up.

In-town rides, according to trans officials, don't need quite as muc advanced warning, but seniors mu call as soon as possible to sched ule rides to out-of-county appoin ments.

"I think this is a fantastic opportu nity," said Charlevoix County Boar of Commissioners Chairman Chri Christensen. "Think of the world c opportunity that opens up for ther now. They can go different place they maybe didn't want to drive r before."

He added, "I hope they take ad vantage of this program while it' available because, like anythin else, if it goes unused, it will likel disappear."

The full cost of this program i being funded by the Charlevoi County Senior Millage.

Newbies seek to dethrone incumbent

Forum features 105th district candidates Kevin Elsenheimer, Connie Saltonstall and Greg Dean

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Who will be your voice in Lansing?

Candidates for the 105th Michigan State House seat are Charlevoix Democrat Connie Saltonstall, Elmira Libertarian Greg Dean and incumbent Kevin Elsenheimer (R-Kewadin) who will answer questions from the audience and moderator at 2 p.m., Sunday Oct. 26 at Charlevoix Public Library, 220 West Clinton St.

"Jobs and health care" said the 63-year-old Democrat, are the two most important issues facing Michiganders.

"I think it's important for the state to have a vision of how to rebuild jobs, and I believe reinventing the auto industry to manufacture more economical, fuel-efficient cars that utilize renewable energy is the way to do that," Saltonstall said. "And, I support universal health care and think it's done best at a national level, but if they don't do that, then I think the state should be involved in the process of creating it."

Saltonstall is also a proponent of responsible management of the environment, a supporter of keeping public education public.

"I am endorsed by the Sierra Club and the Michigan League of Conservation Voters put out a scorecard on legislators for 2005/2006 and Elsenheimer voted against them 75 percent of the time," she said. "He also supports (school) vouchers; and vouchers for private schools takes money away from public education."

In addition, Saltonstall is in favor of an equitable minimum wage which, she pointed out, Elsenheimer voted against.

The Democrat has concern, too, that Elsenheimer is running for a final term for the wrong reasons.

"He said he wanted to be a

Closing up shop

Charlevoix Manufacturing Co. closes after three decades

CHRISTINA ROHN
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

After nearly 30 years in business, Charlevoix Manufacturing Company is closing its doors.

The aluminum foundry machine shop — which specializes in the production of aluminum castings needed for various industries including automotive, heavy truck, robotics and decorative — will cease its operations within the next two months.

Jim Hater, president of Charlevoix Manufacturing Company, points to a slumping automotive market and outsourcing as the reasoning behind their downfall.

"We've watched about 70 percent of our business be taken off-shore; basically to China, India and some to Indonesia," Hater said. "The flood of American jobs being taken away really disturbs me."

Hater said nearly three years ago, when business was good, the company employed 85 people.

Now, after two years of gradual cutbacks, the company's remaining 17 employees will be out of a job.

"We tried hard to diversify our product line and we had some success, but I guess just not enough," Hater said. "We are all deeply saddened by the whole thing — we just hate to lose them."

Hater said his employees will be forced to start over.

"There is no real severance (package)," he said. "Between unemployment and Michigan Works, there's many opportunities out there, hopefully (our employees) can take advantage of all of them."

Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel said this closing will have a profound impact on the Charlevoix community.

"It's certainly another devastating blow, not only to the city, but to the northern Michigan region," he said. "We're not unique to this, it's been happening all across the nation. The overall manufacturing sector has taken a hit with outsourcing overseas."

Straebel added, "Certainly our sympathies go out to the employees and families of (Charlevoix Manufacturing Co.) and we will do everything we can to get these people back to work."

Hater said the fate of the 20,000 square-feet manufacturing building is unknown.

Rohn can be reached by e-mail at crohn@petoskeynews.com.

Evictions

Despite the recent onslaught of gloomy economic news, two area sheriffs say their deputies have not yet seen a notable increase in the number of evictions they are handling.

Both Emmet County Sheriff Pete Wallin and Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said their deputies handle a few evictions each month, but those numbers haven't changed significantly recently.

Lasater said evictions in Charlevoix County have been on a slow increase for several years. He said in 2007 his office handled 99 evictions and deputies have handled 93 so far this year. Emmet district court officials said records show 59 evictions in 2006, 79 in 2007 and 79 so far in 2008.

Recently, sheriffs in the Chicago area's Cook County and Michigan's Genesee County have instituted moratoriums on processing some evictions. In both cases, the moratoriums were for situations in which renters were being evicted from foreclosed homes.

Both Wallin and Lasater said they have no plans to modify their eviction practices, especially since very few of the evictions they handle involve situations where a renter is being evicted because of a foreclosure.

Regardless of the reason behind it, an eviction is a multi-step process that does not happen overnight.

According to the Michigan Poverty Law Program's www.MichiganLegalAid.org Web site, eviction is a multi-step process that starts with the landlord serving notice of his or her intent to take possession of the property.

If the tenant doesn't voluntarily leave, the landlord must file an action for eviction in the district court. In such a suit, the court will schedule a hearing at which both sides can plead their cases. If the court finds in favor of the landlord the tenant will be ordered to move within 10 days. If the tenant still doesn't move then the court can issue an order giving the sheriff permission to physically remove the tenant and all his or her possessions and place them on the street.

Court officials say the process for evicting people who have not paid their rent is essentially the same as for renters who are being evicted because of a foreclosure.

School Board meeting

The following actions were taken by the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education during their Oct. 13 meeting.

Items: District Steering Committee Chairman, fiber optic bids, energy systems contract, field trips for physics, Spanish classes and baseball team; Rosemary Dixon was approved as the new assistant for Bright Beginnings, four part-time bus driver hires and an extended maternity leave request.

In brief: Following the meeting, the board went into closed session for discussion of the pending labor contract. The issue has yet to be resolved.

Board action: All votes were in support and were unanimous.

Various reports which did not require board action included an audit report by Angie Roeloffs, personal curriculum by the Char-Em ISD, building reports, a strategic plan update by Scott Mays and board goals by John McLean, school board president.

The next meeting is 7 p.m., Nov. 10 at Charlevoix Middle School.

DNR announces Arbor Day mini grant applications available

Applications are now available for Michigan's Arbor Day Mini Grant program.

These grants are funded through the USDA Forest Service, State and Private Forestry Program.

The purpose of the Arbor Day Mini Grant program is to highlight Arbor Day and the role that trees and forests play in our everyday lives. Grants of up to $200 may be requested for planting trees on public lands, hosting an Arbor Day celebration or purchasing natural resource-related materials for libraries.

Local units of government (city, township, village), public educational institutions (K-12, college, university), public libraries, non-profit organizations, neighborhood organizations 501(c)3 or equivalent), churches and tribes are eligible to apply.

Fifty grants will be awarded through a random selection process. All grants require matching funds equal to the awarded amount.

Matching funds may include cash contributions or in kind services, but may not include federal funds. Grant money will be paid upon project completion. Grant projects must be completed by June 30, 2009.

Visit the "Grants and Assistance" section of the DNR's Urban Forestry Web site at www.mi.gov/dnrucf to download the application and guidelines.

To receive an application packet by mail, please contact Kevin Sayers at (517) 241-4632 or sayersk@mi.gov

To be considered for funding, completed grant applications must be received by Nov. 13.

Faxes, e-mails and late applications will not be accepted.

Secretary Land's enhanced license plan earns approval from federal authorities

Agreement signing clears way for spring '09 availability

Michigan motorists will have the option next year of applying for an enhanced driver's license that also meets tougher federal document requirements at America's borders, Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land announced today.

Land and U.S. Department of Homeland Security officials met in Detroit to sign a memorandum of agreement and a business plan that pave the way for Michigan's enhanced license program. Business, municipal and political leaders as well as members of the general public enthusiastically support Land's initiative, citing its convenience for drivers and its ability to keep cross-border commerce flowing smoothly.

"This is a victory for Michigan families and job providers," Land said. "It offers motorists an affordable, single-document option that meets their driving and border crossing needs. Equally important, it allows commerce between Michigan and Canada to continue uninterrupted. I applaud the U.S. Department of Homeland Security for being an outstanding partner and the Detroit Regional Chamber for its leadership. With their support and the efforts of all others involved, we're balancing customer and economic needs with our shared goal of a safer America."

In June 2005, Land proposed the creation of a driver's license that also could be used in lieu of a passport, making it easier for residents of border states to meet federal Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative (WHTI) requirements for entry into the United States through land and sea ports of entry. State legislation authorizing Land's department to pursue the enhanced driver's license plan with federal officials was passed in February 2008.

"With this agreement, Michigan's leadership has shown both its innovative spirit and its commitment to national security," said DHS Assistant Secretary for Policy Stewart Baker. "The state enhanced driver's license will bolster security through advanced technology, and at the same time it will make travel faster and easier."

Richard T. Blouse Jr., president and chief executive officer of the Detroit Regional Chamber, explained that the availability of enhanced licenses is a crucial step if southeast Michigan is to expand its role as an international trade center.

"Today's agreement is vital to the Detroit region's prosperity because it keeps the borders open and secure for tourism and business," Blouse said. "The new license protects $100 million in economic activity in the region each year by making it more convenient for people to cross the border. We were proud to work with the Michigan Secretary of State and Department of Homeland Security on this important initiative that balances national security with economic security."

Under WHTI, all travelers – including U.S. citizens - will need to produce a passport or approved secure document to enter the country by land or sea as of June 1, 2009. Today's agreement is a move toward making Michigan's enhanced license an approved secure document that denotes identity and citizenship. Because passports cost in the neighborhood of $100 and take weeks to receive, Land was concerned that providing no alternative would discourage people from crossing the Michigan-Canada border for business and tourism.

Michigan's enhanced licenses and state-issued enhanced ID cards will be voluntary and available only to Michigan residents who also are U.S. citizens. While the actual cost has yet to be determined, the law limits it to not more than $50. Michigan will continue offering its standard driver's license as well.

Enhanced licenses will be available at all Secretary of State SUPER!Centers and other select branch offices beginning next spring.

Primary sponsors of the Michigan legislation are Sen. Cameron Brown, R-Sturgis; Rep. Steve Tobocman, D-Detroit; and Rep. Ed Clemente, D-Lincoln Park.

The laws require:

Security measures to protect against unauthorized disclosure of personal information.

Applicants to provide documentation demonstrating their U.S. citizenship, full legal name, Social Security number and other information.

That a person making a false certification or statement when applying for an enhanced license or ID card be guilty of a felony punishable by up to five years in prison.

OPINIONS yours & ours

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances

All about the party people

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

It is commonplace to refer to those holding political office in our country as public servants or being in public service. It is worth re-examining what that means.

To be elected to public office usually requires the support of a major political party. But after the election, that relationship must change. One does not serve the public by serving only the part that includes their political party, or its particular ideology.

An officeholder is not the president of the Democratic party, the mayor of the Republican party, or the governor of the Socialist party.

Once elected, an honest office holder is pledged to be the servant of all the public, even those who voted against them.

We provide officeholders with what may be enormous power in return for the promise to be a public servant, and to uphold the Constitution.

The Constitution says in its preamble, "We the people of the United States."

It does not say, "We, the Democrats" or "We the Republicans" or "We the Libertarians."

Sometimes that power is used by an officeholder as personal power to serve themselves.

President Nixon had an enemies list.

Those names were not enemies of the people, of the public, but enemies of Richard Nixon.

On occasion, other holders of public office apparently think that the purpose of high office is to ensure the continued power of their own political party.

Our President is not the president of the Republicans or the conservatives or the liberals or the religious right. He or she is the president of "We, the people…."

We rightly condemn those who personally benefit financially from high office. We even send a few of them to prison.

But those who use high office specifically to benefit their political party are usually immune to such legal charges.

We may even applaud such activity as justified and allowable.

I would suggest that, when someone uses high office to advance their particular ideology, we might at least mention publicly that they are not, in those instances, serving the people.

They may be serving their political race, but they are not serving the people.

Serving the people is difficult and complex.

WEEKLY POLL

Do you support the legalization of medical marijuana?

Go online to vote! charlevoixcourier.com

Yes 53 votes; No 24 votes

This week's poll question: Do you support the state's deer season ban on baiting?

There is the problem for a legislator of serving their constituents. For a holder of national office, the dual concern of serving constituents in their state and serving all the people of the nation is certainly troublesome and probably few can manage it consistently.

Next time you are evaluating contenders for political office and listening to what they are proposing or promising, consider which of the candidates is most likely to be a true public servant, not the servant of a political party or a faction.

Work for, and vote to elect, real public servants, not those who will only serve a specific ideology or political party.

County-wide millage only way to fix roads

With so many of the taxes we pay going to the state and federal governments, it's nice to know the voters still have a chance to determine how some of their money will be spent right here in Charlevoix County.

We once again find the Charlevoix County-wide Road Millage up before the voters, and once again we're voting yes on the road millage.

And, just as in 2006, the State of Michigan has no concrete plan for doling much-needed cash for Charlevoix's crumbling roads.

We understand that Representative Kevin Elsenheimer spearheaded language in MDOT's budget which instructs the department of transportation to evaluate whether it should bring Boyne City-Charlevoix Road under its jurisdiction—a move which could possibly, in the future, designate the road as a state highway—but these are too many sorta, ifs and maybes.

While the state continues to change its vague intention of designating minuscule funds to a fraction of Charlevoix County roads—they might fund repairs for Division Street in Boyne City by 2010, and four miles of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road by 2012 or 2013—the millage proposal would generate enough revenue over its 15-year life cycle to repair or replace nearly 30 percent of highways and byways; An estimated $2,059,124 would be generated in 2009 alone.

Granted, the cities within Charlevoix County will keep their respective millage money generated for their own roads, but we don't see any other way to avoid this crumbling of infrastructure

The total reconstruction slated by the road commission, if this measure passes would be 3.79 miles of Ellsworth Road, 5.59 miles of Boyne City-Charlevoix from Nelson to Pincherry and 8.14 miles of Boyne City-Charlevoix from Pincherry to Western Avenue.

Repair and replacement of damaged road sections, also known as a wedge and overlay, is slated for the following roads: 6.39 miles of Camp Ten, 5.45 miles of Springvale, 3.38 miles of Six Mile Lake, 4.04 miles of Kings Highway on Beaver Island, 3.47 miles of Deer Lake, 2.65 miles of Korthase, 2.2 miles of River, 7.12 miles of Marion Center, 1.76 miles of Norwood, 1.5 miles of Peninsula, 1.97 miles of Ferry, 2.59 miles of Slashing and 1.3 miles of Chandler Hill.

This leaves us with two choices: Refuse to fund local road construction and watch the lifeline of business, homeland security and recreation die while waiting for the state to, maybe, fund five miles of road, or buck and pay up and see more than 61 miles of local asphalt brought up to snuff.

If you would like to help make a difference even before voting on Nov. 4, you can support the Friends of Charlevoix County Roads who need to raise approximately $2,000 to purchase road signs, advertising and other promotional materials to help get the word out on this important issue.

APPLE FEST OR DOG FEST?

Editor:

I am at a total a loss.

It was my understanding that dogs are not to be permitted in our beautiful park during our special events.

There were signs at each end of the park which stated that dogs were not allowed, but when I checked today, they were gone. I had heard that there was a lot of whining from dog owners that their little poochy could not accompany them in the park, but I understood it was OK'd only if they picked up after them and when there was not a special event.

I guess whining works because the signs were no longer, but the dogs were.

This was probably the best Apple festival that I have ever been witness to, but I was totally flabbergasted when I took my sister and her husband, who were visiting from Ohio, around this impressive park and was embarrassed by all of the canines.

We encountered 30 to 40 dogs of every shape and size; one that was as big as a horse almost knocked my 70-plus-year-old sister down when it ran into her.

These inconsiderate owners were completely unaware that people have to trip over leashes, go around these dogs, get nuzzled, run into and we even had to step over dog (feces) on the sidewalks.

It was disgusting to see, not only the piles, but also tracks where people had stepped in it and tracked it several feet in all directions.

I like dogs as pets, but they do not belong in this beautiful park when we have these special events, period.

I hope that the powers that be take heed to this problem and make arrangements to have our park dog free during our special events.

OBAMA'S TAX PLAN

Editor:

A recent writer attacked Barak Obama's tax plan by claiming that owners of small subchapter S businesses would see a huge tax increase if their combined business and personal income exceeded $250,000 by so much as a penny. Wrong!

Under subchapter S, business income passes to the owner-shareholders in proportion to the percentage of the business they own; but so does their share of all the corporate deductions and tax credits. They must pay themselves a reasonable salary for work they do in the business and pay FICA (social security) like any other wage earner, but only on that salary — not on the income distributed to their shares. The distributed income is taxed by IRS at the individual rate rather than the higher corporate rate. If, after deducting all the costs of operating their business, the combination of their salary and distributed business income exceeds $250,000 then, hooray. They are better off than approximately 98 percent of the families in the country.

Barak Obama's tax plan keeps the existing marginal rate for families making less than $250,000 and for individuals making less than $200,000 – while offering tax cuts for saving, education, mortgage costs and child care. The marginal tax rates for income exceeding the [illegible]ounts would revert to at or [illegible]w what they were in the 1990s. The tax rates

RECLAIM THE AMERICAN DREAM

Editor:

The 2008 election may well be the most important of our lifetime.

At stake is the future of marriage and other core values that have provided a sure foundation for our Nation since it's founding and our very culture hangs in the balance.

This November, we all have a moral duty to elect leaders who will advance our shared core values.

If one candidate will appoint judges who will undermine our faith, destroy innocent human life and deconstruct marriage, while another candidate will appoint judges who will carefully deliberate and not legislate from the bench, then our mandate is clear. We don't need a pundit to lead us on such issues, nor should we follow a modern-day Pied Piper because he's "cool" or can wow a crowd.

And we must never get discouraged because discouragement is the precursor of defeat.

The tactics of spiritual warfare have not changed since the dawn of time and our adversary can be counted upon to try to mentally intimidate us into submission.

Never listen to someone who says, "give up."

The dream of the founders was an experiment in self-government that presumed the governed would be moral people.

That morality, the founders felt, would spring from shared Christian values and was the reason why George Washington called "religion and morality" the twin pillars of American government.

We all have clear choices when voting our values, and in reality, there are just four choices available to us in any election.

We can: (1) Vote for the person who will best advance our values, (2) Vote for a person who will destroy our values, (3) vote for a person who cannot win, or, (4) Not vote at all. When we consider these choices, we must concede that choices (3) and (4) are not really viable and are actually equivalent to a vote for the person who will destroy our values.

The conclusion is inescapable: Our shared values compel us to vote for the person who will best advance them and we must stop halting between two opinions.

With unshakable faith, we can reclaim the dream.

AFTERNOON IN NORWOOD

Editor:

"An Afternoon in Norwood", held August 31, brought a crowd of over 300 to our village for a celebration of old-fashioned fun, with music, games, ice cream, raffles, auctions and walking tours.

Local artisans donating their crafts included Chris Abramowski, Don Binns, Jim DePriest, Rita Hess, Jo Moffitt, Marcia Moore, Yasmin Richmond, Marion Shea-Light, Dwain Martin, Sylvia Walworth, Matt Zabik and Toni Zello.

The batik king-size quilt fashioned by the Norwood Needles sold out all 3,000 tickets and was shipped to the winner in England.

Auctions, raffles and other events combined to raise close to $9,000 towards the renovation of the Norwood Area Historical Society Schoolhouse headquarters.

We appreciate the donations of the many merchants that contributed greatly to our success.

Thank you all so much for helping make this event so successful.

VOTE "YES" ON PROP' 2

Editor:

Proposal 2 on the November ballot would update a highly restrictive 1978 law which was the panicky reaction of our state legislature to the news that the world's first "test tube baby" was born.

Decades later, the 1978 law is being used to roadblock modern medical research that is hopeful of curing some of mankind's worst diseases, such as diabetes, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's.

The blocked research is human embryonic stem cell research (ESCR).

Scientists are eager to do research on embryonic stem cells because they have the adaptability to replace human tissue in all parts of the body.

People who oppose ESCR do so because of their religious beliefs.

Some religions say human life must be protected from the moment of conception, but other religions differ.

There is actually a wide range of views on ESCR by religion. Many religions consider it sinful to throw out tissue that could have been used to help mankind. Some religious people who are very active politically took a view that should have remained a private belief and turned it into a state law. That law is now holding back medical progress in the 21st Century.

Here are some reasons you should support this ballot proposal to help ESCR:

(1) Proposal 2 says embryonic stem cells used for medical research in Michigan must be taken from a fertility clinic, using an unwanted fertilized egg that was initially created for in vitro fertilization. Fertility clinics normally create more fertilized eggs than needed by the donor couple, to give the best chance of a successful pregnancy and have embryos available for future use.

At some point, the biological parents will have extra embryos they no longer need. In most states, the biological parents have the option of donating those embryos to medical research—but not in Michigan.

Here, we have a law that deprives donors of the right to use embryos for improving the human condition, instead leading to them being flushed down the sink as medical waste. Given that the choice is between the drain and the research laboratory, it is extremely hard to see how discarding embryos can be viewed as the morally superior use.

(3) If the word "embryo" makes you picture a human-looking little guy the size of the end of your thumb, you are picturing an embryo that is about eight weeks old and about to become a fetus. Research is permitted only on embryos that are 14 days old or less, cell groups smaller than the head of a pin.

(4) Michigan taxpayers won't be paying for ESCR, because the state is in economic difficulties and the political climate here won't support state funding. Federal money will come into Michigan; both presidential candidates support ESCR funding.

(5) We will have oversight of ESCR research from institutional review boards and the National Institutes of Health.

(2) Human cloning is not mentioned in Proposal 2 and remains illegal in Michigan. Any statement that claims Proposal 2 will allow weird human-animal creatures to be created in the laboratory is a total falsehood, used to scare you into voting against the ballot proposal.

Please unfetter 21st century medical research in Michigan by voting yes on Proposal 2.

Autumn, Arts and Apples

Apple Festival included outdoor exhibitions by the Charlevoix Circle of Arts which hosted a plein air event. Seven artists painted at various locations around town. At the end of the day, artists and patrons gathered at the Circle of Arts, 109 Clinton St. for refreshments, camaraderie, a jazz music trio and art. Artist Kevin Barton, recent winner of a Detroit Institute of Arts commission, won "Best of Show." His painting entitled "The Gardens of Lake Michigan Beach" was purchased. The proceeds benefitted the nonprofit organization. A $100 scholarship will be awarded by The Circle of Arts, in Barton's name, to a graduating Charlevoix High School senior interested in a career in the arts. The gallery is open to the public, Tuesday though Sunday, noon to four pm. The current "The Color of Northern Michigan" exhibit is featuring local artist's interpretations of the autumn season. Ragamuffins: angel in flight

Ragamuffin Theatre & Company will be presenting a musical titled "Angel Flight 777" Saturday through Sunday, Oct. 25-27, at the United Methodist Church in Charlevoix.

An experienced cast of both youth and adults will be working together again following their June performance at the Big Ticket Festival in Gaylord.

"'Angel Flight 777' speaks to the heart of those searching for truth," says director Kathleen Whittaker. "It's intense, emotionally gripping, and truly inspirational."

Shauna Bradley, a junior at Charlevoix High School and longtime Ragamuffin member, will perform the lead role in a modern-day version of Jesus' account of Lazarus and the rich man. Supporting her will be veteran actor Ron Schmidt from Elk Rapids portraying Lazarus, as well as comedic actors Abby Wilhelm and Kathryn Sell, both sophomores at Charlevoix High School.

"Angel Flight" features modern, lyrical and jazz choreography as well as several contemporary musical numbers including Madonna's "More."

Seating will be limited so those interested in attending are encouraged to arrive on time. Saturday and Monday shows start at 7 p.m., and Sunday's performance will begin at 6 p.m. Admission is free, but donations are appreciated.

As host, the United Methodist Church will provide home-baked refreshments, coffee and punch.

"Angel Flight" is a PG rated production, and parents are encouraged to leave small children at home.

For more information, contact www.RagamuffinTheatre.com, or call 237-9686.

Tips for Preventing Falls

BY TRACEY RUPINSKI, RN BA

In life we can expect a few things to fall: brilliant leaves in autumn, a summer raindrop and in these days the stock market.

We look forward to most of these things, but a person in their golden years falling is not so golden.

This will be a short series on six ways to reduce your fall risk.

Each month you will receive information on how to keep your home and your loved one safe.

Don't let life pass you by because you have a fear of falling, take the steps provided and enjoy your independence.

Fall Prevention Step One: Make an appointment with your physician.

Any good plan should start with your health care provider.

Your doctor can review your medication for side effects and interaction that may be increasing your risk for falls.

Sedatives, anti-depressants and anti psychotic drugs can contribute to reduced mental alertness and falls.

If you have fallen before, write down all the details and facts.

This should include when, where and how you fell. Also, include the details of how you felt before you fell and if you noticed anything different in your daily routine.

Try to think about what and when your last meal was and if you were well hydrated.

Hydration and nutrition can have a profound effect on blood sugar l and blood pressure levels.

Your doctor will also want to discuss your overall health, especially eye and ear disorders that may increase your risk for falls.

Also, be ready to describe any dizziness, joint pain numbness or shortness of breath that affect you're walking.

Your doctor may then evaluate your muscle strength, balance and gait.

Statistic to think about: The risk of falling increases every year after age 65 and is greater for women than men.

Shame serves no purpose

BY STEPHEN GUTHRIE
'FAITHFUL SERVANT'

In the last column we took up the topics of guilt and shame and how debilitating those two toxic emotions can be to the human spirit.

Guilt, we said, was a natural response to our own wrongdoing that springs out of our innate sense of right and wrong.

In the typical progression, guilt results in shame and shame leads to a sense of worthlessness, and even to self-loathing.

Guilt, we said, has the potential to lead us someplace good if it causes us to experience a godly sorrow.

That sincere regret in turn leads us to turn away from the bad and seek the good.

In the case of the follower of Christ, that means becoming aware that our actions were wrong (called "conviction" in church-speak), admitting to God that you see things his way (confession), turning back to God with a sincerely regretful heart (repentance), and receiving forgiveness (restoration).

The eventual outcome is a strengthened relationship between ourselves and God.

For the non-believer who experiences guilt and the shame that usually travels with it, they choose to bear that burden alone.

That's an unfortunate but all-too-common choice.

In the counseling office we separate guilt and shame.

Mistakes and sin are part of the human experience, and guilt is part of a universal law of accountability. But shame is the wild card that can move us closer to God or cause us to withdraw.

While guilt can lead us someplace good, there is nothing healthy or productive about the shame that follows. Sometimes that shame keeps us from accepting God's forgiveness and moving on with the day.

And because sometimes the evidence of our particular mistake is there for anyone to see, we don't fully engage with life because of a belief that everyone knows and every tongue is wagging.

Here are several forms of "bad shame" that are particularly harmful to the human heart.

It is not mentally or spiritually healthy when we feel shame for things that are not necessarily bad, or things that are not necessarily anyone's fault.

We should not feel shame for experiencing normal human emotions like anger or sadness, although we could become embarrassed or ashamed of our conduct when those normal emotions run amok.

Likewise, we should feel no shame over conditions beyond our control, such as depression or a physical or mental disability.

We should not feel shame about our basic selves, the way we look and the way our basic temperament is wired.

We should not feel ashamed of our station in life, the importance of our job, or the depth of our resources.

We should not feel shame for things that are normal and pleasurable parts of the human experience, including appropriate and healthy sexual relations.

And certainly we should not be burdened with shame over those parts of our current situation or our past that can't be changed.

No matter how hard we try we are never going to have a different family.

And no matter how deep the regret we are never going to have a better past.

We should feel no shame over abuse we have suffered at the hands of others.

The shame should be entirely in the heart of the abuser.

Those of us who have endured any of the many and varied forms of abuse did not do anything to deserve that treatment, and there is no shame in being a victim.

Finally, we should not feel shame if we have experienced abandonment. There is no more profound wounding of the human spirit than to be abandoned by the people in life who are supposed to love us. It leads the one who is abandoned to believe they have no worth, that the person they are is a disposable person and has no inherent value that deserves loving just for who they are.

Shame serves no purpose.

It never results in meaningful, lasting change (which is one big reason why it should have no place in disciplining our children.)

For the non-believer shame can be just part of the burden of guilt they elect to lug through life.

But for the believer holding on to shame, now is time to lay it down. Jesus has already made provision for that. In Him you will find no condemnation, only an outstretched hand wanting to help you up and free you of that weight.

Counseling can help, but only to teach you some tricks to make it through the night. To really speak to the wounded spirit the path is healing prayer. Our trained prayer ministers would like to help you move beyond shame and get on with life.

Steve Guthrie directs Christian Counseling Services, a Christian counseling and healing prayer center in Charlevoix.

Fire on Beaver Island

JULIE WITTHOEFT
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

BEAVER ISLAND — Flames consumed a pole building on Beaver Island Wednesday pulling the community together and ravaging a local business.

"Our business we've had for 40 years burned to the ground," Laura Gillespie, co-owner of Gillespie Enterprises, said.

Beaver Island fire chief Tim McDonough said firefighters were called to the building of Laura and Richard Gillespie at the corner of King's Highway and Barney Lake Road at about 5 p.m. to a report of flames coming from the warehouse, Gillespie Enterprises.

Laura said she and her husband run a construction and excavation business out of the pole building which is about 60 by 84 feet. She confirmed losses include multiple pieces of machinery including tractors, as well as a vehicle.

"There was an ungodly amount of machinery in there you can never replace. It was a long night," she said.

Laura said the building is a total loss.

Martin's Grocery Store is located behind the pole building and is a island propane distributor. Firefighters maintained the building's wall facing the store to halt the threat of the flames spreading.

"Everyone on the island responded," Laura said. "People were handing out water, Stoney Acres brought sandwiches to fire department guys there. That's what I love about living on Beaver Island."

The cause is unknown at this time. McDonough contacted a fire inspector to review the incident.

Rich Gillespie's pole building burns (above) at the corner of King's Highway and Barney's Lake Road on Beaver Island. No one was injured in this pole building fire, but it was a toal loss. The fire occured nearly 50 feet from an industrial sized propane tank, but the Beaver Island Fire Department was able to construct a fire break to prevent the tank from being threatened. The fire began the afternoon of Oct. 15 and blazed well into the night.

Radon test kits available at no charge

Health Department of Northwest Michigan is distributing radon test kits at no charge in observance of National Radon Action Week, October 19-25. Scott Kendzierski, Director of Environmental Health, encourages residents of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties to pick up a radon kit and test their homes during the coming heating season.

Radon is a tasteless, odorless, colorless radioactive gas. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer in the country, surpassed only by tobacco use.

"Fortunately, exposure to radon gas can be easily detected with a radon testing kit," said Kendzierski. "If homeowners discover elevated radon levels in the home, Health Department staff is available for consult to help homeowners resolve the problem," he said.

Radon occurs naturally in soil and rock, but being a gas, it can move upward through the soil and enters buildings through cracks and openings in the foundation floor or walls. Typical entry points include floor/wall joints, sump openings, crawlspaces, cracks in the floor, and other penetrations caused by plumbing, wiring, or ductwork.

"Radon is diluted outdoors by the atmosphere, but indoors it tends to be more concentrated and can accumulate to unhealthy levels," Kendzierski said. "Because it is invisible and can't be smelled, radon is easy to ignore—it doesn't cause headaches, nausea, fatigue, skin rashes, or other warning symptoms."

Testing is easy and, during National Radon Action Week, free. The do-it-yourself kits are available at Health Department offices in Bellaire, Charlevoix, Petoskey/Harbor Springs, and Gaylord. After National Radon Action Week, test kits are $15 including postage to an out-of-state laboratory as well as the lab testing and report mailed back to the homeowner.

According to Kendzierski, 20.4 percent of the samples tested throughout the Health Department's four-county health district over the past year indicate results above the EPA recommended action guideline of four picocuries per liter. Maps of radon results by county are posted on the agency's website. But Kendzierski is quick to add, "the only way to know if your home has an elevated radon level is to test your home."

Radon Action Week is an annual commemorative event initiated in 1990 by Congressional Resolution and later incorporated into National Indoor Air Quality Month, which takes place every October.

Radon Action Week serves to encourage Americans to test their homes for radon, and if necessary, take action to reduce their exposure.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality healthcare, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties.

Studies show diabetes linked to gum disease, tooth decay recognize National Dental Hygiene Month by learning your risk

If you've been diagnosed with diabetes, it's important to pay extra attention to your oral health.

Studies show those with diabetes are two to three times more likely to develop periodontal (gum) diseases and are also more likely to have tooth decay and oral infections. You can recognize National Dental Hygiene Month this October by getting your oral health checked by your dentist and learning the link between diabetes and gum disease.

Periodontal disease is an inflammatory disease that destroys the connective tissue supporting the teeth, possibly leading to tooth loss and decay.

Periodontal disease is more prevalent, progresses more rapidly, and is often more severe in individuals with both type 1 and type 2 diabetes. Not only are people with diabetes more at risk for gum disease, those with gum disease may find it more difficult to control their blood glucose level.

A combination of good oral hygiene and glycemic control can prevent a number of tooth and gum-related problems. In addition, proper care of the mouth and treatment of periodontal disease can help people with diabetes better control their condition.

For more information on diabetes and oral hygiene, contact your local diabetes educator by calling TIPDON, Northern Michigan's Diabetes Outreach Network, at (231) 237-9681 or visiting www.diabetesinmichigan.org.

E. coli outbreak in Emmet County

Public health officials are investigating the cause of an outbreak of E.coli in Emmet County. It is not known at this time if it is related to any of the recent E.coli infections confirmed in many states including Michigan. Four individuals have been diagnosed with a severe type of E. coli infection in the last week. All developed bloody diarrhea and dehydration and were hospitalized at Northern Michigan Regional Hospital for treatment.

Further testing of stool samples is underway to determine if the local cases are from the same strain that has caused at least 30 cases of E.coli in downstate Michigan, which has been linked to institutionally purchased iceberg lettuce. In addition to contaminated food (especially raw fruits and vegetables), E.coli can also be spread from poor hygiene, eating undercooked ground beef, drinking impure water, drinking unpasteurized milk, and working with cattle.

"Right now, we don't know if the outbreak is from person-to-person contact, a foodborne illness, or another source," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan.

Meyerson said Health Department staff are working to identify the source of E.coli in order to reduce the number of new cases. "We start our investigation by interviewing sick individuals. We ask them to try to remember every single thing they've eaten in the past several days. Common foods can sometimes point us to the problem."

One to eight days after you are infected, E.coli can cause severe abdominal cramps and bloody diarrhea. "Symptoms can also include fever, nausea, or vomiting. If you have these symptoms -- especially bloody diarrhea and abdominal cramps - call your health care provider right away," said Meyerson.

Good food safety practices can prevent E. coli and other foodborne illnesses. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention recommends:

- Washing hands with warm, soapy water for at least 20 seconds before and after handling raw meat and poultry
- Washing cutting boards, dishes and utensils with hot, soapy water and immediately cleaning spills.
- Keeping raw meat, fish and poultry away from other food that will not be cooked. Use separate cutting boards for raw meat, poultry and egg products and cooked foods.
- Eating ground beef or ground beef patties only after they are cooked to a safe internal temperature of 155°F measured for at least 15 seconds.
- Refrigerating raw meat and poultry within two hours after purchase or one hour if temperatures exceed 90°F and refrigerating cooked meat and poultry within two hours after cooking.

SOCIAL SECURITY
announces 5.8 percent benefit increase for 2009

Monthly Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits for more than 55 million Americans will increase 5.8 percent in 2009, the Social Security Administration announced today. The 5.8 percent increase is the largest since 1982.

Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits increase automatically each year based on the rise in the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W), from the third quarter of the prior year to the corresponding period of the current year.

This year's increase in the CPI-W was 5.8 percent.

The 5.8 percent Cost-of-Living Adjustment (COLA) will begin with benefits that over 50 million Social Security beneficiaries receive in January 2009.

Increased payments to more than 7 million Supplemental Security Income beneficiaries will begin on Dec. 31.

Some other changes that take effect in January of each year are based on the increase in average wages. Based on that increase, the maximum amount of earnings subject to the Social Security tax (taxable maximum) will increase to $106,800 from $102,000.

Of the estimated 164 million workers who will pay Social Security taxes in 2009, about 11 million will pay higher taxes as a result of the increase in the taxable maximum.

Information about Medicare changes for 2009 can be found at www.Medicare.gov.

harlevoix shuts ut Kalkaska in omecoming game

ARLEVOIX — Mi- Heckendorn rushed for ards on 15 carries and two touchdowns, while erback Clayton Mitchell added two TDs as the Rayders won their homecoming at ipke Field as Charlevoix honored its 1958 undefeated, unscoredupon state championship team.

The Rayders, 4-4 overall, 3-3 league, need a win in their reg-season finale on Friday, 24, at Harbor Springs, to keep remain in the hunt for a possible playoff spot.

"We keep our hopes alive," Charlevoix coach Don Jess said. "We know we have a huge game coming up in Harbor next week. If we win, there's a chance."

Jess said he was proud of his team's effort on Friday against Kalkaska, 0-8, 0-6.

"The kids did a good job with all the extracurricular stuff going on," he said. "They took care of business right away and I think having some of the guys from the 1958 team talk to them before the game helped."

Heckendorn scored on runs of 26 and 24 yards, while Mitchell added a 1-yard TD plunge and a 20-yard run, Brock Yenglin had a two-point conversion and Bill Foley kicked two extra points.

Jake Rankl made eight tackles, while Yenglin and Jon Putman each had an interception to lead Charlevoix's defense.

Timothy Wise takes over local ServiceMaster Don't Panic franchise

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

For 25 years Timothy Wise has worked in the disaster recovery industry performing everything from maintenance to full restoration of fire and water damage in disaster-riddled areas like New Orleans and the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew.

"We specialize in restoring houses back to homes," Wise said. "When we come into a project, we know the homeowner isn't use to this, but we do this every day, so before we even begin to mitigate any damages, we talk with the homeowner and see what is important to them: family heirlooms, antiques and other possessions."

He added, "Their home is their castle, so it is imperative to me that we respond quickly and keep the homeowner informed on a daily basis."

Wise said his company will respond to a customer within minutes, no matter the time of day or night.

Wise's business, headquartered out of Charlevoix, is one of more than 4,500 ServiceMaster franchises in the world.

Call them at (866) 936-6872 or 237-9660 24 hours a day or visit them on the Web at www.smdontpanic.com.

"The biggest thing we're focusing on is customer service," he said. "Not many companies are staffed and properly equipped and trained to handle large jobs, but we can pretty much handle from 100,000 square feet flood to a basic kitchen sink leak on carpeting."

Wise's business is one of 750 ServiceMaster outlets which has received a top of the industry rating for customer service and quality work.

Wise has been running this particular franchise since July with his co-owner R.F. Mazur.

judge and he filed for the court of appeals seat," she said, referring to Elsenheimer's decision earlier this year not to run for the 105th seat. "Then, when he changed his mind, or someone changed his mind, he said he was 'taking one for the party.'"

"Grasping at straws" is how the 43-year-old Republican described Saltonstall's vision of Elsenheimer's record.

"If you can't win, I guess you need to get personal," Elsenheimer said in response to his opponent's claims. "As for minimum wage, that is correct: I stopped at a Taco Bell, Walmart and McDonald's and couldn't find a single person making minimum wage, which told me the market was working and Lansing didn't need to interfere."

Elsenheimer said the school voucher issue was resolved nearly eight years ago when voters killed the measure in the voting booth, and added that the League of Conservation Voters was not supporting a single Republican candidate this cycle. "I'll let you draw your own conclusions on that one."

"There is one major issue and everything else is secondary to it: how do we maximize northern Michigan's position in the current economy and grow jobs," he said. "Lansing needs to create an environment where businesses can grow, and that means a competitive tax structure with our neighboring states; that means responsible and rational regulation, and lately those are two things we haven't seen from Lansing."

Elsenheimer said his record of 19 bills signed into law by a Democrat governor shows his ability to work in a bipartisan spirit, and added that, despite filing for the judgeship earlier this year, "Anyone who looks at my record knows I'm compassionate about this work and I'm excited about serving another two years."

The 44-year-old Libertarian's platform hinges on major change which he feels is needed in the realms of energy, education and the economy.

"I believe in less government and more freedom ... cutting spending and then taxes; cutting state regulation," he stated on his Web site. " I believe in your freedom to spend your hard-earned dollars on your family or business, and not on some politician's pet project; build a business, free of state interference; create jobs, free of State regulation and second-guessing; (and) be left alone."

Dean said during an interview that he will offer a fresh perspective, one free of partisan politics.

"I'd like to be endorsed by individuals and not special interest groups," he said. "If (the voters) are happy with the status quo, I urge them to vote for one of the other candidates. If they are serious about changing the way Michigan does business, they might want to look at a third party."

Dean has indicated that, if elected, he would fight what he refers to as eminent domain abuse, the monopolistic health service industry, the bloated public education system and wasteful state government.

"I'm socially liberal and fiscally conservative," he said in a June 23 Petoskey News-Review article. "Both Democrats and Republicans are two sides to the same coin. They both need big government. Libertarians believe in small government."

Issues such as the statewide ballot proposals, property taxes, health, the economy, and tourism incentives will be discussed.

DNR promotes safe and responsible use of Michigan's ORV trail system

Earlier this year, the DNR set aside 24 percent of the state's 3,200 miles of designated off-road vehicle trails for motorcycle use only. The land use order gives DNR law enforcement officers the authority to take action against individuals who are operating vehicles with more than two wheels, including ATVs, on the motorcycle only trails.

Michigan is known nationwide for its extensive off-road vehicle (ORV)trail system.

More than 3,200 miles of designated trail routes and 2,198 acres ofscramble areas are located throughout the state on state- and federallyowned forest lands.

Within Michigan's designated trail system, 24 percent are designatedand maintained for motorcycle use only, 50 percent are designated formotorcycles and all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) and 24 percent aredesignated as ORV routes -- open to ORVs of all sizes, including trucks,motorcycles and ATVs.

In addition to the designated ORV trail and route system, thousands ofmiles of state and national forest roads in the Upper Peninsula are opento ORV operation

But it's a new state law that allows northern Lower Peninsulacounties the option of opening the far right portion of their roadsand/or streets to ORV travel that is the biggest change in state ORVpolicy since the early 1990s.

Under the new law, only counties located in the northern LowerPeninsula and Upper Peninsula may open their roads to ORVs. Thisincludes Mason, Lake, Osceola, Clare, Gladwin, Arenac, Bay and anycounty north of those counties. Huron, Midland and Isabella counties arenot included. State and federal roads and highways are not included."It is important for all ORV enthusiasts to know they may not legallyoperate their ORV on a public street or road until the county, city,village or township approves a specific ordinance that allows it," saidSteve Kubisiak, recreation and trails program coordinator for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. "We encourage all riders tocontact the counties direct to determine the status of localordinances."

Kubisiak said the new law also voided previous agreements the DNR hadwith local governmental units in Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Montmorency,Iosco and Ogemaw counties that authorized existing state-designatedtrails to use county roads in order to connect trails together.

"We are working with the counties to reestablish these routes so trailusers will know exactly where they may safely and legally ride theirORV, particularly for those visitors who wish to ride into town topurchase fuel, food or find a place to stay for the night."

To assist ORV riders even further, the DNR has improved the quality andavailability of ORV maps, which can be accessed on the DNR's Web site atwww.michigan.gov/dnr under Recreation, Camping & Boating.

"These maps accurately represent the current trail system and will helpriders to stay on the trails," Kubisiak said.

Designated scramble areas include the Black Mountain Scramble Area inCheboygan County, St. Helen Motorsport Area in Roscommon County, BullGap Hill Climb in Oscoda County, Silver Lake State Park in Oceana Countyand the Mounds ORV Park in Genesee County.

Michigan's ORV trail program is 100 percent user pay, fundedexclusively from ORV licenses fees. An ORV license is required when anORV is operated on public trails, roads, designated scramble areas and frozen public waters. The fund is protected by the state constitutionand may be used only to pay for trail maintenance, new traildevelopment, law enforcement, safety education, and restoration ofdamage caused by illegal ORV use on public lands. A small percentagealso is set aside for administration.

The ORV trail maintenance program in Michigan is carried out by nonprofit clubs and public agencies that receive grants from the DNR

These trail sponsors are responsible for grooming, signing and brushing the trails.

"We rely on these partnerships to accomplish all of the on-the-ground work done by the groups who apply for and are awarded grants," Kubisiak said. "Proper maintenance of the designated trails is a vital component of the program."

The DNR spends approximately $1.6 million each year on the maintenance of existing designated trails. In addition, the DNR annually spends about $400,000 on restoring damage caused by illegal ORV use.

"Riding ORVs off designated trails and roads on public lands is illegal and can seriously damage the environment," Kubisiak said. "Riding through streams and wetlands can tear up the stream bed, river bank or wetlands, causing loss of habitat for fish and other aquatic wildlife species."

Riders should only cross streams where there is a bridge or culvert, he said.

"Illegal hill climbs are another major problem," Kubisiak added. "Some riders just can't resist the temptation to test their machines by climbing hills. This activity is okay if done in a designated riding area or trail where the impacts can be monitored and managed, but it is illegal otherwise. Illegal hill climbs create ugly scars and erosion on the forest landscape and can jeopardize future legal riding opportunities on public lands."

Riders and other forest recreation enthusiasts who observe illegal ORV use are encouraged to call the DNR's Report all Poaching hotline at (800) 292-7800

To help riders better understand what is safe and responsible riding and what is not, the DNR has published The Handbook of Michigan Off Road

Vehicle Laws, which is available from DNR Operations Service Centers and most ORV dealers. The publication also may be found online at www.offroad-ed.com/mi/handbook/laws.htm.

Pot, stem cells and economy top forum

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Candidates for the 105th Michigan House of Representatives District seat opined on ballot measures one and two, education, taxes and health Sunday, Oct. 26.

Charlevoix's newly reincarnated public library played host to Republican incumbent Kevin Elsenheimer, Democrat Connie Saltonstall and Libertarian Greg Dean as the moderator and audience questioned the three.

Saltonstall opened the forum by supporting Proposition II—a measure to allow embryonic stem cell research—saying it would be an incredible opportunity to promote health and well-being using cells which will otherwise be thrown away.

"Without the ability to do this kind of research we stand the potential for losing that type of research," she said. "Cloning is not an issue. Cloning will still be illegal. It will not cost the taxpayers any money."

Dean said, "To be against Proposal II is almost to be against the fertility clinics in general; ... I don't see it as an ethical issue."

Dean said he is against using tax dollars to fund any such measures, and said feels ballot proposals are divisive politics designed to polarize voters.

Elsenheimer disagreed with his rivals.

"An embryo is a life. And, as such, it's inappropriate to National attention for Charlevoix business

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

It was just any other business day until representatives of ABC's hit TV show "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition" said they wanted his product.

Mike Way's Pine River Inc., of Charlevoix, has been producing the e-log for four years now. And, while he has shipped his product from Canada to California, he never thought he would be on TV.

"They (ABC producers) selected a family for the makeover, and the mother's dream was to have a log home," Way said. "She realized that would probably not happen for them because they are heavily involved in caring for foster kids. But, they asked her what she wanted and she said something rustic, so the producers as well as the local builder in Ohio got on some of the projects on our (Web) site and they said that is the log look they wanted."

More lay-offs

CHRISTINA ROHN
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

St. Marys Cement Plant in Charlevoix announced Thursday that it would be laying off about 80 percent of its hourly workforce by Dec. 1.

The plant currently employs 100 hourly and 27 salary workers.

Steve Gallagher, vice president of human resources for St. Marys Cement Group, said their corporation anticipates the lay-off will last for one month.

"This is a temporary lay-off," he said. "We anticipate in early January we'll start bringing people back — we'll be bringing back most if not all."

Gallagher said this decision was made as a result of the slowing economy.

"It's economics driving this decision — there's a lack of demand for our product and we have excess inventory. Charlevoix's (problem), in part, is linked to the construction industry," he said. "It's in no way a reflection of people who work at the plant — we have great employees."

Gallagher said the situation in Charlevoix mirrors what is happening at several of their other locations.

Sweepstakes scam

Scams are not uncommon but Charlevoix county Sheriff George T. Lasater advises citizens to be aware of sweepstakes scams that have been circulating locally.

The letter "requests your immediate attention" stating that you have been entered in a "nationally recognized sweepstakes program … making you the individual chosen to receive (X) amount of dollars in cash and awards."

A check is enclosed, however a payment of $19.99 must be sent in to the sweepstakes office in order to receive "entry procedures."

When followed, "will provide 100 percent full eligibility for the monies/prizes."

In addition, an article release card is included stating that a parcel in your name is ready for pickup.

Only a $6.95 storage release fee must be remitted by credit card.

The Sheriff advises that, when you see letters like this, do not cash the checks, submit payment of any kind, and never submit personal information such as social security numbers, credit card numbers, etcetera in companies you are not certain of.

If you believe you have been the victim of a sweepstakes scam or ay other related scams, you may file a complaint with the FBI by going to the Web site www.fed.gov.

Deer alert

Charlevoix City Police Chief Gerard Doan asks people to use extra caution during this period of increased deer activity. Simply slowing down can be the difference between avoiding a car/deer crash and incurring potential expense and injury. Ensuring that your headlights are adjusted properly will help you see farther and wider down the road.

Is money or lack of it letting you down?

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

"Brother can you spare a dime": A popular song on the radio waves in 1931 during the Great Depression.

Today's song could be re-written with "Sister can you spare five bucks?"

Recession, depression whatever term you use whether it's considered accurate or not, people are losing jobs, homes and retirement benefits as well as health insurance.

Lessons we learned from our grandparents and parents should be put into effect. We need to consider buying in bulk, items on sale, using coupons and becoming resourceful. Children old enough to work and wanting an allowance could help the family or themselves by shoveling snow in the next few months, helping a neighbor with yard work, baby-sitting or selling newspapers.

Parents need to sit down and figure out how much comes in and how much goes out and then set up a plan.

When I am counseling couples about to get married, finances are the first topic covered since that is the number one reason cited for divorce in the United States today.

You may be a saver and your spouse a spender, or both of you savers , both of you spenders, and I bet at some point you went to bed angry arguing over bills regarding the financial situation you had been in or are presently in. With today's economy I am concerned about the number of couples heatedly discussing their finances.

Hopeful ideas, one household account and each spouse having their own account.

If you are a stay-at-home parent, your spouse should plan on putting equal amounts of spending money in each of your accounts.

Lessen arguments by knowing the history of your spouse regarding spending.

If one of you had very little growing up you'll have a tendency to spend more, wanting things you didn't have as a child and now feel as a grown up you deserve.

If you grew up in a household where money was not an issue you are apt to be cautious and saving for things the household account needs rather than things you want.

Just knowing this and trying to be understanding where your spouse is coming from financially will help lessen the tension.

Look for positives that each of you are doing and say something about it.

For the spender who is unhappy about the conservative spouse a comment such as , "I like the way you pay our bills on time" will lessen tension and show support.

When the spender passes up purchasing an item a comment from the saver may encourage them such as; "It's hard to stay on budget but you're doing a great job helping by passing this item up."

Discuss your spending plan at least once a month.

The one who pays the bills will feel better sharing their concern and the one who is the spender will feel less threatened if they know it's a planned topic that will occur rather than a shouting match in the heat of the moment.

When it comes to getting work done it's helpful to know the people with whom you are doing business.

Living in a community as small as ours its nice to know the job will be done well and if you are on the receiving end you can assuredly be paid in full soon after the service is rendered.

It's also important in these trying times to never borrow money without a plan of how you will pay it back.

Re-evaluate what you own before tossing it out.

We used to giggle when we saw our grandparents and parents washing aluminum foil and saving countless plastic butter containers reusing them again and again.

When cleaning dad's house before selling it we found reused tin foil, butter containers, jelly jars and bags stored neatly away because you never know when you might need them. We saw it as clutter and garbage; he saw it as useful items.

Now we recycle those very items so they can be utilized again in another fashion

What the country is going through now is pale in comparison to the crash of 1929 which is often referred to as "Black Tuesday" and whose anniversary is Oct. 29, 1929.

I asked dad what he was doing during this stressful time.

He was 13 years old and going door to door selling newspapers.

He recalls a man grabbing the paper from him and slamming the door without paying.

His own father was fortunate to find a job sorting various metals that were melted down for military use. We haven't hit a depression like the '30s and we won't let things get as bad as they did.

Many years ago John Rockefeller said something that still rings true: "These are the days when many are discouraged but during the 93 years of my life, depressions have come and gone and prosperity has always returned and will again."

My own philosophical take on this is: From hardship comes wisdom and creativity will blossom when finances are lacking

We are in this together, and together, with our can-do attitude, we will endure whatever we are faced with.

How to fight poverty: leaders at a loss

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Extra! Extra! There are poor people in Michigan.

According to a press release from the Michigan Department of Human Services, roughly 1.3 million Michiganders get food stamps annually.

Maybe you've heard, 300 Michigan residents including Governor Jennifer Granholm, at least one senator and the president of Grand Valley State University are spending a week attempting to "bring attention to the effects of poverty and increase donations to local food banks and soup kitchens.

Participants in the "Food Stamp Challenge"—my god, they make it sound like a game show—may donate time or money to a food bank or soup kitchen leading up to the Nov. 13 Action 2008 Poverty Summit.

I can't pass a hobo without scrounging a couple bucks to assuage the guilt of having a good job and stable home life, but I have real heartburn with the well-off playing poor.

Human services hasn't released specifics on what this is costing us, but assuming the participants aren't paying cash for the food stamps they use, I figure this little publicity stunt misdirects about $8,800 from people who actually need it.

Those of us who have either grown up poor or hit rough patches as adults know exactly what it's like to go without.

Granholm, according to an early October Associated Press story, said she was buying a lot of macaroni and cheese to feed her family with her $5.87 per person per day allowance, but she still lives in the governor's mansion with all her creature comforts.

You really want to give these people a taste of hunger and the horrors of poverty?

Let them bathe in cold water every day because the gas has been shut off;

Let them do nothing while their children die of pneumonia because they are afraid to incur hospital bills they could never repay;

Let them send their children to bed without food, knowing tomorrow won't be any better;

Let them live out of their car for a week;

Let them be evicted from their residence because their rent money went to pay the tickets incurred from driving a car with too loud a muffler or a broken windsheild—ironically items which they could not fix because they did not have the money to do so.

I know I run the risk of being ousted from the capitalist club. But, growing up as poor as I did, I have a real tough time turning a blind eye to those in need—or making a mockery of their suffering.

Some poverty is self-inflicted. I know that from experience. But, some is not.

And, while I don't suggest tax funded handouts for all, there has to be something we can do to decrease the number of those enduring abject deprivation.

Since we have no problem feeding, clothing and caring medically for murderers, rapists and thieves, perhaps it's time to revisit the idea of the workhouse—I'm thinking of a kinder, gentler place than the grim institutions cited by Dickens.

And, then again, maybe I'm wrong. Perhaps the Food Stamp Challenge will generate the awareness needed to fix the problem.

Next time you see a pauper or a struggling single mother of three, just tell them you are aware of their plight and watch their faces light up with appreciation and gratitude; or, if you really want to help, call your local food banks at 547-6430, 547-4300 or visit the First Congregational Church from 10 a.m to noon, Monday and Thursday

Check out www.michigan/gov/poverty for more on the "challenge" or visit www.feedmichigan.org to donate to Harvest Gathering food bank.

LETTERS to the editor

[Editor's note: In the spirit of fairness, Charlevoix Courier publishes this rebuttal to our editorial stand on supporting the Charlevoix County-wide Road Millage. BJG]

MILLAGE AN INEQUITABLE FIX FOR ISLANDERS

In 2004, a 1-mill, five-year county-wide road millage proposal was on the ballot. It promised Beaver Island some assistance on repaving the deteriorating portion of Kings Highway during "year four" of the plan.

The millage failed, in large measure because Beaver Islander's overwhelmingly voted no.

They doubted that they would benefit from the county road millage money we send across to mainland America.

It's back on the ballot again this year. However, this time around the county-wide millage proposal is asking for 1 mill for 15 years. That's a lot of money: About $30 million!

The Road Commission says that the millage would fund the repaving of 61.34 miles of roadway. Beaver Island's Kings Highway would benefit from the repaving of a whopping 4.04 miles. That's only 6.6% coming back to Beaver Island and 15 years of higher taxes. The "list" of roads has not been prioritized. For all we know, Beaver Island might be in year 15 of "the plan," should the money actually hold out.

A clear and detailed proposal should have been refined at this point so voters could have all the information about how and in what order this $30 million will be spent. It hasn't happened.

A real plan of 5 years in length with prioritized projects clearly explained to the voters may have a chance in a couple years when the current economic picture brightens. It would be wise to offer Beaver Island something early on. Islanders are a little jaded about getting their fair share, especially after we paid for paving our main street with little help from the rest of Charlevoix Country.

The likely outcome is that a big majority of Beaver Island and many on the mainland will once again will vote NO to the current 15 year non-plan. It should fail again.

Steve West, Beaver Island

GET FACTS STRAIGHT

Editor,

Just where is Dr. Pepin a Professor of Anatomy, Biology and Physiology?

I am not aware of any institution of higher learning in East Jordan.

He ought to get his facts straight.

Embryonic Stem Cell Research has been in place for about ten, not 25, years.

Ten years of research in any scientific endeavor rarely, if ever, results in discovery of cures.

Tremendous discovery is going on right now regarding unlocking the mysteries of genetic defects which may be responsible for many chronic diseases for which we have no cures.

Many of these advances are through embryonic stem cell research.

Clinical trials will occur when the science of ESCR advances far enough to allow ethical studies to start, and not before.

There are not over 70 medical conditions for which adult stem cells have been curative; there are seven, virtually all of which are blood diseases.

It is one thing to oppose embryonic stem cell research based on your religious convictions.

It is quite another thing, however, to distort facts in an attempt to scare voters to support a position that has no scientific or ethical merit.

CHARLEVOIX BLESSED

Editor:

There are few areas in America as fortunate as ours blessed with an abundance of natural beauty, a population of concerned, involved citizens and civic and business infrastructure that rivals what exists in larger communities.

A major part of that infrastructure is Charlevoix Area Hospital nestled on the shores of Lake Michigan and providing excellent patient care for nearly 90 years.

Our staff physicians and nurses take exceptional care each person coming to us for care in facilities that are modern, clean and exude sense of family that matches the personal attention given to each patient.

State-of-the-art medical equipment is available to meet your diagnostic and treatment needs.

We are proud to be able to meet your health care requirements.

We are also proud of the financial support which makes it possible for our Hospital to stay on the leading edge of medicine. Your annual gifts have helped to purchase digital mammography, renovate our facility for a new CT Scanner, build and improve our physical therapy and rehabilitation services and make numerous physical improvements to our facilities in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City.

This year, we need your support more than ever and hope that you'll make a gift today to help your hospital maintain and continue to improve our record of excellence in patient care. A gift of just $100 can help provide a mammogram for a woman unable to afford the cost. A gift of $50 will provide a health screening to detect cardiovascular risks in area school children or high cholesterol in an adult. Gifts in any amount can be combined to provide for the more than $2 million in capital equipment needs for the Hospital this year.

Please make your contribution today! All gifts are fully tax-deductible. Thank you for your consideration and support!

VOTE REINHARDT

Editor:

I strongly support Ron Reinhardt's re-election as Charlevoix County Commission for District 3.

Ron Reinhardt is a home grown dedicated native of Charlevoix County. His political concerns and ambitions are solely directed to improving life and government in Charlevoix County.

When I vote for my County Commissioner my decision is based on several very simple questions.

Do I know this person?

Do I respect this person?

Does this person care about control growth in Charlevoix County?

Does this person support open land and the natural beauty of our county?

Most of all, I want a person with experience, that is level headed and a logical analytical thinker. He or she must possess the ability to work with a group and help bond a team together.

When you look at Ron Reinhardt's record in county activities both in business and political experience, it is clear he understands what the county needs. Ron scores an absolute "yes" to all five of my qualifying questions. His legacy includes proactive participation in the road

He is the liaison for the humane society, a member of the Charlevoix Transit Committee, he has supported the commission on Aging by making sure that transportation is available for our seniors.

Ron stays in contact with his constituents. He has made sure that I know he is my representative for District 3 of the County Commission. He is receptive to questions and inputs from his constituents.

We need experience on the County Commission. We need Ron Reinhardt to be re-elected.

VOTE ELSENHEIMER

Editor:

Kevin Elsenheimer has a stellar track record for taking action and getting results in northern Michigan.

He effectively demanded the state re-open state forest campgrounds and successfully led opposition to MDNR proposed hungting/fishing fees instead of sacrificing northern Michigan during budget cuts. He stood up for the snowmobile/ski industry when the DNR wasn't paying for grooming, and money is now being sent to local communities. He advocated for the M-32 extension from East Jordan to Atwood. He initiated the effort to have the state assume jurisdiction over the Charlevoix/Boyne City Road and, for the first time, language to that effect has been included in the state budget. He expedited the clean up of the Black Lake Forest Campground. He passed the Renaissance Zone for the Georgia Pacific property and supported training and other incentives to soften the blow of the Georgia Pacific closure. He advocated for the M-32 overpass in Gaylord.

His legislative accomplishments include consolidation of local zoning acts into one regional uniform act; late fee waiver for military people delayed in renewing their driver's licenses due to their service; local government purchase of US flags to mark veterans graves in private cemeteries; and elimination of bureaucratic permiting process for using police scanners.

In concert with Senator Jason Allen, Representative Elsenheimer initiated and passed legislation to retain the Mackinac Bridge under the Mackinac Bridge Authority, avoiding a potentially costly MDOT takeover. They also initiated and passed 'Heidi's Law' to require drunk driving convictions remain on the record instead of dropping off over time.

Representative Elsenheimer has impressive awards and recognition as 'Legislator of the Year' from Michigan Association of Planners, Michigan Manufacturers, Police Officers Association of Michigan, Michigan Municipal League and Michigan Chiefs of Police, among many others. Kevin also has an A+ endorsement from the National Rifle Association

Representative Elsenheimer's accomplishments, awards and recognition are too numerous to mention, but it is obvious he is a man of action and achievement.

His opponent, on the other hand, likes to say she will 'take action' and 'create results.' In fact, although she lists various board memberships, associations and jobs, there is absolutely no evidence of accomplishment or results. To the contrary, the personal agenda she brings to efforts with which I am familiar hinders the ability of a group to make timely decisions and progress.

This is undoubtedly one of the reasons that she was ousted as county commissioner in 2006, after one term, by a 60-40 margin.

Please vote fnr Representative Kevin Elsenheimer who has proven to be a tireless, principled legislator on behalf of northern Michigan.

THREE CHEERS FOR SPORTSMANSHIP

Editor:

On Oct. 13, Charlevoix High School had the opportunity to host national presenter and consultant Rob Miller on the role of high school athletics and sportsmanship.

We were very impressed that almost 150 athletes, parents, coaches, and community members attended the presentation and want to thank all of those who came out to attend the workshop.

Mr. Miller conveyed a phenomenal message: Athletics are about more than physical skills or performing better than an opponent on a given day; but rather they are about the character, effort, and attitude that athletes need to develop and possess.

Mr. Miller offered breakout sessions specifically for parents, coaches, and fans to share the importance of committing to character education and sportsmanship and how we, as adults, can impact our athletes in positive ways.

As school administrators, parents, and Rayder fans, we feel empowered to lead the way and work with our student athletes and coaches on character and sportsmanship.

We feel these traits are invaluable in creating positive, successful adults. We are hopeful that our parents and fans will see the benefit of this information and join us in this endeavor.

For those of you who don't know, our Lake Michigan Conference schools rate each other on sportsmanship, and the winning school gets the honor of displaying a LMC sportsmanship banner in their gym.

Charlevoix High School has never won this award.

It should be our goal as a school and community to win this award every year and display it next to our other awards.

Rayder pride is more than winning a game; it is also about modeling poise, confidence, and character.

We are excited about the possibilities to host Mr. Rob Miller in the future and would like to personally thank some individuals who made this event possible.

Thanks to Jack Taylor and Brent Marlatt from "Beyond the Scoreboard," a non-profit organization dedicated to improving character and sportsmanship in high school athletics, for assisting with sponsorship and helping out throughout the evening.

Also, special thanks to Dean Davenport and Jack Taylor for conducting the break out session for our student athletes. All athletes that attended the workshop received a "Rayder Pride" t-shirt.

We would like to personally thank the businesses (responsible) for underwriting the cost of the shirts and supporting our athletes.

Suzanne Klinger, principal

Doug Drenth, assistant principal

Ann Gorney, athletic director

BEWARE DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Editor:

I am pleased to join the country in recognizing October as National Domestic Violence Awareness Month. October offers me the opportunity to look at how far the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan (WRC) has come in providing critical services to survivors of domestic violence, as well as the opportunity to thank the community for their ongoing support.

The WRC operates the only shelter for survivors of domestic violence in Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego Counties. This past fiscal year we provided a safe haven by offering shelter to over 175 women and children. The WRC also assisted over 460 survivors through non-residential services, including counseling and support groups. Our violence prevention program engaged over 930 local high school students in healthy discussions about respect and responsibility in relationships.

Thanks to your community support, the WRC is making a difference to many who live in Northern Michigan.

It is important in the upcoming election to study the issues and the positions of our candidates.

DIABETES AWARENESS

Editor:

For children with diabetes, managing their condition is a full-time job. Their daily tasks include monitoring their blood sugar levels several times and often taking multiple insulin shots. For these children, proper management of their condition is not a choice, it's an absolute necessity. Keeping blood sugar levels under control enables kids to live healthier and more productive lives at school and at play and to avoid health complications.

Unfortunately, students with diabetes are sometimes left with no assistance in caring for their condition at school. This is why it's so important for the Michigan Legislature to pass House Bill 6555, prompted by the American Diabetes Association's Safe at School Campaign and supported by the Michigan Diabetes Outreach Network, National Kidney Foundation of Michigan, and Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. The legislation will allow diabetic students to bring necessary personal equipment to school to monitor their condition during class or school-related activities.

The legislation will also ensure that schools have personnel to assist with daily and emergency diabetes care tasks. All too often, a single nurse is assigned to cover as many as 10 schools. Even when schools have a full-time nurse, they are not always available, especially during field trips and extracurricular activities.

By training school personnel to perform diabetes care tasks, students will safely get help when a nurse is not present.

I am going to contact my state representative and state senator and encourage them to support the Safe at School Campaign. I hope you will do the same.

TAXATION COMPLEXITIES

Editor:

I found the letter from Phil Pachulski to be unfortunately misleading.

Even with over 30 years practice as a tax attorney, I cannot predict with certainty the paradigm which may be used in future tax legislation.

However, to the extent that future tax methodology follows that which has been in place for well over 50 years, taxable income is taxed incrementally.

As such, for an individual with $150,000 of taxable income, the first $100,000 of taxable income for that individual would be taxes identically to another individual who had a total of $100,00 of taxable income. Taxable income in excess of $100,000 would be in a higher bracket and taxed at a higher percentage.

It is for that reason that if "Joe the Plumber" or any other taxpayer were to earn $255,000, it would only be the last $5,000–above the $250,000 amount–that would be subject to the higher tax bracket percentage.

The table that an extra dollar of earnings would dramatically increase one's taxes never has been true.

Furthermore, Mr. Pachulski's letter fails to distinguish between gross revenue and taxable income.

Business expenses, medical expenses, charitable contributions, interest, state and property taxes, depreciation, etc., are all items that are deductible from gross revenue to determine taxable income.

The use of a limited liability company partnership or "S" corporation would not adversely impact these factors.

The above comments are not intended to support the tax plan of either candidate, in fact, with the national debt having doubled to almost ten tollion dollars during the seven years of the Bush administration, hopefully Congress accepts its responsibility to carefully develop priorities, to tax appropriately and to spend far more wisely and not just increase the debt that will be burdening future generations.

Richard A. Shapack, Charlevoix

Digital mammography

comes to Charlevoix Area Hospital

A new, state-of-the-art radiology system was recently introduced at Charlevoix Area Hospital, making the accurate breast imaging procedure available to more women. Unlike traditional mammography, which uses x-ray film, digital mammography captures high-resolution diagnostic images electronically. Those images are transmitted instantly to a computer, where they can be rotated, enlarged, or enhanced to aid the early detection of any abnormalities.

Local women now have access to one of the most advanced methods of detecting breast cancer: digital mammography.

A new, state-of-the-art radiology system was recently introduced at Charlevoix Area Hospital, making the accurate breast imaging procedure available to more women.

Unlike traditional mammography, which uses x-ray film, digital mammography captures high-resolution diagnostic images electronically. Those images are transmitted instantly to a computer, where they can be rotated, enlarged, or enhanced to aid the early detection of any abnormalities.

According to Susan Lamb, lead mammographer at the hospital, the new system holds many advantages for patients.

"This is so much faster and more accurate," she said. "Because the images generated are much clearer, it's rare for a patient to be called back for a second take, and that greatly reduces anxiety."

For the hospital, the process improves efficiency.

Shorter waiting times mean more patients can be seen.

And there are advantages for the environment, too. Traditional x-ray film requires chemicals for development—making the new process far greener.

The mammography unit is part of Charlevoix Area Hospital's PACS, or Picture Archiving and Communication System.

That Web-based technology captures and stores images, allowing on-demand access within the hospital, and among physicians and specialists in distant locations. "PACS connects us in ways never before possible," Lamb said. "Our radiologist can consult with other physicians, or report quickly to a patient's primary doctor—all of which results in better care."

Lamb said patients may notice no difference in the actual mammography procedure, but they will see several outward changes in their visit to the imaging department.

Along with the installation of the new digital unit, the entire suite has undergone a facelift. The mammography area was redesigned to be less clinical and more home-like.

Patients are given plush robes and a quiet, comfortable place to wait.

Acquisition of the new equipment would not have been possible without strong community support.

In addition to a federal grant, funding from area foundations and hundreds of donors to the hospital's own foundation helped make the digital system a reality.

Other contributions, including cancer walks and the Circle of Strength group, aided countless volunteer efforts to battle breast cancer.

"We're very fortunate to have such caring donors, and a community that really values good health," said Bill Jackson, hospital CEO. "They've helped us improve our services and become the progressive, well-equipped hospital we are today."

Charlevoix-Area Essay Contest

The Charlevoix Kiwanis Club is sponsoring an essay contest open to all Charlevoix area youngsters currently in the 5th grade. Students are to explain, in one to two pages, to which charity they think an award of $50 should be given and why they have selected that particular charity. There will be multiple student essay-contest winners. At an award ceremony to which winners and their parents will be invited, each student who wrote a winning essay will be presented with a $50 check from Kiwanis, and the students will in turn then present their $50 check to their favorite charity.

The Charlevoix Kiwanis Club hopes to encourage fifth grade students to think about all of the good things that the various charities in our area do to help our community, and intends to make this essay contest an annual event. This will be the First Annual Charlevoix Kiwanis Club Vandenberg Essay Contest. This essay contest is named after former Charlevoix Kiwanis Club member Merle Vandenberg. Merle Vandenberg served Kiwanis as president of the local club and as a Lt. Governor. He was a teacher and dedicated his life to helping to nurture Charlevoix-area youngsters.

Charlevoix third graders take care of their environment

As part of a new unit, Charlevoix third-graders are selling reusable grocery bags.

Third-grade teachers at Charlevoix Elementary have been teaching their students about the importance of recycling and taking care of their planet.

"The unit focuses on natural resources, and how they are renewable and non-renewable," third-grade teacher Sara Jonker said.

When the three Rs, reducing, reusing and recycling were introduced, the students wanted to do their part by selling reusable grocery bags with a Rayder logo.

"These bags would reduce the amount of plastic and paper bags being used," Jonker said.

Third-grader Mathew Vanniman said, "I learned how to help the earth by not using plastic and paper bags."

The 88 third-graders at Charlevoix elementary took forms home to sell the bags. No student was obligated or rewarded for any sales.

"The bags are maroon with a large white C, and say Charlevoix Rayders around the C. They are being sold for $5," Jonker said.

So far, 350 bags have been sold. Any and all proceeds are going to an environmental organization in the area the students will later vote on.

Jonker said "The kids had a wonderful time designing, selling and promoting the reusable bags. They know that they can make an impact on our environment with simple little changes."

"Instead of throwing away your garbage, you can make a compost pile," third-grader Spencer Haan said.

"The kids also felt this project was another way for them to make a difference for our planet. It is amazing how environmentally conscience they are after learning about how they can help," Jonker added.

"My favorite part was helping the environment and by not filling up land fills with plastic and paper bags," third-grader Naomi Batdorf said.

Charlevoix third-graders will do this project again next year, although there may be some variations.

According to Jonker, the point of the unit is to get the message out that small changes, such as reusable grocery bags, can make an impact on the environment.

There are roughly 50-100 bags still available for purchase. Bags can be ordered through the front office. Call 547-3215 for more information.

Plaintiffs dismissed in smoke ban suit

MARCI SINGER
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

By an order issued on Oct. 17, the Michigan Supreme Court upheld the validity of the Health Department of Northwest Michigan's smoke-free business regulation in Charlevoix County by accepting an appeal only on the limited question relating to the "nonretaliation" section of the regulation.

The court dismissed all non-Charlevoix County plaintiffs from the case as part of its order.

Attorneys for the two remaining plaintiffs, Jeff Legato owner of NAPA Auto Parts in East Jordan and Petoskey and Scott Way of Way Transportation in Charlevoix, will argue against the section of the smokefree business regulation that reads, "No person or employee shall discharge, refuse to hire, or in any manner retaliate against any employee, applicant for employment or customer because such employee, applicant or customer exercises any right to a smokefree environment afforded by this regulation."

"It's not right," Legato said. "I don't smoke but I don't think there should be regulation dictating where you can and cannot smoke. If a restaurant has a no smoking policy, I'm fine with that but this regulation is just not right — they should quit selling cigarettes instead. What are we paying taxes for if the government keeps stripping away our rights one by one?"

The Michigan Supreme Court's decision to uphold all but this one section of the clean indoor air regulation is a major victory for most workers in Antrim, Emmet and Otsego counties, said Jim Young, who represents the health department.

"Scientific evidence shows that secondhand smoke is a known health hazard which causes cancer and heart disease. This regulation is about saving lives," he said.

According to the Michigan Department of Community Health, about 24 non-smokers die every year from the effects of secondhand smoke in the health district that includes Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

"We knew the smoke-free portions of the regulation were legal," Young added "The Charlevoix Circuit agreed with us, then the Court of Appeals agreed with us and now the Michigan Supreme Court has agreed with us. The supreme court will only hear about the nonretaliation provision, which is a very minor provision in the regulation. This is a major victory for the health department and the counties that have supported this regulation."

The "Regulation Eliminating Smoking in Public and Private Worksites and Certain Public Places" went into effect on Oct. 4, 2005, after being adopted by the county boards of commissioners from Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties. Of the 30 commissioners serving at the time, 27 voted for the regulation.

The health department's Clean Indoor Air act covers most worksites in Antrim, Emmet and Otsego counties, except for restaurants and bars, which cannot be included in smokefree legislation according to Michigan law. The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners voted to withdraw from the regulation earlier this year.

Scott Way declined the opportunity to provide a comment for this story.

Passing the test

Eleven school districts within Emmet and Charlevoix counties passed their Michigan State Police school bus safety inspections

COURTESY PHOTO

On Wednesday, Oct. 8, the Michigan State Police Traffic and Safety Division released their annual school bus safety inspection results for the 2007-08 school year, and of the 17,220 school buses inspected throughout the state, 90 percent, or 15,503 buses passed. This represents an increase from the 2006-07 school year when 89 percent, or 15,448 buses passed.

Schools in Emmet and Charlevoix counties have passed the test when it comes to school bus safety.

On Wednesday, Oct. 8, the Michigan State Police Traffic and Safety Division released their annual school bus safety inspection results for the 2007-08 school year, and of the 17,220 school buses inspected throughout the state, 90 percent, or 15,503 buses passed. This represents an increase from the 2006-07 school year when 89 percent, or 15,448 buses passed.

Of the buses that passed inspection during the 2007-08 school year, 137 came from 11 districts within Emmet and Charlevoix counties, including Beaver Island Community School, Boyne City and Boyne Falls public schools, Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Littlefield and Pellston public schools, the Public Schools of Petoskey and St. Francis Xavier School.

"The high number of buses passing inspection exemplifies the commitment of school bus transportation managers to school bus safety, further ensuring a safe transportation system for Michigan's school children," said Colonel Peter C. Munoz, director of the Michigan State Police.

Each school bus in each district throughout the state was subjected to a 198-point inspection by the state police.

"It's a bumper-to-bumper, top-to-bottom inspection," said Inspector Randy Coplin, assistant division commander for the Michigan State Police Traffic and Safety Division. "We look at the lights, all the seats, tires, exhaust, the frame, warning lights, steering, brakes, suspension and emergency exits — it takes an inspector between half-an-hour to an hour to fully inspect a bus."

For the past five years, Boyne City and Boyne Falls public schools have had an exceptional record, but Joe Howie, transportation supervisor for both school districts, said he doesn't like to brag.

"I take pride in my work. I would feel bad if I failed — I'd be disappointed," he said. "I contributed (the success) to a good superintendent and a good board (of education) that are very supportive to what I need to keep the buses running good. I also have a good bunch of drivers that can tell me what's wrong in advance."

The Public Schools of Petoskey, who have had a private contract with Johnson's Buses Inc. since 1939, have also had a perfect record during the last five years according to state police records.

Don Johnson, transportation director for Petoskey, said he attributes this to many years of experience, a hard-working mechanic, Glen Coolman, and bus drivers that know their equipment.

"We generally always have a good rating — very seldom do we see a bus that's red-tagged," he said. "We've been doing this for so many years, we know what we're doing — we take a lot of pride in it. If an inspector catches something, Glen takes it personally.

"It comes down to training your staff and training your drivers real well," Johnson said. "Safety is so important — it's the No. 1 thing."

In the 2003-04 and 2004-05 school years, several local school districts received yellow and red tags on their buses, including Concord Academy-Petoskey and Harbor Light Chrisdan School, which no longer have buses, and Charlevoix, Harbor Springs and Littlefield public schools.

Buses that are given a yellow tag may continue to operate as long as the defect that is identified is repaired within 60 days — buses that are red-tagged are immediately placed out-of-service and cannot transport students until the defect is repaired.

Gordie Russell, transportation supervisor for Charlevoix Public Schools, said even with some school districts receiving red and yellow tags in the past, he said he believes most area schools are diligent when it comes to school bus safety.

"If you went through most any school's past you'd find something (wrong) somewhere — it may not necessarily be a safety thing," he said. "We try to keep (the buses) as safe as we can and keep on top of things. I think with every (district) in the area, that's pretty equal — if it's not safe we're not going to send them out, that's all there is to it."

Petoskey Pointe high on issues list

Ryan Bentley and Noah Fowle

JULIE WITTHOEFT/NEWS-REVIEW

Petoskey Pointe, and parking, are issues facing those voting for mayor in Petoskey.

Nearly three years after leaving the Petoskey mayor's seat, Ted Pall is challenging current mayor Dale Meyer for the position in the Nov. 4 election.

Meyer

Pall

A co-owner of Meyer Ace Hardware, the 55-year-old Meyer is currently in his third consecutive one-year term as mayor. Pall, a 48-year-old anesthesiologist, served one mayoral term during 2005 and did not pursue re-election that year.

Through the years, the two candidates have had contrasting positions on Petoskey Pointe, a now-stalled proposal to rework a downtown block with a hotel/condominium complex.

The city has a contract to purchase one floor of Petoskey Pointe's parking garage, and developers are obligated to have the project "substantially complete" by Nov. 2. If developers fail to meet the deadline — a scenario local officials see as likely — the city could take steps to recover the value of land which it transferred to developers for use in the project.

Meyer said he's been advised by legal counsel to limit his comments about the city's next steps in advance of the deadline.

If Petoskey Pointe is completed, he believes it would offer benefits such as additional public parking at a key downtown entry point. Meyer said he'd like to work with developers in order to preserve the city's ability to acquire the parking — provided that some yet-to-be-disclosed stipulations are met.

"When it's complete, it will be a real asset to the city," Meyer said of the project. "The community needs to pull together rather than be divisive. We also have to look at this in a certain timeline. That area has been underdeveloped for years. We're making progress."

Pall has been a vocal critic of the Petoskey Pointe proposal. He sees the project's physical scale as excessive for its surroundings, and questions whether the plans would improve on downtown parking availability as much as some others expect.

The mayoral challenger has differed with current city officials on how they've handled the leadup to the deadline.

"The thing I'm really pushing is talking to attorneys, getting professional advice on where we stand, getting ideas to go forward," he said.

Some city council members have said a discussion of deadline issues could adversely affect the city's legal position, but Pall believes the ability to discuss privileged material with an attorney in closed session would protect against these risks.

If faced with the question of giving developers more time Pall said he'd consider an extension — with conditions attached.

These terms could include payment of back property taxes the developers currently owe, payments to contractors who've placed construction liens on the project site, a presentation by developers at a city council meeting and review of options with legal counsel.

Seeing an extension as a concession by the city, Pall believes the recipients also should be made to improve fencing and ensure safety along the perimeter of the excavation, and that the extension should be limited to a reasonable timeframe.

Pall also said he'd be willing to consider the concerns some local residents have shown about the Petoskey Department of Public Safety's approach to some police matters.

Some of the concerns focus on officers' responses to two underage drinking parties earlier this year. One young man who fled a busted February party on foot was found dead of hypothermia later, and another man committed suicide after being cited at a May gathering.

Pall said the police questions are worthy of discussion at a city

Two positions open on Petoskey City Council

Two run for 4th Ward

Ryan Bentley

439-9342 . rbentley@petoskeynews.com

As he pursues another term in the Petoskey City Council's 4th Ward seat, Jeremy Wills sees experience as an attribute that will serve him well.

But Ron Marshall believes there's room for improvement in how the 4th Ward's residents are represented on council — and he's making his first run for elected office in hope of doing so.

Wills

Marshall

Wills, a 60-year-old dentist, has spent about 15 years in mayoral and council seats through the years, and also has filled appointed city board and commission positions. He said he's been able to network in the community and establish a grasp of local issues.

"My same guiding principle is that Northern Michigan and Petoskey offer a very unique quality of life," he said.

Seeing change as a given, Wills said it's important to guide change in a way that doesn't adversely affect that quality of life.

Marshall, a 64-year-old psychologist, has served on the Friendship Center board and was involved with planning/land-use and drug abuse prevention initiatives when he previously lived in Detroit. In pursuing the council seat, he said he's looking to open new communication channels.

If elected, Marshall said he'd establish a Web site with updates on local issues and options for contacting him; and schedule occasional opportunities to interact with residents in person.

"That way, I can better represent them because I'll know what their concerns are," he said.

This year, the stalled Petoskey Pointe project downtown is proving to be a key discussion topic for the council.

Petoskey has an agreement with the project's developers, Lake Street Petoskey Associates, for a city purchase of one floor in the parking garage.

Developers need to have the project's shell complete by Nov. 2 as a condition for the city's acquisition. The city would capture new property taxes generated by the Petoskey Pointe development to finance the parking purchase.

The city has long had a goal to establish public parking in that part of downtown, Wills noted, one which doesn't change with the deadline's arrival. He believes it may be in the city's best interest to renegotiate options with developers.

While Wills believes the proposed hotel/condominium complex would fit well downtown, Marshall has had concerns about its large physical scale and impact on views.

He also noted one analysis showing "a wash" in parking availability before and after Petoskey Pointe's construction.

"The last thing we need to do is an (agreement) extension," Marshall said.

The 4th Ward challenger said the city might wish to consider a new arrangement with Petoskey Pointe's current developers or new ones. But he sees flaws with the current agreement, like the fact that developers could excavate the site before having to post a performance bond to assure work could be finished.

• Noting concerns that the retaining wall along the project's perimeter could deteriorate through exposure to the elements, Marshall said developers should be made to ensure safety.

During conversations with local residents, Marshall said he's heard concerns that the city's public safety department sometimes take a "rough" approach to police matters involving youth.

Marshall said he's not sure whether there's a basis for the complaints, but added that the issue is worth discussing in a public forum.

"I don't want to do a witch hunt and so forth," he added. "That's not my intention."

Before the council takes action on the public safety matter, Wills said he would need to hear more from those who have complaints — and from public safety officials and the city manager. As Wills sees it, the public safety department promotes a safe atmosphere that enhances quality of life.

"To judge the public safety department on a few situations I don't think is the right thing to do," he said. "Being a police officer is a very difficult, very demanding and sometimes not appreciated line of work."

Challenge in 2nd Ward

Ryan Bentley

and Noah Fowle

As Cynthia McWatters pursues re-election to the Petoskey City Council's 2nd Ward seat, she's emphasizing dedication to the position and her constituents.

But her challenger in the Nov. 4 election, Bill Fraser, believes the 2nd Ward and the city could benefit from a new leadership approach.

McWatters, 60, works as a nurse at Northern Michigan Regional Hospital. She's currently in her fourth two-year term on council.

"I'm committed to this task and I care about this city," she said. "There are headaches with this job, but it's making a difference that really matters."

If re-elected, McWatters said she wants to address safety issues on Petoskey's roads, including lowering the speed limit on the corridor out toward Bay Harbor and adding sidewalks where Division Street meets Arlington Avenue, and added that the city should continue its success with beautification and recreation projects.

"The safety of our citizens is my priority," she said. "I don't bring a personal agenda to this job and I think we can maintain our quality of life through sound investments."

The 59-year-old Fraser co-owns Jesperson's Restaurant and is seeking his first public office. Believing that the council has shown a reactionary style of leadership in recent years, Fraser favors a more proactive approach along with greater transparency and more frequent discussions with the public.

McWatters

Fraser

"Over the last year or two I've heard an awful lot of silence on the council. I think the people of Petoskey and the 2nd Ward deserve better representation," he said. "Dollars could be harder to come by in the future and a good business background will be helpful."

The stalled project to redevelop a downtown block into the Petoskey Pointe hotel/condominium complex is proving to be one of this year's key discussion topics for city officials.

The city has an agreement to purchase one floor of the complex's parking garage. This contract requires developers to have the project finished by Nov. 2, but officials no longer expect developers can meet this deadline.

Although McWatters opposed the Petoskey Pointe project, she said she has gone along with it after citizens voted for it. Despite her reservations, McWatters said the best course of action is to wait out the deadline and weigh the city's options then.

Fraser supported the mixed use idea behind Petoskey Pointe, but said he was not thrilled with the size and scale of the project. He said if the agreement with the current developers does expire, he would be more open to working with a different developer, but added the city needs to improve its position within any further agreements.

This year, some local residents have expressed concern about the Petoskey Department of Public Safety's approach to some police matters. In Fraser's view, the department tends to do an "excellent job," but he also believes the questions are worthy of public discussion.

A review board might be one option that the city could consider for dealing with complaints against police, Fraser said, noting that the U.S. Department of Justice offers guidelines for communities interested in setting these up.

McWatters does not favor this type of review board for the public safety department. She said the city's current government model already has proper oversight in place and urged citizens to not be so critical of policing without understanding the job more thoroughly.

council meeting, and that he'd like to have the public safety department represented in the dialogue. The mayoral challenger said there may be some confusion among the public about what officers can do in a given situation, and added that new oversight options — perhaps the creation of a panel to review complaints against police — might be worth considering.

Meyer believes it would be unfair to hold the public safety department totally responsible for the aftermath of those parties. He doesn't see much benefit to the formation of a review board and questions whether it would be appropriate to put laypeople without police training in the position of reviewing complaints.

Both candidates noted additional priorities that they'd like to see the city pursue.

Meyer is emphasizing recreational opportunities, such as the development of a recreational corridor in the Bear River Valley and the acquisition of a rail corridor through downtown to create a linear park and trolley service.

Pall would like to see the city revive the Mayor's Youth Council — a teen advisory panel for city government which he had established — and do more to keep residents in the loop. He favors advertising for candidates when board and commission seats are available and taking more long-range planning steps so that residents know what projects are on the horizon.

Candidates promising help for workers, automakers

LANSING — The fight for Michigan's 17 electoral votes was expected to be heated this year, bringing the frequent candidate visits, constant TV ads and endless automated calls Michigan voters have grown used to in this traditional battleground state.

But since Republican presidential candidate John McCain pulled his staff and TV ad dollars out of Michigan on Oct. 2, neither he nor Democrat Barack Obama has stepped foot in the state. The same is true for their running mates, GOP Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin and Delaware Sen. Joe Biden.

Still, voters are paying intense attention to the election, registering to vote in record numbers, putting up yard signs and volunteering.

They're motivated by the economic troubles that are shaping the presidential race in the state and nationally, with the meltdown in the housing and financial sector, increased pressure on ailing automakers and talk of a recession.

Both major party candidates are promising ways to help strapped homeowners keep their homes and domestic automakers retool their plants and invest in new technology. Democratic Gov. Jennifer Granholm recently joined Obama at a campaign jobs summit in Florida, talking about how the Illinois senator's plan to invest in alternative energy could create more jobs in Michigan.

Michigan voters have gone for the Democratic presidential candidate in the past four elections, last backing a GOP presidential candidate in 1988, when they supported then-Vice President George H.W. Bush. Still, the McCain campaign initially thought it had a chance here.

The Arizona senator hoped to attract conservative Democrats and Catholics in suburban Detroit and along Interstate 75 in rural and urban areas just north of Flint. He won the state's 2000 GOP primary with the help of independent and Democratic voters who respected his status as a former prisoner of war and his straight-talking style.

But Obama has hit McCain hard this election for supporting free trade agreements and other policies Obama says has cost Michigan workers' jobs. He has run ads promising to "reclaim our economic future" and tied his opponent to the unpopular policies of President Bush.

The contest remained relatively close until late September, when a credit crunch, failing banks and tumbling stock market intensified fears over jobs and the economy in already nervous Michigan.

Palin

Biden

Facing poll numbers that showed Obama racking up a double-digit lead, McCain shifted resources to states he still had a chance to win. The abrupt withdrawal left Republican activists surprised and angry. State GOP Chairman Saul Anuzis called the McCain pullout "a tough blow" that left "a tremendous hole in our ground campaign."

McCain's departure has allowed the Obama campaign to shift some resources out of the state, although it continued to run ads. It recently posted online a series of Web videos urging volunteers to help get out the vote on Election Day.

Every poll shows the economy is the primary issue on Michigan voters' minds. With a state unemployment rate that regularly is the nation's highest, Michigan has had a tough time getting its feet back under it, especially as the national economy has weakened and the domestic automakers — General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler LLC — have struggled to downsize amid plummeting sales.

The state's high rate of foreclosures — Michigan is in the top five nationally — and loss of more than 315,000 manufacturing jobs since mid-2000 has many voters wondering when the downward slide will stop, especially given the shaky conditions on Wall Street.

Gloria Lipka, 60, lives in Roseville and cuts hair at a barber shop in Mount Clemens. A Republican who backed George Bush in 2000 and 2004, she plans to vote for McCain and likes his choice of Palin as a running mate.

But Lipka says the bad economy is hurting even the demand for barbering.

"You think people need haircuts, but they'll put it off longer to buy groceries or make a house payment," she said.

Annie Wildfong, a 19-year-old Michigan State University student from Ferndale, is so excited about Obama that she volunteered to register voters before the Oct. 6 cutoff date in the hope of getting more pro-Obama voters to the polls.

"We recognize what the other candidate (McCain) is offering is more of the same," she said. She sees Obama as "just so hopeful."

The race also features four third-party presidential candidates and their running mates:

— Ralph Nader of Washington, D.C., is running in Michigan as the Natural Law Party candidate, although he's running as an independent in many other states. He got 2 percent of the Michigan vote in 2000 when he ran as the Green Party candidate but got less than 1 percent in 2004 as an independent. His running mate is Matt Gonzalez, a former member of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors who lost his 2003 bid for mayor of San Francisco as a Green Party candidate.

Cynthia McKinney, the Green Party candidate, is a former Democrat who served 12 years in the U.S. House after becoming the first black woman elected to Congress from Georgia. She also served in the Georgia Legislature. She now makes her home in Los Angeles, Calif. Her running mate is Rosa Clemente, a New York City native who makes her living as a Puerto Rican hip hop activist and journalist.

Chuck Baldwin of Pensacola, Fla., is running in Michigan as candidate of the U.S. Taxpayers Party, although the party is known nationally as the Constitution Party. The conservative minister and talk show host has chosen as his running mate Darrell Castle, an attorney who served two terms as Constitution Party of Tennessee state chairman and is in his third term as vice chairman of the national Constitution Party.

— Bob Barr of Smyrna, Ga., is the Libertarian presidential candidate. Barr served in the U.S. House from 1995 through 2002 as a Republican but left the GOP in 2006 over what he called bloated spending and civil liberties intrusions by the Bush administration. His running mate is Wayne Allyn Root, a businessman, professional sports handicapper and TV producer from Las Vegas, Nev.

If elected: How would President McCain govern?

Nancy Benac
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rabble-rouser from his earliest days, John McCain has never been one who likes to be told "no." There's no reason to think a President McCain would be any different.

McCain styles himself as a Teddy Roosevelt Republican, eager to be in the arena. If elected, he could be expected to pick certain issues and push them to the limit. Look for him to throw down the gauntlet in a few high-profile battles — vetoing legislation larded with pork-barrel projects, for example.

He's already promised to make an example of legislators who try to finagle government dollars for pet projects without thorough review, saying over and over, "You will know their names. I will make them famous."

He'd plant his feet firmly in resisting a timetable for withdrawal from Iraq. He'd try to give people new tax credits for health insurance and — in a first for a Republican president — move to deal aggressively with global warming even while opening more offshore waters to oil drilling.

But his my-way-or-the-highway approach would only take him so far, particularly when the nation's economic crisis is sure to limit maneuvering room for whoever becomes the nation's 44th president. And especially for McCain, since Democrats are likely to strengthen their majorities in the House and Senate come Election Day.

As a candidate, McCain has stressed his ability to work with congressional Democrats while standing up to those in his own party. There's no skill he'd need more if elected.

"He's going to have to truly be the maverick McCain who takes on his own party," said Darrell West, director of governance studies at the Brookings Institution, a think tank. "He will not be able to govern as a conservative Republican."

McCain's task would be further complicated by the conservative stances he adopted during the campaign season.

"If he compromises too much with the Democrats, he'll face a grass-roots rebellion from conservative activists who were always suspi-

Promises they've made to the American people

By The Associated Press

IRAQ-AFGHANISTAN

Promises and proposals from Republican John McCain and Democrat Barack Obama:

McCain: Opposes scheduling a troop withdrawal from Iraq, saying latest strategy is succeeding. Promises to employ same strategy in Afghanistan, with unspecified boost in U.S. forces there. Willing to have permanent U.S. peacekeeping forces in Iraq.

Obama: Promises to complete the withdrawal of U.S. combat troops within 16 months of taking office. But hedges by saying this would require consultations with military commanders and, possibly, flexibility. Says he will use the drawdown to bolster U.S. troop presence in Afghanistan.

FINANCIAL CRISIS

McCain: Proposes $300 billion plan for the government to buy bad mortgages and renegotiate them at a reduced price. Proposes a one-year suspension of requirements that people age 70 1/2 begin cashing in retirement accounts. Would eliminate taxes on unemployment benefits; guarantee 100 percent of all savings for six months; lower the tax rate on retirement funds to the lowest rate, 10 percent, on the first $50,000 withdrawn; cut the tax rate on capital gains in half, down to 7.5 percent for two years.

Obama: Calls for immediate, post-election passage of new stimulus measures including a 90-day moratorium on home foreclosures at some banks, $3,000 tax break to businesses for each new job created, unpenalized withdrawals of up to $10,000 from retirement accounts, cutting capital gains taxes for investment in small businesses, an extension of unemployment benefits, short-term federal loans to keep state and local governments functioning, money for infrastructure construction, and doubled loan guarantees for automakers.

ENERGY

McCain: Advocates increased offshore drilling, and building 45 nuclear power reactors by 2030. Seeks mandatory reductions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases by 60 percent from 1990 levels by 2050, using a market-based cap-and-trade system the would increase energy costs. Supports $2 billion program to develop carbon capture and other clean coal research and development. $5,000 tax credit for the purchase of zero carbon emission cars; $300 million prize for improved batteries for hybrid vehicles.

Obama: Proposes emergency cost-fighting measures such as a windfall-profits tax on largest oil companies to pay for energy rebates of up to $1,000 per couple and the release of up to 70 million barrels of oil from Strategic Petroleum Reserve to boost supplies. Ten-year, $150 billion fund to encourage biofuels, wind, solar, plug-in hybrids, clean-coal technology and other "climate-friendly" alternative supplies, with financing to come from selling pollution allowances in a market-based, cap-and-trade system. Aims for mandatory reductions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gas emissions by 80 percent from 1990 levels by 2050. Supports increasing federal fuel economy requirements from 35 mpg to 40 mpg. Now would consider limited expansion of offshore oil and gas drilling, but opposes drilling in Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

HEALTH CARE

McCain: Promises $2,500 refundable tax credit for individuals, $5,000 for families, to make health insurance more affordable. No mandate for universal coverage. Would no longer shield from income taxes those payments that businesses and their workers make toward employer-sponsored health insurance. Would let people buy health plans offered by insurers located in other states.

Obama: Proposes mandatory coverage for children, no mandate for adults. Aims for universal coverage by requiring larger employers to share costs of insuring workers and by offering coverage similar to that in plan for federal employees. Proposes spending $50 billion on information technology over five years to reduce health care costs over time.

EDUCATION

McCain: Proposes more money for community college education. Advocates expansion of District of Columbia's voucher program, but not a federal voucher program as he did in 2000. Sees No Child Left Behind law as vehicle for increasing opportunities for parents to choose school.

Obama: Proposes encouraging, but not mandating, universal pre-kindergarten; teacher pay raises tied to, although not based solely on, test scores; an overhaul of No Child Left Behind law to better measure student progress, make room for subjects like music and art, and be less punitive toward failing schools; and a tax credit to pay up to $4,000 of college costs for students who perform 100 hours of community service a year.

TAXES

McCain: Proposes extending all of President Bush's tax cuts and cutting corporate tax rate to 25 percent. After initially pledging not to raise taxes, now says nothing can be ruled out in negotiating compromises to keep Social Security solvent.

Obama: Promises immediate tax cuts for households making under $250,000, and increased taxes on families making over $250,000, as well as on corporations and capital gains. Promises to create new tax breaks for lower-income families, including tripling Earned Income Tax Credit for minimum-wage workers, giving larger families a higher credit, and eliminating the tax-filing requirement for older workers making under $50,000. Also calls for tax incentives for savings, child care and mortgage expenses.

If elected: How would a President Obama govern?

Jennifer Loven
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For all Barack Obama's talk about change, there are signs that in style , — if not substance , — a new White House under Democrat Obama would operate much like the current one under President George W. Bush.

Think discipline, efficiency and secrecy. These are hallmarks of Obama's campaign, just as they have been for the last eight years in the leak-proof, tightly managed Bush administration.

> On issues, Obama's approach on everything from Iraq to health care would look much different from the last eight years.

If Obama becomes the nation's 44th president, however, the extraordinary history-making aspects of his ascension could for a time overshadow almost everything else.

The nation would have its first black leader, one of its youngest presidents ever and someone with a varied, even exotic, background. The hook on the United States' checkered history of race relations would add a new chapter. And even if Obama's honeymoon was short-lived, the world would see America in a new light.

There are other ways, small and large, that an Obama White House promises to usher in newness.

Obama's two daughters, at ages 10 and 7, would be the youngest residents to roam the White House since 9-year-old Amy Carter tagged along with President Jimmy Carter and his wife in 1977. Obama's poise at the podium would end an era of water-cooler jokes about presidential malapropisms.

On issues, Obama's approach on everything from Iraq to health care would look much different from the last eight years. He has pledged to preside over an unconventional style of politics and policy development virtually blind to party, an intriguing possibility even if hard to trust after years of divisive partisanship.

Circumstances often spring game-changing surprises on a new president. But how candidate Obama has managed his campaign, and what he's promised along the way, offer hints of how a President Obama would govern.

Obama, like Bush, demands an orderly shop.

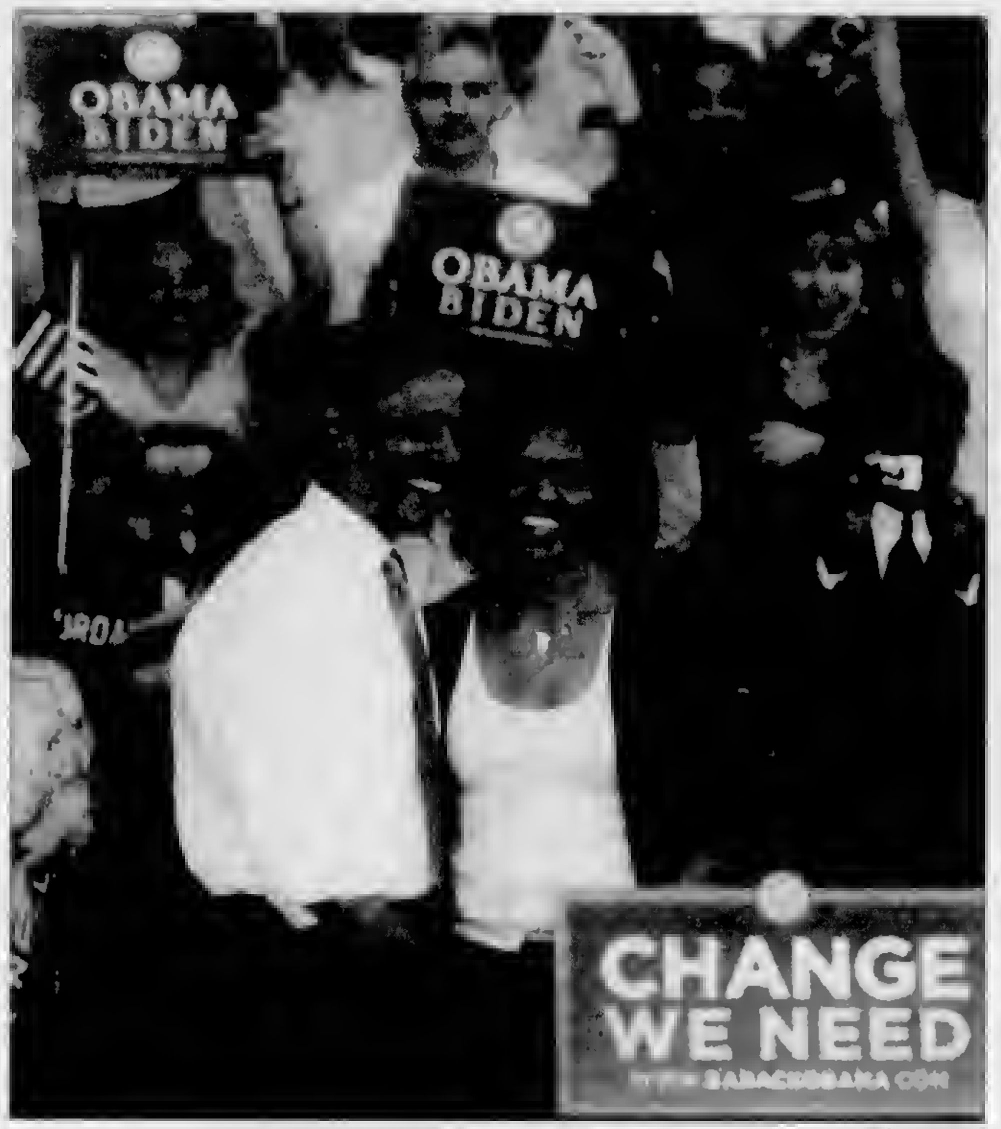
Aides are expected to be both tightlipped and tight-knit. They get a "no drama" speech upon hire. And even if that rule is violated, histrionic disagreements over strategy, policy or personality are expected to stay behind closed doors, and they actually do. Most events come off like clockwork.

Obama's style as a candidate predicts a chief executive officer-style president, one who delegates rather than micromanages.

It's the same model as for Bush, the nation's first president with a masters in business administration. It derives in part from something the two men have in common: natural political gifts that set them on a path to the White House that took shortcuts around much government experience. That means policy experts are needed for heavy lifting.

The 47-year-old Obama hasn't finished his first term in the U.S. Senate, and before that had just eight years as a state lawmaker under his government belt.

Obama, like Bush, relies most on a small, hard-to-penetrate inner circle. It's been a successful formula, but can irk power players in his party and in Congress, who sometimes see Team Obama as too insular. This image was only fed by the decision to place Obama's campaign headquarters far from Washington in Chicago and the way his campaign used the Internet and grass-roots supporters, more than party bosses, to capitalize on the Obama phenomenon.



ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic presidential candidate, Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., and his wife, Michelle, embrace during a rally Oct. 21 at Bicentennial Park in Miami.

Obama's discipline is less about the importance of secrecy and more about making the organizational trains run on time, said Princeton University political historian Julian Zelizer.

Bush and Obama stand for very different things, says Zelizer, but Obama "runs his campaign with the same sort of methodical efficiency and closed nature of the Bush White House."

"He's not going to have a freewheeling White House where people are free to go out on their own and do what they want and be allowed to talk to the press," Zelizer said.

Sen. Dick Durbin, a longtime Obama friend and fellow Illinois Democrat, says Obama created a tight ship in part by being willing to hear things he doesn't like from aides, and by not ripping into them when mistakes were made. "There were setbacks, but there was no bloodletting," he said.

Obama is known for his loyalty, as well as for preferring aides who keep their mind on the work and the attention on the boss. Know much about David Plouffe or Valerie Jarrett or Pete Rouse or Steve Hildebrand or Robert Gibbs or David Axelrod? These campaign masterminds could well soon have offices in the White House, but none has become a celebrity aide in the mold of Bill Clinton's James Carville or Bush's Karl Rove.

Obama's own style combines cool-to-the-point-of-detached bearing with cerebral decision-making and natural charisma.

His Republican rival, John McCain, casts Obama as indecisive, inexperienced, and aloof , — a celebrity empty suit. Obama's camp counters that he is a leader who thinks first, decides later and remains calm in a crisis.

Regardless, Zelizer said, Obama will need to guard against abandoning his natural caution to launch a spree of legislative action right off the bat. Going too far to please Democrats excited about finally being in control again of both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue could risk a backlash from the public, he said.

With all the attention that is paid to a president's first 100 days in office, candidates themselves often divide their proposals between those with get-it-done-now status and those that will have to wait.

One issue that won't wait even until Inauguration Day is the battered economy.

Obama supports immediate action, in a special post-election congressional session, to spend billions on new economic stimulus measures. His ideas: a moratorium on home foreclosures, tax breaks for job creation and small-business investment, penalty-free withdrawals from retirement accounts, an unemployment benefits extension, support for state and local governments, money for infrastructure construction, and doubled loan guarantees for automakers.

Beyond that, Obama has defined three big issues for the first 100 days of his presidency: working to bring combat troops home from Iraq in a little over a year, beginning a plan to achieve universal health care coverage, and getting started on a far-reaching energy plan.

During 20 months of campaigning, he also has promised that many other things will gain his immediate attention, among them: immigration reform; a strict ethics code; a review of Bush's executive orders, particularly those dealing with warrantless wiretaps, the prison at the Guantanamo Bay Navy base, and interrogation techniques; and a rural policy summit in Iowa with accompanying legislative proposals to Congress.

With an economic emergency at hand, many may have to be postponed.

But for a man whose candidacy got rocket fuel from his opposition to the decision to go into Iraq, the one promise Obama cannot afford to put off is the one to end the war. Obama has promised that ending the war would be a priority not for his first 100 days in office , — but for his very first.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff will find themselves in the Oval Office on Jan. 21, he says, being handed a new mission from their commander in chief "to end this war, responsibly and deliberately, but decisively."

In all these things, Obama has reached big. That means he would need to spend a fair amount of time early on building bridges to Capitol Hill. Working with a Congress controlled by his own party doesn't guarantee he'd easily get what he wants.

To marshal public support for his agenda, he'll need to draw on his vaunted oratorical skills.

His speeches may be as measured as his "No Drama Obama" demeanor. But with subtle shifts in volume and pacing, Obama can move an audience to thunderous ovation or hushed attention. That's a potent tool, in governing as well as politics.

"The smart thing to do," Zelizer said, "would be to keep that up."

We, the undersigned voters from Emmet and Charlevoix Counties, support U.S. Senators BARACK OBAMA and JOE BIDEN for President and Vice-President of the United States of America and strongly recommend you

Voters to decide stem cell research measure

LANSING (AP) — Michigan voters will be thrust into the crossroads of science, ethics and religion this November when they decide whether to loosen the state's restrictions on embryonic stem cell research.

Supporters of the ballot measure say it could put Michigan researchers at the forefront of an emerging science that might help discover cures for spinal cord injuries, diabetes, Alzheimer's and a host of other illnesses.

Opponents say the research is unethical because it involves the use and destruction of human embryos. The Michigan Catholic Conference and Right to Life of Michigan are among the proposal's opponents.

Many scientists believe embryonic stem cell research holds more promise for medical breakthroughs than less controversial adult stem or umbilical cord blood research. Embryonic stem cells are more versatile.

Local perspective

— Dr. Daniel Pepin, a former orthodontist and current biology instructor at North Central Michigan College, said the proposal goes too far. He has joined the local Right to Life movement and the Catholic Church in opposition of Proposal 2.

"We're against unrestricted science and experimentation," he said. "We believe cloning is at the heart of embryonic stem cell research."

— Chris De Witt, a spokesman for Cure Michigan said Proposal 2 does not change the state's ban on cloning.

"Embryonic stem cell research has been described as the gold standard as one of best opportunities for finding cures for multiple diseases," he said. "It provides for safe and ethical research as permitted under federal law."

"Maybe not in my lifetime, but eventually, the majority of therapies and cures will be coming from genetic therapy," said Joe Schwarz, 70, a doctor and former Republican congressman from Michigan who chairs the CureMichigan campaign.

Michigan's current stem cell laws are among the nation's most restrictive. Some embryonic stem cell research is allowed in Michigan, but only on stem cell lines already established by researchers in other states.

The stem cell measure, on the ballot as Proposal 2, would change state law to allow people to donate embryos left over from fertility treatments. Those embryos, not suitable for implantation, would otherwise be thrown away as medical waste.

An opposition group says the proposal would take away Michigan lawmakers' ability to regulate the emerging discipline.

"There are a lot of reasons to vote 'no' on this, and one is that it would lead to unregulated research," said David Doyle, a spokesman for an opposition group called Michigan Citizens Against Unrestricted Science and Experimentation.

Supporters counter that research using human embryos is regulated by federal law. And the proposal spells out some other limitations that would be specific to Michigan.

The embryos would have to be donated. Buying or selling human embryos for the research would be illegal. Stem cells couldn't be taken from embryos more than 14 days after cell division begins.

The measure takes on added significance because of possible upcoming changes to federal law.

President Bush restricted the use of federal money going to embryonic stem cell research. But both Republican John McCain and Democrat Barack Obama have said they support relaxing federal restrictions.

That could result in more grant money and life sciences jobs in states prepared to capitalize on the changes. California, for example, already plans to invest $3 billion on the research.

A study done for the Michigan Prospect, a Lansing-area think tank with several Democratic directors, suggests that even a 1 percent boost in biotech employment from stem cell research would lead to more than 400 new biotech jobs, not counting potential spinoff jobs. It estimates a 5 percent boost in biotech employment would bring more than 2,000 jobs.

Stem cell ballot battles are relatively rare in other states.

In 2006, Missouri voters approved an amendment protecting stem cell research by a narrow margin, 51 percent to 49 percent. Efforts to undo the proposal began almost immediately, although the counterproposals did not make the 2008 ballot.

In Florida, two competing stem cell proposals failed to make the ballot this year. One proposal would have banned state funding of embryonic stem cell research, while the other would have required the state to provide $20 million a year for such research.

Ballot wording

PROPOSAL 1

A LEGISLATIVE INITIATIVE TO PERMIT THE USE AND CULTIVATION OF MARIJUANA FOR SPECIFIED MEDICAL CONDITIONS

The proposed law would:

— Permit physician approved use of marijuana by registered patients with debilitating medical conditions including cancer, glaucoma, HIV, AIDS, hepatitis C, MS and other conditions as may be approved by the Department of Community Health.

— Permit registered individuals to grow limited amounts of marijuana for qualifying patients in an enclosed, locked facility.

— Require Department of Community Health to establish an identification card system for patients qualified to use marijuana and individuals qualified to grow marijuana.

— Permit registered and unregistered patients and primary caregivers to assert medical reasons for using marijuana as a defense to any prosecution involving marijuana.

Should this proposal be adopted?

PROPOSAL 2

A PROPOSAL TO AMEND THE STATE CONSTITUTION TO ADDRESS HUMAN EMBRYO AND HUMAN EMBRYONIC STEM CELL RESEARCH IN MICHIGAN

The proposed constitutional amendment would:

— Expand use of human embryos for any research permitted under federal law subject to the following limits:

— the embryos:

— are created for fertility treatment purposes;

— are not suitable for implantation or are in excess of clinical needs;

— would be discarded unless used for research;

— were donated by the person seeking fertility treatment.

— Provide that stem cells cannot be taken from human embryos more than 14 days after cell division begins.

— Prohibit any person from selling or purchasing human embryos for stem cell research.

— Prohibit state and local laws that prevent, restrict or discourage stem cell research, future therapies and cures.

Should this proposal be adopted?

Should medical marijuana be legal?

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan may become the latest state to let some severely ill patients use marijuana to treat pain, nausea and other symptoms.

If the Nov. 4 ballot proposal is approved, Michigan law would allow doctors to recommend marijuana for patients with cancer, glaucoma, HIV, AIDS and other conditions the state agrees are covered under the law.

Those patients would register with the state and could legally buy, grow and use small amounts of marijuana to relieve pain, nausea, appetite loss and other symptoms.

Similar medical-marijuana laws have been enacted in a dozen states in recent years, most by ballot initiative.

While the measure would remove state-level penalties for registered patients using marijuana, it wouldn't create legal dispensaries for the drug, nor would it affect the federal ban on marijuana.

But the Drug Enforcement Administration and other federal agencies are focused on battling large-scale drug trafficking operations, not small-scale users, said DEA Detroit office spokesman Rich Isaacson. Medical-marijuana patients typically would not be targeted by the DEA, he said.

The Michigan initiative, on the ballot as Proposal 1, is spearheaded by the Ferndale-based Coalition for Compassionate Care. Spokeswoman Dianne Byrum says the law would apply to "a very small percentage" of the population, perhaps less than half of 1 percent, and would not affect state narcotics laws except for patients who have a doctor's recommendation to use cannabis.

"When nothing else works, this is an option for them," she said.

The measure is opposed by Gov. Jennifer Granholm, a Democrat, and Attorney General Mike Cox, a Republican.

Dr. George Wagone, retired obstetrician and gynecologist, said that marijuana was the most successful medicine his wife found in her unsuccessful fight against cancer last year.

"Everyone in her situation should be allowed to do this legally," he said.

Terry Newton, the director of Harbor Hall a substance abuse center in Petoskey, disagreed that marijuana was needed to help patients cope with pain.

"There are plenty of other good medications to treat people," he said. "This is slippery slope."

A report by the independent Citizens Research Council of Michigan says the initiative, if passed, could create some confusion for local law enforcement officials when it comes to telling the difference between legal medical use of marijuana and illegal recreational use.

Challenger looks to restore balance

Ed White
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — The fourth floor of Wayne County's Murphy Hall of Justice isn't a place to settle fender-benders.

Judge Diane Marie Hathaway handles rapes, robberies and murder. When she recently tried to pick a jury in a sexual-assault case, some people said they had a history of abuse, too.

"You've never told anyone until just now?" Hathaway gently asked a woman, glasses perched near the tip of her nose.

Now, after nearly 16 years on the bench, the circuit court judge wants voters to send her to the Michigan Supreme Court. The Democratic nominee is casting herself as a populist standing up for the little guy in a court where she believes the "wealthy and corporations" have too much influence.

"We need to restore justice to the Supreme Court," Hathaway says.

She says she's not the only one frustrated by the decisions of the court, where four Republican justices, including her opponent, Chief Justice Clifford Taylor, often vote together to form a majority.

"People have walked out with me after meetings and told me how they were appalled because cases are being thrown out without arguments," she says. "People from across the state — Democrats, Republicans and independents — are fed up."

She's more critical of how the Supreme Court handles civil cases than how it rules in criminal appeals.

One example she cites is a 4-3 decision issued in 2007 that dismissed a lawsuit over a fire that killed six children in public housing. The fire started because of faulty wiring, but the court said the Detroit Housing Commission was immune to liability under state law.

It's a case that can stir emotions among people who might otherwise see the court as a distant arm of government.

"Most of the decisions are 4-3," Hathaway says. "One justice can make a huge difference. ... I want to make it a people's court again."

Hathaway

But there's a key issue for the challenger: Do voters share Hathaway's concern or even care who sits in Lansing?

The race will be near the end of the ballot. There are no party affiliations listed, but Taylor is identified as the incumbent.

People who go with a straight party ticket and then leave the booth won't even weigh in on the race. Hathaway acknowledges that half the voters typically don't vote for Supreme Court justice, but her campaign slogan urges them to move down the ballot: "Vote All the Way — Vote Hathaway."

When it comes to decisions from the state's highest court, "the public doesn't pay attention to the results the way lawyers do," says Robert Sedler, who teaches constitutional law at Wayne State University.

Hathaway is getting her name out with help from the Michigan Democratic Party, which began campaigning against Taylor long before she became the nominee in September.

The party purchased Taylor's state-owned car when the justices and Appeals Court judges gave up their vehicles in 2007 as part of belt-tightening by state government. Party Chairman Mark Brewer says the Ford Five Hundred was a sign of Taylor's abuse of "perks and power," although Democratic justices drove public cars, too.

Unions, which complain the GOP-dominated court is unfriendly to workers, also are working to get Hathaway elected. That helps make up for some of Taylor's large advantage in campaign cash.

The 54-year-old Grosse Pointe Park resident is the daughter of a Detroit police officer and the mother of five grown children.

She worked as an X-ray technician at Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital before getting her law degree at age 33.

"I was always interested in the law but interested in medicine also," Hathaway says. "I have two brothers who are doctors. But after I saw doctors at the hospital who didn't sleep for 36 hours, I didn't think I could do it."

In 1992, after five years as a prosecutor in Macomb County, she finished first among 12 candidates running for three seats on the Wayne County Circuit Court.

Her ex-husband, Richard Hathaway, is a former judge. She's extremely close to another judge, Amy Hathaway, her former sister-in-law.

"We call each other sisters," Diane Hathaway says.

William Winters III of Livonia, president of the Wayne County Criminal Defense Bar Association, says Hathaway has "great judicial temperament."

"It means a judge can maintain his or her composure, issue fair rulings, not fly off the handle — the type of calm, deliberative person that we would all want to be in front of," says Winters, speaking for himself and not the lawyers' group.

Taylor seeks another Supreme Court term

David Eggert
Associated Press Writer

LANSING — Chief Justice Clifford Taylor is at an age when he could retire to a nice life reading about Abraham Lincoln and helping his wife garden at their rural lakeside home.

Instead, the 65-year-old is running for a final eight years on the Michigan Supreme Court because preserving the court's conservative philosophy is so important to him. Taylor has aligned with three other Republican-nominated justices to overturn precedents they say were wrongly created by liberal judges dismissive of lawmakers' wishes.

"We are largely remaking the legal culture in this state to return it to a traditional, jurisprudential approach — which is that courts interpret the law, they don't make it," Taylor says. "If I can get another term ... we can really fully expose a whole generation of Michigan lawyers to this approach to the law and perhaps internalize it to some degree."

He expects a fierce battle from trial lawyers, labor unions and Democrats who see Taylor as part of an activist court on the far fringes of the American legal system. Taylor bristles at being assailed as a stooge of corporate interests who doesn't give regular people their day before a jury.

He says allegations of favoritism for certain parties over others distort what's really going on: Judges deferring to policymakers.

"This approach to the law is not pro-business, it's not pro-labor, it's not pro-Republican, it's not pro-Democrat. It's pro-law," Taylor says.

He has been on the state's highest court since 1997, when he was appointed by his friend, Republican Gov. John Engler. Taylor's wife, Lucille, was Engler's chief legal counsel.

Taylor won election in 1998 to finish a partial term and got re-elected for an eight year term in an expensive and bitter 2000 race. He can't run again in eight years because judicial candidates must be younger than 70.

Today, he works in a spacious office in the top floor of the sparkling Michigan Hall of Justice near the state Capitol. He has spent his entire legal career within a four-block area in downtown Lansing.

There was a brief stint in the county prosecutor's office, 20 years as a lawyer in private practice and five years on the Michigan Court of Appeals.

Taylor

The son of a Presbyterian minister turned school teacher, Taylor attended Flint public schools at the height of the auto town's prosperity and graduated from the University of Michigan. He met his wife when both were law students at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. — they sat alphabetically, and her last name started with an "S."

In law school, his father's heart attack forced Taylor to take night classes so he could earn extra money to pay for his education. Slightly fewer credit hours threatened his draft deferment during the Vietnam War. So Taylor persuaded the Flint draft board to keep his deferment intact by vowing to join the military after graduation.

He kept his promise and served in the Navy, where he was a line officer on a destroyer escort and later a staff officer for NATO's supreme allied commander of the Atlantic. The Taylors settled in the Lansing area after his discharge.

After failed runs for Congress in the 1970s and for state attorney general in 1990, Taylor joined the appeals court in 1992 when Engler appointed him to fill an open judgeship. The former governor says Taylor has been an exceptional judge.

"I think he has conducted himself with great dignity and great honor in an at times difficult environment," says Engler, now president of the National Association of Manufacturers. "The people of Michigan take politics seriously. He's been in the majority and minority. I think he's been very consistent with his philosophy and approach."

In his limited spare time, Taylor likes to read and go on walks. He recently read historian Doris Kearns Goodwin's book on Lincoln, "Team of Rivals."

As chief justice, Taylor says he has continued efforts to post rulings online, hold oral arguments in courtrooms outside Lansing and change jury practices. Citing a decline in lawsuits and appeals, he has unsuccessfully proposed eliminating trial and appeals judgeships through attrition to save money. Democrats see partisan motivations behind the proposal.

When a newspaper last year scrutinized taxpayer-funded vehicles used by Supreme Court justices and others for work and personal use — a perk dating to the 1960s — Taylor gave back his car and got other judges to join him.

Budget issues face state university candidates

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — With the state's ongoing budget and economic problems, money continues to be one of the biggest issues facing the boards that govern Michigan's public universities.

Figuring out how to hold down expenses is among the main responsibilities of the state's three elected university governing boards, which serve the University of Michigan, Michigan State University and Wayne State University. Each board has two openings to fill in the Nov. 4 election.

The boards have general supervision over the universities and their funds.

When they recently announced higher tuition costs for the 2008-09 school year, many school officials said the increases were necessary in part because the state has cut taxpayer aid to universities over the past five years. That put pressure on them to raise student tuition.

Public university tuition and fees rose 11 percent in Michigan last year compared with 6 percent at private schools. Room and board and other costs add further to the typical college student's bill.

Nine candidates are competing in each of the three board races, with the top two vote-getters in each contest winning eight-year terms.

One incumbent on each board chose not to run for re-election.

Running for seats on the University of Michigan Board of Regents are Republicans Susan Brown and John G. LaFond; Democrats Laurence B. Deitch, the incumbent, and Denise Ilitch; Ellis Boal of the Green Party; Libertarians Eric L. Larson and Kerry L. Morgan; and Richard Ryskamp and Joe Sanger of the U.S. Taxpayers Party.

Six Democrats and two Republicans make up the eight voting members of the board. Dietch is running for re-election. Another Democrat, Rebecca McGowan, a member first elected in 1992 and then re-elected in 2000, decided not to seek a third term.

Seeking election to the Michigan State University Board of Trustees are Democrats Dianne Byrum and Diann Woodard; Republicans Lisa Bouchard and incumbent George Scott Romney, the brother of one-time presidential hopeful Mitt Romney; Libertarians David A. Brown and Joseph Rosenquist; Robert Gale and Crystal Van Sickle of the U.S. Taxpayers Party, and Therese Marie of the Green Party.

There are five Democrats and three Republicans on the board. Romney is running for re-election. Democrat Dorothy V. Gonzales was not nominated this year at the state party's convention for another term.

Vying for spots on the Wayne State University Board of Governors are Republicans Torion J. Bridges and Danialle Karmanos; Democrats Paul Massaron, an incumbent, and Gary S. Pollard; Margaret Guttshall of the Green Party; Rick Butkowski and Terry Haines of the U.S. Taxpayers party; and Libertarians Dan Keizer and Nicole Michalak.

State Board of Ed candidates discuss graduation rates

GRAND RAPIDS (AP) — One of the biggest issues facing the State Board of Education following the Nov. 4 election will be the fiscal well-being of Detroit Public Schools, which is grappling with a roughly $400 million budget deficit.

In mid-September, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan declared that Michigan's largest local school district has a "serious financial problem." The designation could eventually lead to an emergency financial manager being appointed to make its decisions.

The designation was the latest in a series of financial problems for Detroit schools being monitored by the state school board, which has two openings to fill in the election.

In all, nine board candidates will be on the statewide ballot, seeking the seats held by incumbent Democrats John Austin and Kathleen Straus, both of whom are running for re-election. The top two vote-getters will win the two eight-year terms.

The other candidates include Republicans Scott Jenkins and Richard Zeile, Dwain Reynolds III of the Green Party, Karen Adams and Gail M. Graeser of the U.S. Taxpayers Party and Libertarians Bill Hall and Jeff A. Steinport.

Six Democrats and two Republican make up the eight voting members on the board. It has a number of supervisory duties in connection with local school districts and community colleges, and indirectly coordinates duties for the four-year state colleges and universities.

Its eight voting members also select and appoint the state superintendent of public instruction, who administers the Michigan Department of Education.

A report this past summer by the Washington-based Council of the Great City Schools, a coalition of 66 of the nation's largest urban public school systems, found Detroit schools lacked a long-term finance plan and financial policies and procedures.

"We've really been pushing the state superintendent to do something about Detroit schools," said Straus, 84, of Detroit.

Many people seem interested in improving the school district but few appear to be "absolutely committed" to doing whatever it takes to make the transformation, said Jenkins, 41, of Williamston.

"I think the financial difficulties that Detroit Public Schools are facing are really the symptom of a larger problem," he said. "The larger problem is the safety and the quality of the education provided to the students. Until the school district can stabilize its financial situation and the educational process, they're going to continue to lose students at a pretty heavy clip."

Austin, 46, of Ann Arbor, said he hopes it won't be necessary for the state to bring in an outsider to manage the finances of the Detroit district.

"My best sense is this process is likely to produce some good teamwork with Detroit," he said. "That may get the job done, in terms of a budget plan that is acceptable."

Detroit Board of Education President Carla Scott and schools Superintendent Connie Calloway said Flanagan's designation was in the district's best interest.

Another major issue facing the new state board will be Michigan's declining high school graduation rate, which was calculated at 75 percent statewide for 2007 by the Center for Educational Performance and Information. Individual districts' rates varied around the state.

Statewide graduation rates were above 85 percent in each of the two previous years. But those calculations used different methodology that didn't necessarily require regular diplomas within four years and didn't track individual students as accurately.

Fewer high schools now meet the No Child Left Behind requirement that schools have an 80 percent graduation rate. The rate for Detroit schools was 58 percent under the new formula.

Zeile, 53, Detroit, Republican said the issue of graduation rates is often sensationalized and people need to "look behind the numbers that are thrown out there."

Two run for open seat on Michigan Court of Appeals

LANSING (AP) — Ingham County Circuit Judge Paula Manderfield and Flint-based trial lawyer Michael Kelly got an unusual chance this election year to run for an open seat on the Michigan Court of Appeals.

It's rare for incumbent judges to lose re-election, so challenging a sitting judge is often an exercise in futility. But when Court of Appeals Judge Bill Schuette decided to step down at the end of his term, it opened up one of 28 judgeships.

The winner of the seat will be chosen by voters in the 4th District, which spans 58 of the state's 83 counties and extends north from Lansing to include the Thumb region, northern lower Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. Appeals judges are elected to districts but serve statewide.

Though they will appear on the nonpartisan section of the ballot, either Manderfield or Kelly likely will tilt the conservative-leaning court a bit more to the left.

Manderfield, 55, promotes her 15 years as a judge in Lansing handling criminal cases, family law and issues involving state agencies.

"You're basically judging the judges," she said of being an appellate judge. "It'd be difficult to do if you haven't worked in the trenches."

Kelly, 46, says over half the judges on the appeals court and Michigan Supreme Court were never trial judges. He has worked 19 years as plaintiff's lawyer in auto no-fault, negligence and other civil cases.

Kelly said the court "needs people who have represented real people, who haven't lost touch with what the whole system is about and who it's for."

Kelly has an Irish surname that should give him an edge in the low-profile race. Marilyn Kelly (no relation) is on the Michigan Supreme Court, and Frank Kelley was Michigan's longtime attorney general.

"He has a great name to run on," Manderfield said, adding that she's "running scared." She says more than 100 judges have endorsed her, along with other current or former law enforcement officials such as Frank Kelley.

Appeals judges earn $151,441 annually.

All four districts have seats coming open, but the only position being contested is the one sought by Kelly and Manderfield.

Charlevoix County asking for road tax

Steve Zucker
439-9346 • szucker@petoskeynews.com

BOYNE CITY — When voters in Charlevoix County go to the polls on Nov. 4, they will decide the fate of a 15-year, one-mill tax levy to pay for road repairs in the county.

In 2006, county voters turned down a similar five-year, one-mill levy by a margin of about 150 votes.

This new proposal was prompted in part by a citizens group called the Concerned Citizens of Charlevoix County that formed in late 2007 asking government officials to do something about the poor conditions of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road — the county's main east-west road.

Bay Township resident Jerry Matelski, who lives on the road, is one of the founding members of the citizens group. For months, he and members of the group have been begging everyone from the Charlevoix County Road Commission on up to members of the state and federal legislatures to find a way to fix what they say is a dangerous road.

The answer they've received is: "There's no money."

LOCAL ROAD	ESTIMATED COST OF REPAIR
Ellsworth Road	$2,500,000.00
Boyne City-Charlevoix Road	$5,000,000.00
Camp Ten Road	$2,000,000.00
Deer Lake Road	$1,000,000.00
River Road	$1,500,000.00

Road	Miles
Camp Ten Road	6.39 miles
Springvale Road	5.45 miles
Six Mile Lake Road	3.38 miles
Kings Highway	4.04 miles
Deer Lake Road	3.47 miles
Korthase Road	2.65 miles
River Road	2.20 miles
Marion Center Road	7.12 miles
Norwood Road	1.76 miles
Penninsula Road	1.5 miles
Ferry Road	1.97 miles
Slashing Road	2.59 miles
Chandler Hill Road	1.30 miles
For total reconstruction
BC-Charlevoix Road	13.73 miles
Ellsworth Road	5.59 miles

Road commission manager Pat Harmon concedes that sections of the road — and many others in the county — are in desperate need of repair or reconstruction, but increasing costs and decreasing revenue from state gasoline taxes has left the road commission struggling to pay for running snowplows in the winter.

The road commission's only other source of money for major road projects is a pool of money allocated annually from the state and federal government. But that money must be shared among the road commission, the three cities and Boyne Falls and the Michigan Department of Transportation.

Harmon has said that relying on that money, it will likely be 2012 or 2013 before the first four-mile section of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road can be rebuilt.

Harmon recently prepared a list of county roads that are most in need of repair — 61.34 miles in all including about 13 miles of total reconstruction for Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. That's an additional 17 miles from the list presented to voters prior to the 2006 vote. Harmon said more roads were added to the list not only because they are in need of work, but also in hopes of appealing to voters throughout the county.

Two of the most outspoken opponents of the proposal have been Eveline Township Supervisor John Vondran and Bay Township resident Bob Taylor. Both spoke against the millage proposal at a recent Boyne City Chamber of Commerce-sponsored forum on the issue.

Both expressed concerns about how the money would be spent and the added financial burden it would put on residents during difficult economic times.

Of particular concern to both men was the notion that road commission officials might use bonds to pay for the road work to be done.

That is, road officials would borrow money to get the work done sooner and then pay off the debt using future income from the millage.

"We have people right now who don't know where their next meal is going to come from. People are losing their jobs and can't even afford to buy gas," Taylor said. "This is not the time to put this burden on the people in the county. People are hurting really bad. Are roads more important than people's lives?

"People can slow down on the roads a little. We may just have to live with it (the road conditions) for a while."

Taylor is also concerned that the added financial burden of the county-wide millage could cause voters to not support future renewal requests for road millages that many townships already have.

Although the ballot language for the proposal does not discuss the bonding issue, road commissioner Keith Ogden said the road commission, and nearly every public official he's spoken with has said they would not support using bonding to pay for the road work should the millage pass. Instead, he said, most support a pay-as-you-go plan.

Ogden said the plan is to appoint a committee made up of representatives of the road commission, the county board of commissioners, townships and perhaps a member of the business community who would be charged with prioritizing the list of roads to be repaired.

The Boyne City Chamber of Commerce recently endorsed the proposal.

In the endorsement, the chamber's board president Kathy Anderson said, "Nobody likes to pay more taxes, but it has become obvious that many of our roads are in terrible condition and this is the only way we are going to fix them. It's an important issue that can affect tourism, home prices, safety, getting to and from work and our ability to do business."

The one-mill levy would cost the owner of a home with a taxable value of $100,000 (taxable value is typically about half of the home's actual value) $100 per year.

If the proposal passes, any road millage money collected in the cities of Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City and the village of Boyne Falls would stay within those communities to be used for road work.

The three cities and Boyne Falls account for about a quarter of the county's taxable value and thus, would receive the same proportion of the road millage revenue.

In 2009 the millage is expected to generate a little more than $2 million — about $1.5 million would go to the road commission and the rest would be split up among the three cities and Boyne Falls.

U.S. Sen. Carl Levin faces Republican opponent

LANSING (AP) — With nearly 30 years on the job, Carl Levin has spent more time as a U.S. senator than anyone in Michigan history.

He's not ready to quit yet. The Detroit Democrat is seeking his sixth consecutive six-year term representing Michigan this November. He's heavily favored to defeat Republican challenger Jack Hoogendyk, a relatively unknown state lawmaker from Kalamazoo.

Talk of possible retirement surfaced before Levin's 1996 and 2002 re-election races. But not this time around.

"I felt very strongly I should" run again, the 74-year-old Levin said. "Equally important, my wife did too."

Levin has been married to wife Barbara since 1961, long before launching his political career. He practiced and taught law before joining the Detroit City Council in 1970.

Levin edged incumbent Republican Robert Griffin in the 1978 U.S. Senate race and has been building his political power base ever since. He's now chairman of the U.S. Senate Armed Services Committee, where as a frequent critic of the Iraq war, he has clashed with Republican President George W. Bush.

Levin

Hoogendyk is the Republican nominee in part because Levin — who won more than 60 percent of the vote in 2002 — scared off better-known candidates with his relatively high approval ratings and campaign fundraising ability. But Hoogendyk hasn't shied away from his underdog status, noting he's known as a political outsider even in Lansing.

The potential for changing Washington's political power structure has given Levin fresh motivation in the 2008 election cycle.

Hoogendyk

Democrats hold a razor-thin 51-49 edge over Republicans in the Senate and expect to pick up a few more seats at the GOP's expense this fall, nudging the Democrats closer to a 60-seat filibuster-proof edge.

The Senate's effectiveness may be shaped in part by the outcome of the presidential race between Democratic Sen. Barack Obama of Illinois and Republican Sen. John McCain of Arizona.

Levin never misses an opportunity to weigh in on that race, mostly by blasting Republican policies he says have contributed to Michigan's woeful economy. The state has had the nation's highest average annual unemployment since 2006.

One of the Levin's top concerns is the loss of manufacturing jobs. He said Michigan and the U.S. needs to continue diversifying its economy, but that policies are needed to help protect manufacturing jobs.

"There's a lot of damage done by Bush's economic policies, tax policies, trade policies," Levin said. "A lot of repairing needs to be done. I want to be part of that repair."

Hoogendyk says Levin has been part of the problem.

"He says it's all George Bush's fault. ... I think a lot of people are saying it's time to quit the finger-pointing and take some personal responsibility for this," Hoogendyk said. "Carl Levin has been in Washington for 30 years."

Hoogendyk, 53, was in sales and marketing man-

Elsenheimer challenged by Saltonstall, Dean in 105th

Rep. Kevin Elsenheimer, 43, has two opponents in his campaign for a third term, Democratic candidate Connie Saltonstall, 63, and Libertarian candidate Greg Dean, 44.

Elsenheimer

The Republican incumbent said the state's economy is the biggest issue at the state level and he said he plans to rely on his work with other legislators as well as organizations like the state's chamber of commerce, farm bureau, bankers association and sheriff's association to put Michigan in the best position possible.

Saltonstall

Dean

"I've build relationships that will lend themselves to be being part of the solution," he said. "I know the system and I know how to get things done."

Saltonstall has worked on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, the Charlevoix commission on aging, and her local school board. She said the state's health care plans need to be reformed, along with the education system and the state's tax structure. Saltonstall also advocates for stronger legislation to protect Michigan's environment.

"We need to look at who is paying and who is not and make the taxes fair," she said. "We need to protect our environment otherwise there's not reason to come here to Northern Michigan."

Dean said he favors less government, more personal responsibility and greater instances of local control. He said the state's primary responsibilities are to protect natural resources and maintain infrastructure.

"I believe in keeping government out of the boardroom and the bedroom," he said. "Government is not the answer. The answer is amongst ourselves and in our own communities."

McDowell in 107th faces conservative opponent

House seat up

State Rep. Gary McDowell is facing off against newcomer Alex Strobehn for the 107th state representative seat.

McDowell is running for his third term as a state representative, highlighting his political and small business experience at both the state and county level.

McDowell

McDowell, 56, a Democrat, favors a new tax on car rentals to provide permanent funds for tourism promotion, expanding the state's health care policies and reforming the state's prison system. First elected to state office in 2004 following a lengthy run on the Chippewa County Board of Commissioners, McDowell said he wants to continue his work on the behalf of his constituents.

Strobehn

"I truly enjoy this job and there are a lot of things on my plate," he said. "If there was a time when we need to come together, this is it. The issues are too important."

Strobehn, a senior at Lake Superior State University, said he does not favor any tax increases. Strobehn, 21, a Republican, said he would cut his own salary if elected and also suggested cutting the salaries of state workers to bring spending under control.

"I'm willing to cut where I can to make sure taxpayers get what they deserve," he said.

Emmet County Commission District 2

Two candidates are running for the Emmet County Commission's District 2 seat.

Incumbent Leroy Gregory, 72, is running for one more term as county commissioner. He has served on the commission on three separate terms since 1973.

Gregory, a Republican, said following his appointment to the board's historical commission this year, he wants to be a part of the reopening of the McGulpin Point Lighthouse scheduled for July, 2009.

Gregory

Current supervisor of Friendship Township, Dale Scott, 58, is running against Gregory with no-party affiliation.

Scott

Scott said he wants to improve the interface between the county board and the townships that are not currently represented on the board.

Charlevoix County Commission District 3 pits experienced pair

Two candidates are in the running for the Charlevoix County Commission's 3rd District.

Ronald Reinhardt, 68, is running for re-election to his fourth term as county commissioner. Reinhardt, a Republican, said his top priorities will remain preserving agricultural and land conservation interests on the board. Reinhardt also said the board must work to find funding to fix local roads, whether voters approve the upcoming millage or not.

Reinhardt

Webster

Melrose Township supervisor Mike Webster, 49, is challenging Reinhardt. Webster, a Democrat, said he wants to push the board to be more forward thinking. He agreed with Reinhardt that more must be done to correct the county's roads, and said protecting the local environment would be his top priority.

3 seek trustee posts in Resort

Ryan Bentley

439-9342 · rbentley@petoskeynews.com

Resort Township voters will pick from among three candidates to fill the two township trustee seats available in the Nov. 4 election.

Incumbent Don Caird and fellow Republican Dean Carper are seeking trustee seats along with independent candidate Shawn Wonnacott. The top two vote-getters will be elected for four-year terms.

Caird

Caird, 63, is retired from work with the Social Security Administration and has served as a Resort trustee since 2004.

"It's always been my goal to honestly and fairly manage the taxpayers money that they provide us," he said. "I think we've done a pretty good job so far."

Caird's public involvement also has included six years on the Petoskey school board during the 1980s, as well as appointed positions on Resort's planning commission and zoning board of appeals and the Emmet County Planning Commission.

In Caird's view, some of the most significant issues facing Resort include getting East Park reopened following a recent environmental cleanup and continuing to address road-construction and fire department needs.

Carper, 70, is retired from a 40-year career in management for propane companies. He currently serves in an appointed position on Resort's board of review and has chaired Emmet County's economic development and brownfield redevelopment boards.

Carper also serves on the boards of the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, the Emmet County Veterans' Council board and a state veterans' trust fund. He's been part of a state response team for propane emergencies and a committee that raised funds to build North Central Michigan College's Student and Community Resource Center. He also has held leadership positions with the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce, Michigan Jobs Council, U.S. 131 Area Development Association and Little Traverse Association of Home Builders.

Carper

Carper believes experience and expertise in numerous fields would serve him well as a trustee, and noted that he'd serve with no hidden agenda.

"I do not make seat-of-the-pants judgments," he said. "I study, analyze and look at the facts of where we should be four or five years from now."

Key issues that Carper sees for Resort include maintaining the township's rural setting amid growth, improving firefighting capabilities in an effort to boost property-insurance ratings, staying current on homeland security mandates for local government and keeping roads in good repair.

Wonnacott, 32, is seeking public office for the first time. He's been self-employed since 1996, currently operating a welding and steel fabrication business.

If elected, Wonnacott believes he'd bring a down-to-earth approach and the perspective of a younger generation to the township board.

Wonnacott

"I think that my youth would complement the board," he added.

Wonnacott, who served for six years on the Resort-Bear Creek Fire Department, believes that experience also would be useful on the board. He believes it's important for the township to ensure that the fire department has the facilities, equipment and training it needs.

Along with a proposed fire substation on the township's south side, Wonnacott sees a larger township hall/office as another building project that the board will need to consider in the coming years. He also sees completion of East Park's reconstruction and continued efforts to repair local roads as priorities for Resort.

Bear Creek treasurer candidates have experience

Ryan Bentley

439-9342 · rbentley@petoskeynews.com

When Bear Creek Township voters cast ballots in the Nov. 4 election, they'll find one contested race at the township level — for the treasurer's seat.

Suellen Anderson, a Democrat, and Connie Golding, a Republican, are vying to become treasurer. The winner will replace Gary VanHorn, who decided not to pursue re-election.

Anderson, 50, works as an administrative assistant at the Women's Resource Center, and previously was employed as a secretary at the Bear Creek Township office.

She has held three appointed public offices, serving on the Bear Creek Township Planning Commission since 2001 and the Emmet County Planning Commission since 2005, and on the Springvale-Bear Creek Sewer Authority board from 1992 until 2001.

Anderson

Golding

"I like to be involved with my community," she said. "It was just a natural process for me to look at that (treasurer's) position."

Guiding local growth and ensuring that roads and transportation resources meet local needs are among the issues Anderson sees for the township.

Anderson said she'd bring relevant experience to the treasurer's position. As township secretary, she handled tasks such as sewer billing and taking in payments. While serving on the sewer authority, Anderson became familiar with its financial operations.

The treasurer's seat would be the first public office for Golding, 49. After working for Emmet County for six years, Golding became Bear Creek's building department secretary eight years ago. In addition to this secretarial work, she has worked on property tax collections for the past two years as the township treasurer's assistant.

"I will be available to attend meetings to keep up on the issues at hand," she said. "I have worked the last two years to bring stability to the treasurer's office with regular office hours and availability for questions to help the public any way I can.

"I have put everything on the computer and have been collecting tax payments and keeping up on the daily duties involved to keep the treasurer's office up to date and working smoothly."

Regarding transportation, Golding would like to see the township follow recommendations from a recent study, such as using existing roads where possible in improving local traffic flow.

Concerning library service, Golding believes the township's contract with the Petoskey Public Library currently seems to be working well.

While she'd be willing to consider a district library arrangement for Petoskey and surrounding areas at some point, Golding said she'd want to ensure that township voters could decide for themselves whether Bear Creek should be part of it. Current township board members recently decided against pursuing a district because the vote to form it would be decided through a combined tally of city and township ballots.

Incumbents in the other four Bear Creek board seats are running unopposed for re-election this fall. They include supervisor Dennis Keiser, a Democrat, and clerk Judy Mays and trustees Joe Hoffman Jr. and Bert Notestine, all Republicans.

Springvale tax issues back on ballot

Springvale Township voters will be asked on the Tuesday, Nov. 4, election ballot to reconsider firefighting and road-repair tax proposals which got rejected last August.

Through one of the proposals, voters will decide whether the township can continue to collect a property tax levy to support fire department operations, maintenance and equipment needs. Springvale proposes to collect the tax for four years at a rate of one mill.

The other proposal asks voters to consider approving an additional mill in taxes for four years to accelerate the township's plans for local road upkeep.

A mill is equivalent to $1 in taxes for each $1,000 of a property's taxable value. The taxable value for a piece of real estate typically is about half of its market worth.

Township supervisor Tom Bernard described the fire proposal, which is expected to generate about $86,000 in its first year, as crucial to the fire department's survival.

"If that is not approved, then we will have to close the fire department," he said.

Before the fire millage's rejection in the August primary election, Bernard noted that voters had been approving this type of levy periodically for four decades.

If the fire millage is rejected Nov. 4, Bernard said the township would be forced to shut down the fire department within months. Even if firefighting operations cease, Bernard noted that Springvale would still be obligated to make payments on the fire building loan through the general fund.

If approved, the road proposal would generate about $86,000 to help fund Springvale officials' plans for repairing and improving all of the community's local roads in the next few years.

Springvale and many other Emmet County townships already collect one mill in taxes to cover local road needs. They've been given this ability through countywide ballot proposals, the most recent of which was approved in August.

If Springvale's separate road millage proposal is approved Nov. 4, Bernard noted that the proceeds would be combined with the existing levy to cover local road needs.

Provided that voters support the new levy — and renew it in 2012 — Bernard expects that all of Springvale's roads could be brought into good repair in four to six years.

It's too early to tell the seque. .e Springvale would use in repairing the roads, the supervisor said, noting that the township often tries to coordinate construction schedules with the Emmet County Road Commission and neighboring communities. But officials likely would try to get roads which are in the worst shape taken care of first.

Three vying to replace longtime Resort Township treasurer

Ryan Bentley

439-9342 · rbentley@petoskeynews.com

A three-way race has taken shape for the Resort Township treasurer's seat in this November's election.

Carolyn Jankowski, a Republican and current Resort trustee, is pursuing the position along with Suzanne Coveyou and Rufus Welsheimer, two independent candidates making their first runs for public office.

The winner will replace longtime treasurer Marv Veurink, who decided not to pursue re-election this year.

Coveyou, 45, believes her work and educational backgrounds — including accounting and clerical experience — would serve her well as treasurer. She currently serves as operations manager at Central Industrial Manufacturing in Harbor Springs, having worked there 11 years. She previously held a management position at what is now Charter Communications in Petoskey, and earned an associate's degree in computers from Muskegon Business College.

Jankowski

Coveyou

Welsheimer

In addition, Coveyou has been involved with organizations serving the organ transplant community. She is co-coordinator for the Organ Transplant Support Group, which was founded by her family and assists Northern Michigan residents before and after transplant surgeries, and she is a volunteer speaker for Gift of Life.

"I consider myself a pretty good speaker," she said. "I have 20-plus years working in accounting and doing things with computers."

If elected, Coveyou said she'd like to help keep Resort a family-friendly community. She'd like to see the township continue to expand on park and playground offerings, and promote traffic safety along local roads.

Jankowski, 55, has been a Resort trustee since 2004. She also believes her work experience and educational credentials would be relevant in the treasurer's position.

"I have worked as a retail store manager, secretary at the Women's Resource Center's Safe House, human resources coordinator for a home health care agency, and a bookkeeper. I now work part-time at a medical office. My work experience is diverse with each position offering a new challenge and learning experience."

As she grew up, Jankowski helped out in the office of her family's construction business. She obtained a bachelor's degree in business management from Central Michigan University, and has since taken law, accounting and computer-related classes at North Central Michigan College for personal enrichment.

"With the economic instability of our country, I will carefully watch your township funds," she said. "If elected, I plan to meet with an officer of each bank to determine if our funds are invested in the best way possible, discuss the stability of their bank, listen to their recommendations and determine if any changes are necessary."

Jankowski sees several priorities for the township to pursue. Among these are continued efforts to repair local roads, completion of East Park's restoration following an environmental cleanup and some updates for the township Web site.

"I'd like to see agendas and meeting minutes, a calendar of upcoming events and meetings, township history, and any other pertinent information available to all via the Web," she said. "Tell us what you want."

Welsheimer, 38, sees his roots in Resort — he's a lifelong resident — as an asset for serving the township, along with honesty, loyalty and his work and educational background.

Currently, Welsheimer works as a dealer at the Odawa Casino Resort. He previously has been employed as an office manager and movie theater supervisor, and has taken accounting classes at North Central Michigan College. Welsheimer also served as treasurer for the former Petoskey Area Jaycees.

Welsheimer believes Veurink has helped keep Resort in a good position as treasurer.

"We just want to keep moving forward," he added.

Completion of East Park's restoration is one priority Welsheimer sees for the township. He also would like to see Resort eventually pursue a larger township hall, noting that office needs have left limited space at the current one for public events.

Three run for two Cross Village seats

A trio of familiar locals are running for the two open positions on Cross Village's board of trustees.

Howard Wood, 68, said he is not running for another term as township clerk because of a recent medical condition. However, Wood, who is running with no party affiliation, contends that he still has a lot to offer the community and wants to be a part of the decision making process.

Wood

"By staying on the board I can be an asset to the community," he said.

Catherine Schlappi, a Democrat, and Stephen Keller, a Republican, currently hold the two seats and both are seeking re-election.

Keller

Keller, 42, said that no matter who voters choose, he believes the board will remain strong.

"I'm in the election because I like the work," he said. "But I think it will be a good board either way."

Schlappi could not be reached by press time.

Four running for two trustee seats in Friendship Township

Steve Zucker

439-3346 · szucker@petoskeynews.com

HARBOR SPRINGS - Four candidates will vie for two trustee seats on the Friendship Township board and only one of them is an incumbent.

Republican Al Major, 62, is about to complete his first four-year term on the board. He has been the co-owner of the Harbor Springs-based Al and Jim's Tree Service for the past 39 years and has lived in Friendship Township since 1964. In that time he has served for more than 30 years on the Readmond-Friendship-Cross Village Fire Department either as a firefighter or on the department's board.

Major said a desire to serve the residents of the township is what drove him to run for the trustee post four years ago.

He said he believes things are going well overall in the township and he is seeking re-election in hopes of continuing that trend. He agreed with other candidates that keeping an eye on development is important.

Marty MacGregor, 38, is running as an independent. He has lived in Friendship Township since 1989 and in the Harbor Springs area all his life.

He and his wife Becky own and operate MacGregor's Pet Pantry, a pet supply store in Harbor Springs and Paws and Claws, a pet boarding and grooming business north

Hatch Act leads to withdrawal in McKinley

Julie Witthoeft (231) 439-9355

jwitthoeft@petoskeynews.com

A late withdrawal has changed the election landscape in McKinley Township.

The ballot in McKinley township shows three candidates running for two trustees' seats. However, Republican incumbent Christopher Nathan recently withdrew because of a conflict of interest.

Nathan, 47, is a postmaster. Because he is a federal employee running for an elected office he is in violation of the Hatch Act.

"You've got someone who wants to serve and I'm restricted because of federal law. I was looking forward to fulfilling the term," Nathan said.

The federal Hatch Act restricts the political activity of employees of the executive branch of the federal government, employees of the District of Columbia government and some state and local employees who work in connection with federally funded programs.

All officers and employees subject to the Hatch Act are restricted from soliciting, accepting or receiving political campaign contributions, and they may not use their official authority to influence the result of an election.

These individuals, like Nathan, are also not allowed to run for elective office in a partisan election.

Nathan was appointed to the McKinley Township trustee's seat in April 2008 by supervisor, Leonard Readmond. The appointment is not a Hatch Act violation.

The two remaining in the race to fill the two open seats are Republican Michael Bohn and Patrick Ball, who claims no party affiliation.

Ball, 56, has served as trustee for 21 years.

He is a former mayor of the village of Pellston and currently serves on the 9-1-1 board as a representative of the Emmet County Townships Association as well as the Pellston zoning board of appeals. Professionally he is a truck driver for the Department of Corrections in Kinross.

"I try to watch out for tax dollars and spend them wisely. Roads I think are our biggest priority — getting them up to quality standards," Ball said.

Bohn did not return calls by press time.

Also running uncontested in McKinley Township are supervisor Leonard Readmond, clerk Roger Drier and treasurer Elizabeth Readmond.

Tax issue up in McKinley

Voters in McKinley will decide a four-year, .3 mill increase in the township's tax limitation for library services. If approved by voters it's expected to raise $9,776 in 2008. It will cost a homeowner $30 whose taxable value is $100,000.

Incumbent faces challenger in Readmond supervisor race

Julie Witthoeft (231) 439-9355
jwitthoeft@petoskeynews.com

The race for the Readmond Township supervisor's seat pits a seasoned incumbent against a newcomer to the political scene.

Call

Kruskie

Incumbent Diana Call, 57, has served as supervisor for eight years and said with how smoothly things are running she sees no need for change.

If reelected, Call, a Democrat, said she plans to keep a close eye on property taxes and work to maintain the township's rural character.

"The township is doing well financially. As times get harder we'll have to readjust our budget and goals to reflect the taxes. I'm concerned about the ability of our residents to pay their property taxes. Also, we did a survey several years ago and one of the biggest things people like about the township is its rural, natural character. We have to remain aware of that and try to preserve it as much as we can. My other concern is the future of our roads with state and county funding way down," Call said of her goals and concerns if reelected.

Her political experience also includes four years as Readmond Township clerk, and stints on both the township planning commission and board of review.

Call faces 71-year-old Republican, Gordon Kruskie.

Kruskie's past political experience includes a stint on the Readmond Township Planning Commission as well as some appointed committee work.

In seeking his first elected office Kruskie said his decades of experience in the automotive parts and equipment professional world, including 10 years as owner and operator of Harbor Springs Auto Parts and Industrial Supply, will be useful in township government.

His decision to run for supervisor came after he received calls from residents urging him to serve.

If elected he said there will be three key topics he'll pay attention to.

"There are road conditions people are concerned about with regard to whether they should pave or upgrade, there's the bridge on M-119 and the Readmond Township Park. Local people who are major users of the park are worried if it's upgraded it will be more for the general public than residents," Kruskie said.

Aside from his professional skills, Kruskie said he brings interpersonal skills to the table that will benefit his constituents.

"I believe by having been born and raised in the area I'm familiar with the traditions, the families of the local people and those with second homes in the area. I'm a good listener and a good organizer. It's just being able to communicate with people. So we'll see what plays out," he said.

Readmond Township clerk Molly Veling, treasurer Janet Hendricks and trustees Harriet Jackson and Les Arnold are all running unopposed to keep their seats.

Harbor to pick two for council

HARBOR SPRINGS — Voters in Harbor Springs will choose among three candidates vying for two city council seats on Nov. 4.

All three of the candidates have city council experience and all three said the ongoing search to find a replacement for retiring city manager Fred Geuder is an important issue on the council's near-term horizon.

Heinz

Hegedus

Michael Heinz, 63, is a current city council member who seeking his third two-year term.

Heinz is a Harbor Springs native who retired about seven years ago after working 30 years with the city's street department. He is married and has five adult sons and six grandchildren. In addition to serving on the Harbor Springs school board in the 1980s, Heinz has been very active in Little League baseball, youth football and served as a Scoutmaster. He also served with the U.S. Army in Vietnam.

Heinz said his desire to "do something for the community" is what motivates his desire to serve on the city council.

"I don't have any axes to grind with anyone," he said. "I go into every meeting with an open mind."

Heinz said one of his primary long-term concerns is to keep the cost of living in the city as low as possible.

Alan Hegedus, 38, is a current city council member who was appointed to the post in 2007 to complete the term left vacant when council member Jim Grogan died in January of 2007. He also serves on the city's zoning board of appeals.

Hegedus, who works an editor and advertising manager with Harbor Springs-base Concierge Publications, has been a city resident for about five years.

He has been actively involved in the Harbor Springs Food Pantry, Junior Achievement, Leadership Little Traverse and the Blissfest organization.

He said he's seeking election to the council because he wants to give back to the community.

Hegedus said the city's future source of electricity is a key issue that the council will face. He'd also like to see the council continue its efforts toward inter-governmental cooperation on topics such as recreation and broadband Internet access and to do whatever it can to help the business community.

Wiggins

Dennis Wiggins, 49, has served one two-year term on the council from 2005 to 2007. He was defeated when he ran for re-election.

Wiggins has been a city resident for about five and a half years. He is a self-employed business man who is currently spending much of his time working as a volunteer construction coordinator for the Holy Childhood of Jesus building project. He is married with two high school age children.

Wiggins said he's running for city council at the suggestion of others and because he believes his background in business could be an asset to the community.

"I don't see any big problems for the city right now. I just want to serve in any way I can," he said.

FRIENDSHIP FROM 13 of the city.

Major

MacGregor has not been elected to nor run for public office in the past, but has served on the Readmond-Friendship-Cross Village Fire Department for more than 10 years. He currently is one of the department's officers, holding the rank of lieutenant.

He and Becky have three sons ages 4, 7, and 12.

MacGregor said he is running for the trustee post with hopes of infusing "some younger blood on the board — Someone with a different outlook."

MacGregor said thinks the biggest issue facing the township is keeping growth in check.

MacGregor

"I don't want the township to lose its rural character," he said.

He said he also wants to try to get more people involved with township government.

"It's really important. Too many people sit back and complain and yet they never go to the (township) meetings," he said.

While Cynthia Donahey, 61, isn't technically an incumbent this time around, she did serve as a township trustee for five years from 1999 to 2004 when she was defeated in that year's election. She has also served on the planning commission for 10 years.

Donahey, who is also running as an independent, has lived in the township for 23 years and works as the administrative manager for the First Presbyterian Church in Harbor Springs.

Donahey

Donahey said she has made it a point to attend all of the township board meetings since she was defeated in the last election.

"I go to more meetings than anybody except the (township) clerk," she said. "I'm interested in what is going on in the township and I feel I have some skills and points of view that are not necessarily represented (on the board)."

Donahey said her main concerns are that the township government operate with transparency and does its best to keep the residents of the township informed.

She pointed to continuing and expanding the use of a township Web site as one tool in keeping residents informed. She also likes the idea of sending out occasional newsletters. She would like to see improved communication with surrounding townships. She wants the township to focus on improving its roads, improving Internet access, keeping its master plan updated and making upgrades to what she sees as an outdated township hall.

Republican Gary Abent, 74, has been a township resident since 1984. In 2000, he retired from running his business, Abent Pest Control. He ran for the township trustee post in the 2004 election, losing by seven votes.

Abent

Abent said he is running for the township board because he is interested in township government and that given the current makeup of the board, "there ought to be another Republican."

Abent said one of his main concerns is keeping taxes as low as possible. He said he's concerned about the added taxes from rising property values and believes the township might be able to lower taxes by not keeping large sums of money in reserves.

Boyne Valley Township clerk post

Steve Zucker
439-9346 - szucker@petoskeynews.com

BOYNE FALLS — Two newcomers to the political arena are vying for the post of township clerk in Boyne Valley Township.

The race will pit Democrat Judith Judkins, 64, against Republican Lynn Seelye-Sparks, 37, for a post that will be vacated by long-time clerk Nancy Dunham, who is not seeking reelection.

Judkins

Seelye-Sparks

While neither candidate has held an elected office before, both have been very active in the community over the years.

Judkins, who defeated fellow Democrat Debra Taylor by a 18-14 margin in the August primary, has served on the township's board of review since 1995 and its planning commission since 1993 and was appointed as its deputy clerk in August of 2007.

Judkins, who has lived in Charlevoix County since 1970 and in Boyne Valley Township since 1991, said the most important thing for the clerk to do is listen to people and keep things organized so people have access to the information they need.

She also is concerned about keeping an eye on growth in the township.

"Things are going to progress forward and I'm not against change, but we have to do it in a planned, organized and orderly fashion while keeping in mind what is best for the township," Judkins said.

Judkins, who said she has already had some training in some of the clerk's responsibilities through her role as deputy clerk, is active with many volunteer activities, especially as treasurer of her church.

Seelye-Sparks, who grew up in Boyne Valley Township and lived there for most of her 37 years, said she's also concerned about managing growth. "So we can do what's in the best interest of the whole community."

She said she's running for the township clerk's post because, "It's time for our generation to get involved in government."

While she said she is concerned about looking for ways to save taxpayers money, she said she'd also like to see progress on a proposed bicycle path between Boyne City and Boyne Falls.

She is a homemaker now, but holds a master of business administration from Central Michigan University and previously served as the Northern Michigan regional registrar at Davenport University. Seelye-Sparks said part of her responsibility in that position, which she left in 2005, was to help manage a $1 million budget. Seelye-Sparks is married to Stephen and has two children ages 8 and 5.

Seelye-Sparks said she also volunteers in many capacities in the community and school and previously served as the chairperson of the Polish Festival committee.

Peaine budget hangs on tax proposal renewal

Beaver Island's Peaine Township residents will be asked to vote on the renewal of an operational millage in the November general election. It was defeated in August.

The proposal will renew an property tax millage, which would allow the township to levy up to 4 mills to fund general operations.

According to the ballot, voters previously approved 4 mills to raise funds for the general operation of the township, which will expire in 2008. The Headlee Amendment previously reduced this millage to 3.4439 mills.

This proposal reauthorizes the full 4-mill levy, including .5561 mills previously rolled back by the Headlee Amendment.

The ballot reads: "Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be imposed on taxable property in the township of Peaine, county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan be increased by up to $4 per $1,000 of the taxable value on all taxable property in the township for five years, 2009 through 2013 inclusive, for the purpose of providing funds for the general operation of the township and shall the township of Peaine be authorized to levy such millage for the purpose?

If approved and levied in its entirety, it is estimated that the 4 mills would raise an estimated $278,280 for the township when first levied in 2009.

City council race one to watch

CHARLEVOIX — Two people are vying for the 3rd Ward seat on the Charlevoix City Council.

They are Shirley Gibson and Shane Cole. Both Gibson, a write-in candidate, and Cole are seeking the seat of longtime 3rd Ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain who opted not to run for reelection so he could spend more time with his family.

Cole

Gibson

Gibson, 61, served three terms on city council and chose not to run for reelection last cycle because, she said, she needed a break.

Of the biggest issue facing constituents, she said, "Finances are going to be a big issue. We have to watch our purse strings carefully."

Gibson said voters should choose her because, "In a democracy, no one should be running unopposed, and I miss it. I have six years of experience on city council and I want to be a part of that operation once again."

Cole, 46, is working on his fourth year on the Charlevoix City Planning Commission.

Of the biggest issue facing Charlevoix residents, he said, "Keeping people here; keeping work here; figuring out where the funding is coming from for schools and services and (economic growth).

He said voters should choose him because, "I know a lot of people here, so I hear a lot of things. I know what is in the heart of the constituents of the 3rd Ward and my goal is to go to bat for everybody there. We have to work together as a team on the council to keep a balance between ... keeping business here and not becoming a metropolitan area. I don't want to sit around and wait for another factory to close."

Peaine supervisor faces newcomer

Two people are vying for the seat of supervisor in Beaver Island's Peaine Township.

John Works Jr., 48, Republican, has spent 12 years as Peaine Township supervisor.

He said the most important issue facing the township is "to continue representing the people in Peaine with as little tax burden as possible."

John A. Gallagher, 72, Democrat, has no past political experience but is challenging Works for the position.

Of the most important issue facing the township, he said, "Road maintenance and ... dealing with state and county government in a more cooperative fashion to get some support and be able to understand what's available to Peaine Township, as well as St. James Township."

Millage requests

Bay Township

Bay Township is seeking a 1-mill levy for road improvements, a renewal , raising 131,000 the first year

Evangeline Township

Evangeline Township is seeking 2 mills for 4 years for road repair and construction, 2008-2011. It would raise $138,699 the first year.

Evangeline Township is also seeking .7 of a mill for fire protection for a four-year period, 2009-2012, raising $48,545 the first year.

Melrose Township

Melrose Township is seeking a 1-mill renewal, from 2008-2011, for road repair and improvements, raising $100,662 the first year.

Chandler/Hudson

Some voters in Chandler and Hudson townships will see a Vanderbilt Public Schools sinking fund millage request of 7.75 mill for four years, raising $71,000 the first year, for school building repair and construction.

Treasurer competition in Peaine

Peaine Township voters have two choices for treasurer.

Democrat Larry Kubic, 59, brings with him two years of experience as the township's deputy treasurer and two years on the planning commission.

He said voters should consider him for the seat because he understands the needs of the island.

"It is a special place with different concerns than that of the mainland. The shoreline and water are a high priority; that's what brings people here and we need to make sure we can handle all the needs they have," Kubic said.

While Jean Kingsley, a 60-year-old Republican, has no prior political experience, she said her plans for tax reduction on the island give her an edge over Kubic.

"A good portion of our population are second home (owners) here and they pay through the nose with the non-residential/non-homestead tax. "It's prohibiting people from buying second homes because the taxes are so high," Kingsley said.

Congressman Stupak seeks 5th term

Rep. Bart Stupak's fifth term as the congressional representative for the 1st District is being challenged by a pair of candidates, State Rep. Tom Casperson and Dan Grow.

Stupak

Casperson

Stupak, 56, listed the nation's economy and job creation as the top concerns for voters. He voted against the bailout and said that tough economic times are not going to let up anytime soon.

"While government can't create jobs, it has an aggressive role to play," said Stupak. "Although we have good projects coming in, the challenge is how do we keep that going. We're not going to get out of this (recession) in a hurry."

Casperson, 49, is attempting to make the jump to national office following six years in Lansing. Casperson, a Republican, stresses less government regulation and points to his first profession as a log hauler and his experience running a small business as his best qualifications for the job. Casperson does not agree that climate change is all man made and said a solution to the nation's rising cost in health care needs to come from a new approach by customers.

Grow

"When I challenged various departments at the state level, they would hide behind the federal government," he said.

Grow, 40, a lawyer in St. Joseph with roots in Grayling, is running as a Libertarian. Grow said the recent federal bailout was an unsettling reminder of how far the nation has gone away from the constitution. He said the bailout, along with many other government sponsored programs, should be repealed.

"Liberty is the freedom from government," said Grow.

SENATE FROM 10

agement and worked with a nonprofit association assisting young women and families dealing with unplanned pregnancies before he entered politics.

He's married and has five children.

Hoogendyk is wrapping up his sixth and final year in the Michigan House of Representatives, and is known as one of the Legislature's most socially and financially conservative members. He has proposed measures that would shorten the legislative session, cut lawmakers' pay, make English the state's official language and count only legal citizens when congressional seats are apportioned.

He hopes to tap into a political climate where campaigns promising a shake-up are trendy.

"It's not so much change — the word is 'reform,'" Hoogendyk said. "It's not just doing something different, it's doing something better. People are tired of the status quo."

Other candidates running for the Senate seat are Green Party candidate Harley Mikkelson of Caro, U.S. Taxpayers Party candidate Michael Nikitin of Brighton, Libertarian Party candidate Scotty Boman of Detroit and Natural Law Party candidate Doug Dern of Highland.

MCCAIN FROM 4

cious that McCain is not one of them," West said.

McCain talks boldly about what he could accomplish if voters put him to work at the Resolute Desk in the Oval Office.

Even in the face of the economic meltdown, he has continued to set high expectations

Strengthening Social Security? "Look, it's not that hard to fix Social Security. It's just tough decisions."

Finding Osama bin Laden? "I'll get him no matter what, and I know how to do it."

Financial chaos? "The point is we can fix our economy."

What about the triple challenges of health care, energy policy and entitlement reforms? "We can do them all at once."

In short, he says, "We need to change the way government does almost everything."

McCain's good friend Sen. Lindsey Graham, a South Carolina Republican, envisions McCain using the presidency in a big way.

"Man, would we do a lot if he got to be president," Graham says. "He would push Congress to do things it should've done 20 years ago."

This is how McCain framed his mission when he announced his candidacy on April 25, 2007, in Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

"I'm not running for president to be somebody, but to do something; to do the hard but necessary things, not the easy and needless things."

For all that bullish talk, though, McCain knows he will have to display a measure of pragmatism.

Three times in recent weeks, for example, he has supported legislation allowing thousands of pork-barrel projects to go forward, rather than oppose bills that contained other important features such as the $700 billion financial rescue package.

And although neither candidate wants to talk about it, the financial crisis surely will narrow the next president's possibilities.

"This financial crisis may just have pulled the rug out from under any meaningful honeymoon, when a president tries to identify his top priorities and exploit the honeymoon period," said Steven Smith, a political science professor at Washington University in St. Louis. Instead, Smith said, "A major part of the next president's first State of the Union address will be how we proceed after getting through the first stages of this crisis. ... There are going to be pretty massive restraints on new initiatives."

Even McCain's promises to cut government spending would be tougher to fulfill because of the economic mess, Smith said, because "it doesn't make a lot of sense economically, when we might be headed into a recession, to radically reduce the federal deficit."

McCain himself has acknowledged that the economy is not his strong suit, meaning he'd have to rely heavily on his staff and Cabinet.

McCain is more comfortable dealing with foreign policy than domestic affairs, and he'd have a freer hand there. The former Vietnam prisoner of war, and son and grandson of admirals, eagerly claims the credentials to serve as commander in chief. He refuses to set a timetable for withdrawing U.S. troops from Iraq, and pledges unspecified troop increases in Afghanistan.

For all his years in the public eye, the 72-year-old McCain, a four-term senator, has had little in the way of executive experience, making it harder to predict his governing style.

Calvin Mackenzie, a Colby College professor who has written a paper about predicting presidential performance, says McCain could be expected to take a strong stand on a few symbolic issues and willingly delegate other major policy matters.

Despite McCain's many campaign promises, says Mackenzie, "I can see a presidency like Eisenhower's, a sort of senior statesman capping his career as president without much of an agenda to do anything and not pushing very far on policy initiatives."

Mackenzie predicts McCain would be afflicted with the same malady as Richard Nixon, who savored foreign policy but was less interested in the budget and other domestic matters, a disease known as MEGO, short for My Eyes Glaze Over.

"I think we'd see a lot of that with McCain," he said.

One thing that can be predicted with confidence is McCain's unpredictability , — he's gone out of his way to do the unexpected.

"I can imagine McCain, on one issue or another, trying to come up with surprise agreements," says Smith. That could help McCain set the agenda in a way that makes it difficult for opponents to take it in a different direction.

McCain also can be sure to show at least flashes of his famous temper.

That can be used to dramatic effect, to underscore one's resolve. But it can also backfire.

"I think members of Congress won't like that style in the White House," said West. "That will make it more difficult for him to bargain and negotiate with members of Congress. I mean, they don't like getting yelled at."

And given McCain's advanced age, speculation would be strong from Day One about whether he'd seek re-election. That could portend an even more independent Senate, with lots of jockeying by potential presidential candidates for 2012.

Much has been made of McCain's selection of Sarah Palin as a running mate, and questions have been asked about her qualifications to serve as vice president.

Palin says she and McCain have identified three areas where she would take the lead: promoting energy independence, reform of government overall and working with families who have children with special needs. Those fit with Palin's background. As Alaska's governor, Palin has dealt with a variety of oil and gas issues, and has pushed for government reforms. She also has a six-month-old child, Trig, with Down Syndrome.

Smith envisions McCain working with Palin in a way that is akin to how the first President George H. W. Bush used Vice President Dan Quayle , — delegating broad responsibility in a few specific areas rather than relying on the vice president to serve as an all-purpose adviser in the style of vice presidents Dick Cheney or Al Gore.

That means McCain could end up leaning more heavily on his secretaries of State and Defense.

Charlevoix Rayder Cross Country Coach Ken Plude tells a crowd of parents and students during homecoming ceremony earlier this month about the accomplishments of Logan Smith (right), a special needs student who dedicated himsalf to earning his varsity lettar in cross country. Not only did smith drop numerous minutes off his best times, ha also workad to lose weight over the summer to stay competitiva.

Special runner

a testament to perseverance and caring community

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

His cognitive impairment may prevent him from realizing the totality of his achievement, but it did not stop him from reaching his goal.

Logan Smith earned his varsity letter in cross country this fall, despite having Klinefelter Syndrome which, according to the National Institute of Health, can include weak muscles, lack of coordination, weak bones, low energy, decreased social development and susceptibility to diseases like osteoporosis and auto-immune disorders.

"This has given him a sense of pride, and he just seems happier than before," said Shannon Smith, Logan's mother. "I can't imagine how frustrating is must be being aware that you're different than other kids, but not really able to do anything about it."

She added, "This has given him a sense of confidence."

Charlevoix High School cross country coach Ken Plude said Logan struggled in the beginning—sometimes finishing 15 minutes after the other teams had packed up and gone home.

"He was working so hard, the other boys really got excited and took him under their wing," Plude said. "This was one of the funnest things I've every done. He had some tough times, but to see him get this far— he took 27 minutes off his total times from his beginning time."

Now a senior, Logan began his running career at Charlevoix high running nearly 44 minutes per race which prevented him from running on the varsity team.

"We always complimented him on finishing and looked for ways to motivate him to do a little better," Shannon said. "And I said, 'maybe next time you can pass the runner ahead of you.' And he said 'why?'"

She added, "I told him it's a race; he didn't know. It's not like he has just a learning disability."

To gain the 40 points needed to receive one's varsity letter, runners must finish in the top five. Logan began passing the opposition's fifth man and, by sophomore year, he had 12 points.

"The team always waited for him and they supported him and treated him as a part of the team," Shannon said. "If he needs his shoes tied they tie his shoe and go on. They were a critical part of his achievements this year."

She added, "I'm glad we live in Charlevoix. You'll probably see Logan as a Rayder 'til he's 65; out there cheering for his team."

By the summer after junior year, Logan had dropped 20 pounds and improved his time to a personal best of 29:40

"He slowly chipped away and gained points and this year, every meet he was beating somebody's fifth runner," Plude said. "He went from freshman year, where he could lose his attention if a butterfly caught his eye and he would just stop, to running at a level where he could have run on some teams varsity's."

Charlevoix High School Principal Suzanne Klinger said Logan is a true Rayder at heart.

"He goes to all the ball games, dressed in team colors yelling and cheering for the home team," she said. "He is excited about anything he can do at our school."

Klinger added, "What is incredible is how much our student body supports him."

Logan's father Kyle Smith echoed Klinger's sentiment

"Sometimes it's easy to pick on the kid that's different, but that doesn't happen here," he said. "When they (cross country team) go to other communities, everybody sticks up and looks out for Logan. He's one of them."

When Plude honored Logan during the Oct. 17 Rayder homecoming assembly by announcing Logan had earned enough points to receive his varsity letter, the crowd went wild.

"They gave him a standing ovation," Klinger said.

Logan ended the season with 43 points—three more than required to make varsity.

Plude added, "He didn't want it given to him. He wanted to earn his letter, and he did."

Logan's parents said their runner will continue the sport he loves for recreation and they are also looking into the Special Olympics.

Volleyball: One streak ends, one extends

It took a little longer than they had hoped, and their long league winning streak came to an end, but in the end, the Charlevoix Rayders got the job done.

Tammy Potter had 39 kills Thursday as Charlevoix split a pair of Lake Michigan Conference volleyball matches with Boyne City and East Jordan

The Ramblers topped the Rayders, 25-23, 25-20, 25-18, in the opener, then Charlevoix rebounded to down East Jordan, 26-24, 25-15, 22-25, 25-23.

The win over East Jordan gave the Rayders the outright league championship as they improved to 12-1 in conference matches. But the loss to Boyne ended Charlevoix's streak of 39 consecutive Lake Michigan wins.

"I think we were overly ready and we played so tight," said Liz Grunch, who is in her eighth year as Charlevoix's coach. "Boyne played a great game, a very smart game. They just outplayed us tonight.

"Sometimes it's good to lose and see what we need to work on and we'll regroup and hopefully we'll see them in the district finals. I'm really proud of the girls.Tonight was a hard loss for us but we've accomplished a lot."

It is Charlevoix's third straight league championship and its fifth in the last six years

Boyne City was the last Lake Michigan Conference team to have beaten the Rayders in a regular-season match. That came in 2005.

"We went in there last night pretty relaxed with nothing to lose," Boyne coach Casie Parker said. "We worked hard all week on serve receive and serving after our loss to (Traverse City) St. Francis and it paid off. It is a shame that we had to lose those two games to St. Francis by two points each game — in basketball terms, that's overtime. We could be sharing the conference title with Charlevoix."

Shauna Spencley added 18 kills, 20 digs, three blocks and four aces for the Rayders, while Potter also had 19 digs, nine blocks and five aces.

Also for the Rayders, 33-11-13 overall, Taylor Storm finished with 42 digs, Lauren Mielke had 33 digs, six kills; and setter Jenna Way finished with 60 assists, 31 digs and six blocks.

Amber Kotalik had 14 kills, five blocks and 21 digs to lead the Ramblers, while Hannah Robinson had 11 digs, Rachel Stevens had 10 kills, Hannah Hausler finished with seven kills, Sam McLeod added five, and setter Lindsay Clemens had 35 assists.

Clemens, Stevens, Robinson and Kotalik each served at 100 percent as the Ramblers finished a season-best 96.7 percent from the back line.

"Lindsay Clemens made some good decisions on when to dump and who to set at what times," Parker said. "She had great sets to our outside hitters and they connected."

For East Jordan in the Charlevoix match, Meagan Germain had six kills, eght blocks and 10 digs; Marribeth Poindexter six kills, three blocks and 10 digs; and Melissa Skrocki 15 assists.

SPORTS reviewing the action

Charlevoix heads to Iron Mountain for playoff

ANDY SNEDDON
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS WRITER

The anticipation is not unlike that of little kids at Christmas.

Across the state, high school football teams gathered Sunday night to watch the Selection Sunday Show on FSN to find out who their next opponent would be, and where they would play, in the Michigan High School Athletic Association playoffs.

And now, it's official:

— Petoskey will play host to West Branch Ogemaw Heights in Division 3.

— Boyne City will entertain Calumet in Division 6.

— Charlevoix will go to Iron Mountain in Division 6.

— Central Lake-Ellsworth will go to Manistee Catholic Central in Division 8.

For the Northmen, who last made the playoffs in 2006, it's a rematch. They topped Ogemaw Heights, 21-20, at Curtis Field in the second game of the season.

That win helped propel Petoskey, 8-1, to its best season in a decade, the fourth playoff berth in school history, and a Big North Conference co-championship. The Falcons, who lost to Cheboygan, 14-7, on Friday, are 5-4. The game is slated for 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 1.

"I don't know if there's any advantage or disadvantage" to playing a team a second time, sixth-year Petoskey coach Kerry VanOrman said Sunday night. "Both teams know what each other does. I think it's even that way. I think if you're playing someone you don't know then there might be a lot more questions.

"It's going to make it a lot more interesting to see what adjustments are made, if any, and this and that."

The Northmen are the top seed in their four-team district by virtue of having the highest playoff point average. Escanaba, 5-4, plays at Bay City John Glenn, 7-2, in the other pre-district game. If the Northmen beat Ogemaw, the district championship game would be played in Petoskey on either Friday, Nov. 7, or Saturday, Nov. 8.

In the first meeting between the Northmen and Ogemaw, Petoskey broke a 14-14 tie by scoring with under five minutes remaining. Ogemaw scored with 3 minutes, 8 seconds remaining, but the Northmen stopped the Falcons on their two-point conversion try to preserve the victory.

That close loss could serve as a motivator for Ogemaw.

"Is there an advantage to that?" VanOrman said. "You would think so from just a human nature point of view. You get a chance to come back and beat a team. There can be that factor.

"From our point of view, we felt we could have played a better football game. it gives us a chance to prove we're a good football team."

Boyne, 8-1 and in the play offs for the eighth consecutive year and 11th time overall, could have a similar motivation when it squares off with Calumet, 7-2, 1 p.m. Saturday at Earl Brotherston Field. The Copper Kings ousted the Ramblers in a first-round playoff game last year, 34-7

"The kids were happy to see that they get another opportunity to play Calumet," said ninth-year Boyne coach Dave Hills. "I'm sure there's some extra motivation there. ... And playing at home is a nice accomplishment as well.

"It's nice to be rewarded that way. Nice ot have your work pay off for you. These kids have worked tremendously hard. That was a key goal, get in the playoffs and advance in the playoffs."

Charlevoix, 5-4, and Iron Mountain, 9-0, make up the other half of the district. Iron Mountain is seeded No. 1, Boyne No. 2.

Charlevoix is back in the playoffs after a one-year hiatus and for the fifth time in school history. The Rayders were 3-4 before closing the regular season with wins over Kalkaska and Harbor Springs. They eagerly watched the show on Sunday at coach Don Jess' house.

The Rayders are one of 19 5-4 teams statewide to make the postseason and it was a mystery as to whether they would even be in the playoffs until it was announced during the show

"Our kids were going crazy when they saw that come up on the screen," Jess said. "Our kids really kept the hope alive going into that last game against Harbor and got rewarded for it.

"This group, they've come a long way. They didn't have a lot of success at the younger levels. It's a big accomplishement for them and it shows their determination and not getting frustrated. They just kept getting better every year."

Charlevoix's reward? A 250-mile one-way trip across the Upper Peninsula to Iron Mountain, which is ranked second in the Associated Press Division 6 state poll, and making its eighth consecutive playoff appearance and the 19th in school history. The teams will tangle at 7 p.m. Friday

"Obviously they're the favorite," Jess said. "It's a great opportunity for our kids."

Central Lake-Ellsworth, 8-1 and the Ski Valley Conference co-champions, will play at Manistee Catholic Central, 9-0, to open the postseason in a district that looks, on paper, very strong. The winner will play either Frankfort, 8-1, or Marion, 7-2, for the district championship. Frankfort is the top seed, while Manistee Catholic is seeded second. The Trojans and Manistee Catholic play at 7 p.m. Friday.

It is the fourth straight playoff berth for the Trojans, and their ninth in school history. They have won back-to-back district titles, but this year the district in which they are placed comprises strictly Lower Peninsula schools. In the past two years, the teams in their district have been primarily located in the U.P.

Other Northern Michigan schools to make the 256-team field, and their first-round opponents and sites.

— Division 1: Traverse City West, 6-3, at Rockford, 8-1.

— Division 2: Traverse City Central, 5-4, at Bay City Western, 8-1.

— Division 4: Kingsford, 6-3, at Cheboygan, 8-1.

— Division 5: Elk Rapids, 7-2, at Gladstone, 7-2.

— Division 7: Mancelona, 6-3, at Manistique, 6-3; Whittemore-Prescott, 6-3, at Traverse City St. Francis, 8-1; Merrill, 6-3, at Fife Lake Forest Area, 7-2.

— Division 8: Bark River-Harris, 6-2, at St. Ignace, 7-2; Gaylord St. Mary, 7-2, at Cedarville, 9-0.

JV volleyball Rayders third

Charlevoix defeated Gaylord, 21-17, 21-12, in the consolation match Saturday to place third in the Gaylord Invitational.

Katie Mays led the Rayders with 12 kills, 15 digs, six assists and six blocks, while Kelsey Way had 10 kills and six digs, Kelly Greyerbiehl added 20 digs, and Allison Hankins had seven blocks.

Prep football roundup:

Rayders win big

Charlevoix 33, Harbor Springs 6

Interceptions were the order of the day, as the Rayders picked off six Harbor passes to win their regular-season finale. The Rayders, 5-4 overall, 4-3 Lake Michigan, open the playoffs next week at Iron Mountain, 9-0.

Brock Yenglin had four interceptions, and Jon Putman two for the Rayders, while Michael Heckendorn ran for two touchdowns. Putman, Clayton Mitchell and Corey Loncks also ran for scores.

Kyle Halfacer scored for Harbor Springs, 2-7, 1-6.

"We had a much better season than last year," said second-year Harbor coach Jud Silveus, whose team finished 0-9 last year. "To finish like this is still disappointing, but we're headed in the rght direction."

Division III Cross Country Regional

Saturday, Oct. 25 at Benzie Central Area teams: Boyne City, Charlevoix.

The host team, Benzie Central, is the favorite in both races. The Huskies' girls' team is ranked No. 1 in the state in Division III, and their boys' team is No. 6.

In just the past week, Benzie, led by Thomas Smeltzer and William Patterson on the boys' side and Devyn Ramsey, Michaela Carnegie and Taylor Nye on the girls' side, have swept the Elk Rapids and Gaylord invitationals. Ramsey was the 2006 Division III state champion and the 2007 runner-up. Elk Rapids' girls' team is ranked No. 9 in the state and had the top two individuals at the Lake Michigan Conference meet in Amanda Hammer and Laura Bailey. Boyne City's Joslyn Moore could be an individual qualifier.

Benzie Central and Elk Rapids were the state qualifiers for the boys from this regional last year. Charlevoix wasn't too far off Elk Rapids at their league meet. The Rayders' Alex Buday is looking to make his second-straight state finals appearance.

Michigan employers play critical role in child support collection

What do Michigan's big three automobile manufacturers, major grocery store chains and UPS all have in common?

Many Michigan employers, large and small, are partnering with the state of Michigan to help Michigan's children by collecting child support from their employees through the income withholding process. These partnerships play a critical role in the collection and distribution of child support, as nearly 80 percent of all child support collected through employer withholding.

Gov. Jennifer M. Granholm recently proclaimed October as Child Support Month to recognize the importance of parents meeting their child support responsibilities in strengthening families and providing critical financial support to children.

"The commitment from these employers helps children receive the money their custodial parents need to pay for housing, food and clothing," said Marilyn Stephen, director of the Department of Human Services' Office of Child Support. "During Child Support Month, it's important to recognize that employers play a critical role in keeping children and families out of poverty."

From Michigan's three automobile manufacturers with combined 33,000 child support payments per month, to the small employer who sends in one or two payments a month, Michigan's employers share DHS' commitment to ensuring that the state's children get the child support due them. Many employers submit the payments electronically, a process that reduces errors, shortens the processing time and cuts costs for employers. Once the payment is received, it often can be disbursed to the custodial parent within 24 hours through direct deposit to a client's bank account or to a debit card.

Michigan's child support central collection and disbursement unit, the Michigan State Disbursement Unit (MiSDU), is a federally mandated entity, established by the 1996 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act. In 1999, Michigan legislation authorized the MiSDU, which is managed by the DHS Office of Child Support, to receive and disburse child support payments. The MiSDU works in partnership with the county Friend of the Court offices and county prosecuting attorneys.

The MiSDU processed $1.44 billion in collections in the fiscal year ending September 2007, an average of more than $120 million per month. The customer call center, housed at the MiSDU, averages more then 26,000 calls each month from child support clients, employers and friend of the court offices.

Michigan's child support program is considered one of the most efficient in the country. For every $1 spent on program operations, more than $6 in support is collected and distributed. The national average for all states is less than $5 for every $1 in program costs.

destroy an embryo," he said. "I have seen ... the children that have been born from the use of these embryos. Let's adopt them. Let's send these cells out to people who can actually use them instead of throwing them away."

Both Saltonstall and Dean support Proposal 1, the measure to legalize medical marijuana.

Elsenheimer said there might someday be room for lawful use of medical marijuana, but he said the current measure "has the real potential ... to provide additional drugs out on the street."

Elsenheimer cited the abuse of prescription drugs like Oxycontin and methadone, and said, "If we can't control Schedule IV narcotics, then what makes us think we can control medical marijuana."

Saltonstall said one in three people will get cancer, and added that medical marijuana has been proven beneficial for nausea and appetite suppression and other conditions.

"I'm surprised that Rep. Elsenheimer doesn't have the confidence in people to control their own lives," she said. "It is already legal in some other states. Certainly it needs to be controlled ...but to deprive people of this because you're afraid that it could get out of control, that could be said of so many other things."

Dean added that the "slippery slope" argument made by Elsenheimer was fallacious.

"I don't think it's the government's place to tell us what we can or can't put in our bodies," Dean said. "We prosecute people for actions taken against others, not for actions taken against ourselves."

The candidates generally agreed that renewable energy should be researched and utilized, but Dean and Elsenheimer were eager to cite the need to use contemporary sources like oil, coal and natural gas in the meantime.

Audience questions included whether the state should provide health services in lieu of dubious federal intervention.

"We've put much of the onus of health care on business," Saltonstall said, recounting a story by Congressman Bart Stupak who said Canadian workers won a large contract to work on the Soo Locks because their national health care allowed them to undercut American businesses.

"I would prefer this be done on a national level. We already do it, it just starts at 65," she said. "And I'm not saying everybody gets everything. I'm saying we offer basic health care so someone can go to the doctor and get a prescription instead of ending up in the emergency room."

Dean said he pays cash for his health services and prefers that it remain that way.

"If we can reduce the cost of the undeserved or uninsured population, that also will reduce the overall cost of health care," Elsenheimer said, noting the importance of bipartisan efforts to offer limited health services to the indigent, which some of his colleagues are currently working on. "There is a role for state government. I will oppose any effort to create an overall system of state run health care."

Another attendee asked the candidates their thoughts on another nuclear power plant being built to replace the dismantled Big Rock power plant.

Dean and Elsenheimer cited new technology which makes nuclear power safer and more efficient and both would support such a plant; Saltonstall pondered the fact that there is no disposal facility for the current spent nuclear fuel residing in Hayes Township and thusly would not support a new facility.

The election is Tuesday, Nov. 4.

BUSINESS

The e-log is a type of siding which is shaped like a log cut in half, the outer structure is actual wood from a local manufacturer; the inner portion is a series of hardboard, insulation and durable plastic.

"They contacted us and said they needed the product down there by the week of Sept. 10," Way said. "Me and two guys and we picked up my daughter from Cornerstone University in Grand Rapids and the four of us went down. We began installing the product Thursday night at midnight and worked 24 hours straight until about 1:30 Saturday morning. Then we went back for about eight hours Saturday and went back for the reveal on Sunday."

He added, "It was amazing: They had 3,000 volunteers. It was like a bunch of ants; there were people everywhere. They tore the house down Tuesday, and by Thursday we were doing interior work on the walls. It was an amazing process."

Way's company donated between $8,000 and $10,000 worth of material to the operation.

"Everything is donated for those houses. Nobody is paid for anything, so it is quite a process," Way said. "It's one of those things that goes along with our mission. We really want to be able to help people who have the dream of having a log home and just can't afford it."

Aside from the economical advantage to using e-logs on an already erected structure, Way said the e-log is superior to other sidings due to its high insulation rating.

"The whole experience of being a part of this show and helping people was neat," Way said. "It was pretty impressive how everyone worked together. There was not a cross word. If you needed to borrow something, everybody said 'no problem.'"

The episode in which Way worked will air at 8 p.m., Nov. 16 on ABC.

For more information on the e-log, visit www.e-logsiding.com or call (231) 758-3400.

LAY-OFFS

Both the company's cement plants in St. Marys and Bowmanville, Ontario, are experiencing lay-offs similar to Charlevoix, and the corporation is ceasing operations at its plant in Dixon, Ill.

Gallagher said this is the first major lay-off their company has experienced in 20 years.

"This is not a decision that was made lightly. It's an unfortunate situation and hopefully it will be short-term," he said. "We anticipate in one month we will be in the position where our product will be in demand, so we'll be up and running again."

BREAST CANCER AWARENESS

Editor:

As most people know, October is Breast Cancer awareness month. What many do not know is that October is also Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month. Unfortunately, there is no cure to be found. But those of us who have endured the loss through miscarriage, ectopic pregnancy, or early infant death do share something as those experienced with breast cancer patients, and that is that we are all survivors. At the end of June I gave birth to a beautiful son, Dekar. At about 30 weeks into the pregnancy he was diagnosed with Trisomy 18 and hypoplastic left heart syndrome. We were informed at that time that he could die in utero at any time or, if he did make it to a live birth, he would not be expected to live long. So while we prayed for a miracle we also planned for a funeral. On June 27, Dekar was born alive and he blessed us with his presence for just over eight hours. We were fortunate that Dekar was not only able to say "hello", but he also had his family surrounding him as he said "good-bye."

To everybody else, it seems that life goes on. That is the hardest part for me, personally. My arms are empty, but my hands are busy. There are still the regular, daily needs that have to be attended to.

Since my hands are busy it appears that life is continuing on as normal. But it's not. When Dekar took his last breath, he also took part of me with him. A person simply isn't the same after they've held a lifetime in their arms. Life may go on, but it will never be the same.

When a parent loses a child at such an early age, it is hard to know what to say or do. Nobody can feel or understand the pain any more than they can see the wind blow. The pain we feel and the emptiness that has been left in our hearts is real and we are always aware of it. But, we survive.

The Web site www.October15th.com is geared toward awareness, support, and education of pregnancy and infancy loss.

Another organization which supports grieving parents is Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep. Through this group, an affiliated volunteer photographer shares time and talent and provides the parents with remembrance photography of their baby who left the earth too soon. Volunteer photographers are needed is this community. For more information about joining their network of photographers, visit the Photographer's Page at www.NILMDTS.org.
